Strikers Ignore Back-to-job Law

TORONTO (CP) — Metropolitan Toronto's transit strike fell into rush-hour chaos today in a climaxing day of school opening, rain and the third day of a strike trying to set up public transit.

Provincial police said the Don Valley Parkway, an express route into downtown Toronto from the northeast boroughs of Metro, was totally blocked by 8:30 a.m., and advised commuters reaching the area by Highway 401 to take another route to the core.

The Queen Elizabeth Way from the west was stop-and-go, and southbound traffic on Highway 400 leading into the northern part of Metro was blocked solid by bumper-to-bumper jackknifed transport trailer trucks in the region.

Meanwhile, members of the Amalgamated Transit Union — after ignoring back-to-work legislation passed by the Ontario legislature Friday — were voting today on whether to return to the job Wednesday.

An address by Premier William Davis Monday to get them back to work today failed.

Meetings between Labor Minister John MacBeth with officials of the TTC and the union also failed.

After they were over, Mr. MacBeth told reporters he and Metropolitan Toronto Chairman Paul Godfrey "could do little more than express our regrets about the situation."

He would not say what he discussed with Leonard Moynihan, Local 113 president, and two other union representatives.

Mr. Moynihan emerged from the 30-minute session with the minister to say that today's secret ballot of the union membership would proceed in the TTC's division centres.

The men will also sign up for their work assignments while the balloting proceeds, he said.

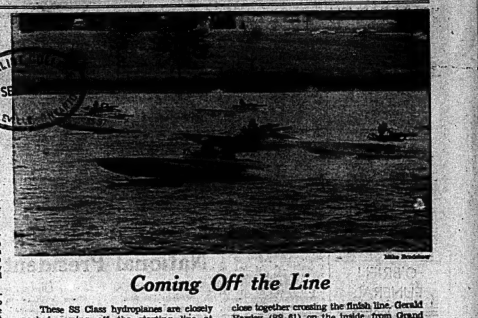
Mr. Moynihan said the results of the ballot, which will decide whether the 5,700 striking workers will go back to the TTC and Grey Coach Lines jobs by midnight tonight, should be known by about 7:30 p.m. EDT.

Mr. MacBeth said as far as he is concerned, the union's vote is "an illegal procedure."

The TTC was also planning to meet today to decide if legal action should be taken.

Union members have defied since Saturday the Ontario government's back-to-work legislation, Bill 118, which ordered them to return to work immediately and submit the compensation and union differences to arbitration.

The Labor Relations Act provides for fines of up to $1,000 a day against individual employees and up to $10,000 a day against a union that defies the back-to-work legislation.



However, Mr. MacBeth said it was not up to the government to have penalties imposed against the union for not complying with the law.

The government has taken its action," he said, "it's now up to either party (the TTC or the union) to take up the case further and see the law is upheld."

Mr. Davis issued a statement saying the legislature provided by law a procedure that would safeguard the rights of employees and the TTC in the dispute and provide that essential transit service would be resumed.

"It is a matter of great concern to this government when those whose interests have been protected . . . take it upon themselves to disregard the law at the expense of the general public," he said.

He asked Mr. MacBeth to ensure that a panel of the Ontario Labor Relations Board be made "promptly available" so that any prosecution of the lawbreakers could be quickly expedited to the courts.

Release of U.S. Funds Sought

Increased Pollution of Lakes Perhaps Halted Says Commission

WASHINGTON (CP) — The International Joint Commission (IJC) said today that the increasing rate of degradation of lakes Erie and Ontario "may have been halted and called for increased funds and manpower to assess the situation thoroughly.

The report, which said $9 billion in funds appropriated for water quality improvement but impounded by the Nixon administration should be "released immediately" to allow for accelerated and coordination measures flowing from the U.S. part of the Great Lakes basin.

The IJC is the joint Canada-U.S. advisory body on border problems.

In his wide-ranging second annual report on Great Lakes water quality, the IJC confirmed earlier reports from other sources that while the U.S. will technically fulfill its agreement with Canada for a joint cleanup, the U.S. will be about three years behind Canada in completing the construction of treatment facilities.

The two countries "under a 1972 agreement, set Dec. 31, 1975, as the deadline for each to have its Great Lakes anti-pollution program completed "or in the process of implementation. Canada has said her facilities will be built by that time.

The report, which goes to both federal governments and to the governments of the provinces and states along the Great Lakes, is expected to be the main point of discussion in Ottawa during the IJC's semi-annual meeting Sept. 30 to Oct. 4.

The commission admits that its assessment of the condition of lakes Erie and Ontario is based on "incomplete analysis of available data" and recommends that "the necessary financial and personnel resources be made available without delay "to evaluate adequately the large amount of water quality data now being collected."

The report covers the areas of municipal waste-water treatment, phosphorus pollution, viruses, hazardous materials, fish contamination, water levels and pollution from land-use activities.

The commission concludes that programs in both countries have resulted in "substantial reduction in phosphorus loadings to the lower Great Lakes" and recommends that the U.S. government "seek legislation similar to Canadian law which limits the amount of phosphorus in detergents."

It recommends that the two governments place greater emphasis on research "concerning the epidemiological hazards of waterborne viruses associated with man's activities."

"As a general corollary, viruses are present in the environment at levels infective to man and therefore constitute a hazard," the report states.

Citing the "potential epidemiological hazard to population," it urges that the Great Lakes basin "from the discharge of waste from vessels—foreign and otherwise—the IJC recommends that both federal governments consult "at an early date" to review quarantine regulations and procedures.

"More than sufficient time has elapsed for the development and adoption of compatible regulations to control the discharge of vessel wastes in the Great Lakes."

No Love or Food For Idle Husbands

DERBY, England (Reuter) — The leader of a housewives' association which claims 20,000 members said Monday that if labor union leaders start striking and worsen an already bad economic situation, her group will order a ban on love-making, home-cleaning and cooking.

Sandra Brookes, chairman of the National Housewives' Association, said "that if their husbands go on strike her members are prepared to withdraw such services as love-making, cooking and dressmaking.

Mrs. Brookes, 38, has called Trades Union Congress General Secretary Len Murray telling him of the association's plans. She has received no reply.

Speaking at her home in this mid-England town, Mrs. Brookes added: "It's about time the women of this country started to stand up against these bloody-minded men and help curb excessive wage demands this winter."

Mrs. Brookes's husband will not suffer from any action by the housewives; he is retired.

Workers Seen Driven to Strike By Inflation

TORONTO (CP) — Joseph Morris, president of the Canadian Labor Congress (CLC), said Monday that economic instability by inflation will drive workers to strike regardless of contracts.

Mr. Morris, addressing a Labor Day director's luncheon at the Canadian National Exhibition, said wildcat strikes would mark the breakdown of the collective-bargaining system.

He said it is disgraceful that the share of national income currently going to profits is the highest since 1951, while real gains made by workers in 1971 and 1972 have been wiped out by inflation.

"The present trend ensures that a better life will rest forever beyond the grasp of the majority of Canadians," he said.

Mr. Morris spoke of "unprecedented industrial strife, as workers try desperately to keep pace with the inflationary spiral."

Workers are being driven by a sense of desperation "for they have families to feed and mortgage payments to meet," he said.

Spy Jet Crosses Ocean in 2 Hours,

FARNBOROUGH, England (AP) — A United States Air Force spy jet has flown across the Atlantic in less than two hours, more than twice as fast as any previous crossing.

The Lockheed SR-71 flew from New York to the south coast of England, a distance of 3,490 miles, in one hour 55 minutes and 42 seconds Sunday. Flying as high as 15 miles, it averaged 1,817 miles an hour, a spokesman said.

The plane, known as the Blackbird, flew over the runway at the Farnborough International Air Show 20 miles southwest of London, raced on to Aramic airport in the Netherlands, wheeled sharply and flew back to Farnborough.

"One slight miscalculation and we would have made it a New York Paris record," one of the two crew members, Maj. Jim Widdifield, told President Ford when the president telephoned to congratulate him and Maj. Jim Sullivan on their "magnificent achievement."

Ford said: "I'm sure you all were asking the Federation Aeronautique Internationale, which accredits all aviation records, to certify the Blackbird's time as the New York-to-London record.

The fastest previous crossing of the Atlantic was three hours nine minutes from Britain to Paris, flown last June by the Concorde, the Anglo-French supersonic airliner. The previous New York-to-London record was four hours 56 minutes, set five years ago by a Royal Navy Phantom fighter.

The most-popular reasons advanced for the homicide rate — auto assembly-line pressure, poverty, and narcotics—are belied by some experts.

Dr. Wilt says Detroit, with a white-black ratio of about 50-50, differs little from U.S. cities with lower murder rates. She cites dope in New York, factories in Pittsburgh and poverty everywhere.

Dr. Emanuel Panay, a psychiatrist who has studied violent death, says the answer is "simple and obvious: Guns."

"In England, if you get mad at someone you choke them with your hands. The aggressor may lose his temper, but he regains it before he kills his victim."

Dr. Panay said gun-buying increased sharply following the 1967 riot here in which 43 died. He feels there is an upward spiral which is unstoppable without gun control.

"The more murders, the more guns are bought," said Dr. Panay. "The more guns around, the more homicides."

Dick Gayer, a social worker at Detroit General Hospital, says guns are a status symbol.

"It's very big in certain subcultural groups to have your own, 'rescue.' You're ready for anything and you shoot from the hip."

Police say they have no exact figures, but estimate the number of guns in Detroit alone at between 500,000 and a million.

The Smile of a Winner

Joanne Tammel, 18, of Picton, has good cause for that big wide smile. She's just been chosen Miss Gold Cup during weekend speedboat racing trials at Picton. Performing ritual crowning is Gregoria de la Parra, Mexican Boating Federation vice-president.

In Detroit You Can Get Shot Just Because Your Feet Stink

DETROIT (AP) — Charley Mathis took off his shoes last week and was shot to death when a friend didn't like the smell of his feet.

It went down on police records as a fatal "shooting prompted by "allegedly offensive feet."

Joe Peoples, 64, tried to stop a man stabbing a mongrel dog on an inner-city sidewalk.

"Shut up old man, or I'll kill you," the stranger said. An hour later Peoples was dead, knifed in the back.

These two cases were among 316 homicides committed in Detroit thus far in 1974, 27 more than last year's record pace, police said. There were 751 killings in 1973, an all-time record in this city of 1.5 million that has come to be known as the United States murder capital.

Slayings involving out-of-towners have been rare, and convention officials say business is up.

U. Wayne State University study co-sponsored by the city reveals the typical killer differs little from his victim.

The report, covering about 500 murders in 1972, shows:

More than 75 per cent of murderers were male; two-school dersers were male; two-thirds of the slayings followed a quarrel with a relative or aquaintance; 63 per cent of the murders were committed with guns, often the inexpensive Saturday Night Specials; most of those involved on both sides of the gun were black males, with half of them single and 40 per cent unemployed.

"But these conditions are not unique to Detroit," said Dr. Marie Wilt, who made the study. "You find them all over the country. The problems are socio-economic."

REAL ESTATE:
BUNGALOW OR TWO-STOREY?
The two basic structures of single family homes are the bungalow and the two-storey home. They both have their pro's and con's and the ultimate decision normally rests with the individual's style of living and needs.
A bungalow is appealing since living is all on one floor and there are no steps to climb. However, a bungalow has disadvantages as well. A one-storey home has less living space on its lot and it has greater foundation cost per square foot of interior living space.
You can get the same interior also on half the amount of foundation in a two-storey home. Construction cost per square foot is reduced in a two-storey house. Despite this cost-saving factor, the trend has been toward one-storey homes and to the compromise, the split level.

Window Smashed

Police report Monday a 40-square-foot plate glass window was smashed at Reid's Dairy Monday morning. Unknown vandals fired a pellet rifle at it.

Cost for the window was estimated by police at approximately $100.

City Police Chief Douglas Crosbie said the discharge of pellet rifles is illegal on use fired on the owner's property.

Four Die in Quinte-Area Mishaps During Weekend

The summer holiday season ended on a sombre note as four lives were lost in Quinte district traffic mishaps during the Labor Day weekend.

Scene of all the fatal accidents was the Belleville-Brighton stretch of Highway 401.

The grimmest incident occurred in heavy traffic near the Wooler Rd. overpass, about three miles from Trenton as the long weekend closed. A man and his wife died and seven others were injured Monday in a three-vehicle smash that ground holiday traffic to a halt on the expressway.

Killed were Vahram Gumlikian, 48, of Ottawa and his wife, Lucy 43.

Others killed on the Quinte stretch of Highway 401 during the weekend:

— Walter John Hanna, 15, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Hanna, 94 Jackson Ave., Belleville, killed while walking across the highway north of the city, early Sunday.

— Jennifer Lai Freeman, 17, Brampton, killed when the car she was driving went out of control and rolled on Highway 401, just west of Highway 30, north of Brighton.

The fatal incident involving the Ottawa couple occurred about 3 p.m. when their eastbound car suddenly veered across the median and was in collision with a pickup camper driven by Allan Banks, 21, of Keswick.

Police said a car behind the truck then hit the rear of the vehicle.

Mr. Banks sustained cuts. Also injured in the camper were Mrs. Joan Ryan, 31, Aurora, her son, David, 5, and Theresa McLean, 31, Sunderland, Ont., all with fractures and cuts.

Thurlow fire department emergency workers had to free the McLean woman from the wreckage.

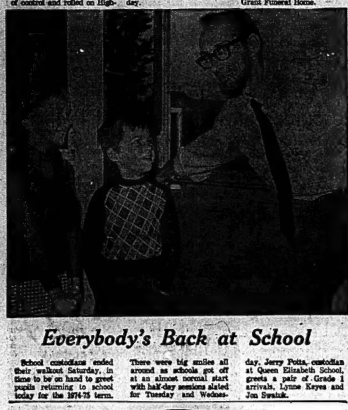
Injured in the third vehicle were Steven Salt, 32, with cuts and bruises, his sons, Martin, 5, with fractures, and Jeffrey, 7, with cuts and bruises.

Damage in the crash was estimated at $5,000.

The fatal mishap that took the life of the Hanna youth occurred about 2.15 a.m. Sunday.

Provincial police said he and a companion, 18-year-old Brian Dressen, 28 Gilbert St., were crossing Highway 401 near the Moira River bridge, when the accident occurred. The Dressen youth was walking ahead of Hanna when he was hit by a car driven by Lee Black, 19, of Ottawa.

Black, returning home from Toronto was in the passing lane at the time of the mishap. Police said his car ended in the median with several hundreds of dollars in damage.

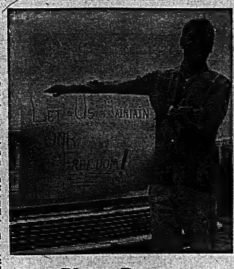


The Hanna youth was killed instantly.

Born in Cold Lake, Alta., he was entering Grade 10 at Centennial Secondary School and was active in sports.

He had lived most of his life on the Rockcrest-ville Rd. at RR 1 Belleville and had attended Kente public school. The Hanna family moved into Belleville about a year ago.

Besides his parents, he also leaves a sister, Catherine Mary.



Funeral service will be held Wednesday at 1 p.m. at the Grant Funeral Home.

Everybody's Back at School

School custodians ended their walkout Saturday, in time to be on hand to greet pupils returning to school today for the 1974-75 term.

There were big smiles all around as schools got off at an almost normal start with half-day sessions slated for Tuesday and Wednesday, Jerry Potts, custodian at Queen Elizabeth School, greets a pair of Grade 1 arrivals, Lynne Keyes and Jon Swaluk.

Plant Protest

Councillor Cleil Maracle, Quinte Mohawk councillor was among group staging a protest demonstration outside new shoe plant which opened today on Tyendinaga reserve. The councillors has been spokesman for a group opposed to business corporation which runs the plant.

Opposition to Park Begins

Cottagers on Papineau Lake will stress economic criticism of the Ontario government in their fight against development of a provincial park in their area.

The Papineau Lake Cottage Association's executive met Saturday with a lawyer to discuss Natural Resources Minister Leo Bernier's decision to proceed with the controversial project.

In a ruling last week, Mr. Bernier said he is permitting development of a 600-acre park on the lake, in northeast Hastings County.

The main criticism of the plan by of the cottagers, says their spokesman, is that the government will have to engage in costly expropriation while it has an alternative site on a nearby lake.

The province may "have to spend up to $1 million" expropriating property for the development, Harold Carruthers, of Belleville, said Monday night.

Meanwhile, the provincial government holds much Crown Land on Bark Lake, about 10 miles north of Papineau and across the Hastings County line, said Mr. Carruthers.

Mr. Carruthers said the cottagers have not been able to discover why the development apparently had to be located in Wicklow-Dungve-McClure Township in Hastings. Earlier this year township council voted 3-2 that the ministry seek an alternative site while Hastings County council approved the scheme 16-1.

Access to the Bark Lake site could gained from a nearby highway between Maynooth and Wabtory, he said.

Lawyer consulted by the group is David Rorn, member of a Belleville legal firm, said Mr. Carruthers.

Industry Draws Protests

TYENDINAGA — Dissenting Quinte Mohawks staged a passive protest here today as this reserve's first full-scale manufacturing industry began production.

The demonstration was small and peaceful. With the weather raw and wet, the protesters remained in four cars parked outside the shoe-parts plant of Tyendinaga Mohawk Ltd.

The company, with three Mohawks as principles, will produce shoe uppers for sale to Bata Industries.

But, as a corporation it has become a focus for dissent by a group of Mohawks for whom Cleil Maracle, a member of the reserve's elected council, is spokesman.

The group is protesting the presence of the corporation — owned by Mohawks, — on the reserve which is governed by federal law under the Indian Act.

They fear the plant lays the reserve open to intrusion by other levels of government since a corporation is subject to provincial and municipal law.

Councillor Maracle was among the group parked outside the plant as workers reported on the job at 8 a.m.

The cars carried placards saying: "Corporate structure Spells Danger for our Reserve" and "Provincial Municipal Laws No."

Councillor Maracle said the demonstrators were all reserve residents, engaged in "just a peaceful demonstration protesting the opening of the corporation."

He said his group still is consulting with a lawyer on the possibilities of having the corporation moved off the reserve.

Inside the plant, Carl Brant, president of Tyendinaga Mohawk Ltd., said the industry will start work as planned, it employs 28.

Canada — And Beyond

The strike of west coast grain handlers is not the only area of economic concern in the country right now. Again, in British Columbia, there are reports of hard times in the lumber industry and of possible large-scale layoffs.

Ottawa may also find itself having to wake up from its long sleep where the native peoples are concerned. The story from the Indian chiefs and elders meeting at La Macaza in Quebec and in a New York Times article about the 'lot of the Eskimos' fit a familiar pattern of unemployment in Inuvik, is essentially the same. It tells of culture shock, alienation, rape of the land and fishing grounds by industry, and of alcoholism, crime and despair.

As the overall national level inflation remains a heavy burden on the country and on consumers but no concrete steps are being taken to curb it. Indeed in the heading in a Globe and Mail report the other day read: 'Keep spending, Ottawa's plan to ease inflation.'

Where all this will end nobody can predict, but it is in sharp contrast with reaction to the monetary crisis elsewhere. New Zealand for example appears to be the first of the more affluent countries to introduce controls. The government has ordered major cutbacks in public spending and people are being asked to work harder. Government pay increases are to be frozen and departments will be ordered to make savings and cut operational and travel costs by five per cent. In short, the kind of thing that has been tried and not rejected here.

In the United States there is a flurry of talk about combating inflation, but not much in the way of action. As Richard Reeds-man of the Globe and Mail puts it, "President Ford says the U.S. is 'fighting for its economic life.' Yeah, yeah — with an eight-hour day, a five-day week, half the work force going on strike, and a half million people collecting welfare in New York alone."

In Britain the economic forecasts are bleak and there is even talk of a Communist takeover by 1980 "if the country does not wake up."

In Canada we still have the illusion of prosperity, but it may be no more than a temporary euphoria, the days of wine and roses, and we are reminded of the observations of some Czech refugees in Toronto, who fear the freedom of this country but say it needs to be balanced with "a little strictness and discipline at home." As one said: "if something happened here like with what's going on in Czechoslovakia in 1968, I don't know how the kids would survive."

Or the adults for that matter.

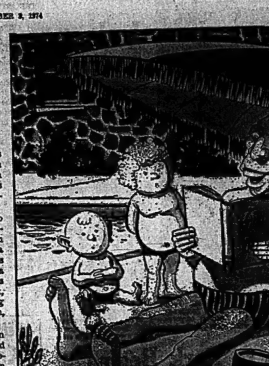
Envoy to Ghana

It looks as if Shirley Temple Black, the child movie actress turned diplomat, will encounter some heavy blasts of male chauvinism when she arrives in Accra to take up her new post as American ambassador to Ghana.

A 30-year-old airline pilot who asked that his name not be used called her appointment "an insult."

"Is that what America thinks of Ghana, a country with such a reputation in Africa? To think they send us a mere film star. It must be one of Mr. Nixon's last acts to reward those who stood by him in his disgrace."

This young man, whoever he is, might better stick to flying planes than to such high flights of political chicanery and male posturing, not to mention ignorance of Mrs. Black's background. Indeed her political experience is considerable; she has served in respected diplomatic posts for her work in the United Nations in connection with conservation and refugee and environmental programs.



Shirley Temple Black's film career is long since behind her, before even the birth of the petulant young male critic in Ghana. She is now 46, worldly-wise, and has three children, the eldest of whom is 26.

Ghana, which has little to crow about where its political evolution is concerned, might learn a thing or two from someone brought up in the free, democratic tradition which it almost lost under the late President Nkrumah.

And incidentally, the ambassador's appointment was announced after Gerald Ford became president.

Power-clique on Carpet

Conservatives' Leadership Woes Are Now Coming Home to Roost

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — It is going to be difficult this time for the party chooses its new leader, even the Conservatives in Parliament.

This time, they promise, they will shape the decision.

If they pull it off, the day of the Toronto-based clique-men will be done.

Not all of them subscribe to this power-to-the-parliamentarians proposition, for there is the odd Tory MP who, if not the creature of the Toronto party headquarters' organization, is an ally.

In the party's disastrous organizational past, the Toronto Tory powerbrokers have engineered the election of all but one of the leaders.

Only once have the Conservative representatives in Parliament seen the leader choose from their ranks in the Commons, in defiance of the wishes of the party bosses.

That was John Diefenbaker.

And from the vantage point of an observer who has watched every Conservative leadership convention since the days of John Bracken, it can be said that the party's headquarters' organization did not want him on or ever.

The Tory bosses fought him when they imported John Bracken, the former Manitoba Premier; opposed him again when they brought in Ontario Premier George Drew; and when finally they could not deny him the leadership he had sought since 1940, they destroyed him.

Then, of course, came former Nova Scotia Premier Stanfield, taking the leadership under the handicap of the sponsorship of Toronto clique.

He took over a party deeply divided by the headquarters' betrayal of Diefenbaker.

And it was this same tight little group of power brokers whose organizational stupidity in the last campaign engineered his defeat.

It all came out at the Conservative parliamentary post-election caucus.

Such Conservative campaign-ers as Tom Bell, Robert Coates and Walter Dinsdale had said it publicly — headquarters not only failed to help the campaign, not even acknowledge by phone, wire or mail their efforts, even terrified warnings that the increasingly pro-labor policy was sheer disaster.

The caucus storm has confirmed it, creaming campaign chairman Malcolm Wickson and Tom Bren, Ontario director of defeat, behind him in Toronto.

It was ironic that the confirmation of this has come from New Democratic Leader David Lewis, who, in defeat, has found sanctuary on the faculty of Ottawa's Carleton University.

Their prices and incomes control program not only defeated the Conservatives themselves, but doomed the NDP's, he reports.

The voters, says Mr. Lewis, were so frightened of the Tory wage and price policy they stampeded to the Liberals, ensuring Prime Minister Trudeau's majority.

Now Robert Stanfield, despite the Toronto headquarters of the Toronto bosses, is retiring.

And at long last, the Conservative caucus is united in the determination that the parliamentary wing — and not the backroom plunderers in Toronto — will have the ultimate decision on the leadership.

The caucus has always been ignored — even scorned — by the little band of men controlling the headquarters' organization.

The Toronto gang invariably hired and fired, through its control of delegates-at-large and ridings, individual members manipulated leadership conventions.

Not this time. Not with the caucus digging in. Not with the caucus having eight or more candidates of its own in the running for the leadership and two years in Parliament to demonstrate to the party at large its need to look no further than the House of Commons for The Man Who."

New Blood the Key to Trudeau's Experiment in Cabinet Shuffling

By DON O'HEARN

A short while ago Prime Minister Trudeau, already known for rather unorthodox politics, pulled off one of his more startling moves.

The prime minister shuffled his cabinet.

In the shuffle he let out four of his old members: Messrs. Gray, Stanbury, Haidiz and Dube.

There was nothing remarkable in this. It is normal in any cabinet change to see some new faces in and old ones out.

But Mr. Trudeau gave his shake quite an unusual twist when he indicated that his changes could be a cooling-off period rather than out-right firing.

In other words the cabinet ministers he was apparently demoting might simply want to spend a term in the backbenches and then be brought back into the ministry.

The evident point of this exercise apparently being to give everybody a break, giving new blood a chance and older blood a spell for geriatric therapy.

Actually the approach was not all that brand-new from Mr. Trudeau.

He had long ago said he was contemplating such a theory of cabinet movement. But in his first administration he was so busy building the national dream he didn't get around to it. And in his second administration, with minority government, he really couldn't afford to play around with potential bad feeling among his supporters and particularly his ministers.

Now, however, it seems he feels the time is ripe and he has launched an experiment which will certainly be watched by everybody across Canada with any strong interest in politics.

For this cooling-off approach, by whatever name, is whatever you want to call it is novel for Canada.

It has not been all that rare in the U.K. Winston Churchill, for example, was in and out of ministries, and political parties, all his life.

But in Canada, both in parliamentary and provincial parties, have pretty constantly followed the rule that once down you are out.

There have been exceptions. Mr. Trudeau himself has currently set one by bringing Jean Marchand back into his cabinet.

There have been , rare instances in B.C. where Phillip Gagliardi was brought back to the cabinet and in Ontario where Fred Cass was returned as Speaker after a spell in purgatory after resigning his portfolio as attorney-general.

But there have been the exceptions. For the most part we have followed the rule. And the Law of the Sea Conference

Canada Would Favor 400-mile Limit But Caracas Talks Inconclusive

By JOHN D. HARRISON
Foreign Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

The third Law of the Sea conference ended in Caracas, Venezuela, last week and which this column first mentioned back in March in June, has come to an inconclusive end.

What else could we all expect, in spite of the crucial issues affecting the future of our oceans and their resources, when about 150 countries of the world met in one place to thrash out so many complex issues.

The interests of those states relative to our world's oceans were also very different. Those of a sea-girt nation like Canada with its resource and fish catching natural resources we think we own, are clear to see.

One country, however, why countries with little or no sea coasts, like the landlocked Vatican City which is a sovereign state, were in attendance and to what extent they threw sand in the works.

Because the delegates determined it would be a "drafting conference" only preliminary were left over until everyone meets again next year in either Geneva or Caracas again. A chief problem was trying to reach any kind of agreement at all on what was meant by 'the economic zone' in which areas as the seabed lying between the territory of each coastal state and the high seas.

The idea of a 200-mile territorial zone now is accepted by us, undoubtedly — after seeing how well it has paid off for some rather more pugilistic Latin American fishing countries.

But we went further at Caracas to propose that the "economic zone" should extend to the outer edge of the shelf, a geographical position which could reach out as far as 600 miles. Canada faced severe opposition on this proposal.

At stake in our kind of thinking are the substantial seabed resources we know exist, to such an extent more of them may be in greater quantity (like minerals), than those in the earth.

Canada also wants the right to decide on the number of fish of various species to be caught in the economic zone, especially those anadromous, and detailed allocation of the remainder of fish harvests to other countries.

These substantial control proposals by mainly fishing or coastal states have not gone down well with major user states, the world's overall fishing countries like the U.S., USSR and Eastern European socialist republics who already harvest fish with impunity in the North Atlantic.

Third World countries with populations in rich areas argue for more protein, resented such proposals by rich countries like Canada who have private vessels in their area from distant food resources.

The world's major shipping powers didn't like the idea of pollution controls over an economic zone especially if it were to be 400 miles into the ocean. They feared the international right of passage on the high seas would then be in jeopardy.

One of Canada's major differences remains, after 16 weeks in Caracas, with the United States over the jurisdiction of Arctic waters. They are, according to the Canadian position, Canadian, waters as much as the Arctic islands are Canadian territory.

And as everyone has left for home, more or less convinced the next meeting of the "big legislative" one in which a world treaty will finally be signed. It has been the largest international congress in world history.

And apparently all of the 8,000 delegates are agreed on one conclusion: the Law of the Sea Caracas would be a great city to hold he next congress.

Resources and Government Policy

By VINCENT EGAN
Business and Consumer Affairs Columnist
Thomson News Service

The federal-provincial fight for the profits from natural-resources development could severely damage the oil, gas and mining industries.

That fight could be harmful, as well, to the long-term interests of the entire Canadian economy, says Dr. S. D. Bryson, senior tax partner in Price, Waterhouse and Co., chartered accountants.

In the current issue of The Canadian Tax Journal, Mr. Bryson contends:

The threatened taxation of the industry has been imposed "without any real attempt between the governments in-volved.

"Instead, the provinces and Ottawa have been thinking over one another in their anxiety to obtain an increased share of economic profits and control of resource develop-ment, each seeking governments pre-empt the situation."

Some of the legislation on taxation of natural resources has been "arbitrary and frankly inept," the tax specialist writes, and proposed marginal rates of taxation on new projects are "extraordinarily high."

Not many years ago, the shoe was on the other foot. Federal and provincial governments handed out financial incentives, grants, "tax holidays" and the like—to persuade these companies to invest in the Canadian north, in the mineral deposits in undeveloped areas of the country.

That's all changed, now that industry is in the business of a good return on its investment.

Mr. Bryson's current lamping on the ecology bandwagon, and proclaiming the need to "conserve" our resources, is good for some vague future time—forgetting that industry and development can only be carried on in an orderly, profitable, long-term program.

In its May 31 budget, the federal government moved to increase resource industries' tax rates. Watchwood and Irish, editorially through the disallowance of their tax deductions for provincial mining taxes and provincial royalties.

Not to be outdone, provincial governments from Ontario westward have also introduced substantial tax increases.

Some British Columbia mines will find their after-tax profits going down to 30% of selling prices go up. Ontario mines will find their taxes rise in 1974 alone from $13 million to $23 million (1973 @22-million vs. $12.5 million).

The typical Alberta oil producer will pay combined royalties and taxes of more than 50 per cent. In Saskatchewan, the rate is even higher. In both cases will pay royalties and taxes of up to 150 per cent of profit increases above the 1973 level.

Over-all tax rates on the oil and gas industry will "approach astronomic levels," Mr. Bryson says. Exploration and development activities will certainly be inhibited.

The whole concept of government laying claim to an unspecified share of the tax revenues from the industries, some co-ordination of federal and provincial tax policies and rationalization of tax objectives is needed, he says, or investment is inhibitive not only to the future growth of the nation in the present levels of production and employment is to be avoided."

Kissinger May Revisit Mid-East

By KEVIN DOYLE
The Canadian Press

Reports that U.S. Secretary of State Henry Kissinger will revisit the Middle East later this month have received a cautious welcome in both Cairo and Tel Aviv.

But it will take every ounce of Kissinger's renowned diplomatic skill to maintain the uneasy peace in the volatile region and prevent the start of another Arab-Israeli war which could embroil superpowers believe is becoming dangerously close.

Kissinger's main task will be to convince Egyptian President Anwar Sadat and Israeli Prime Minister Yitzak Rabin that President Ford is committed beyond doubt to maintaining the U.S. involvement in the search for a lasting peace settlement.

He will likely find a growing suspicion throughout the Middle East that the U.S. is more concerned with domestic problems that his predecessor, Richard Nixon, and far less anxious to maintain a vigorous presence abroad to cover up any failings at home.

Should this, in fact, turn out to be the case, one of the men who would suffer most during the October war, they might

Stirling Fair Sight Of Horse-drawing Event

Bob Dunford's 25-year-old match against two animals did not materialize at Stirling Fair during the weekend. Instead, he said kicked at his face by his partner, Dave Norwood.

Dunford of RR4, Stirling, says that Gerry McCullagh of Perth and Norwood of Frankford were competing in Drawing on Labour Day so did not show up on Saturday.

Murray Clifford of Norwood and his team reached 18 feet, six inches in two draws and on his third attempt went over the 20 foot mark for first place in the light class.

Dunford's light grey team attained 14 feet, 8 inches in three spirited tries to come in second spot. Pearl, one of Bob's horses, has been drawing for ten years.

Murray Clifford's horse Barney has been in business for eight years and Bert has been around for so long that "he is old enough to vote." Clifford won't admit to what age Bert is but admits to 12 years of country fair life.

In the spring of this year, Clifford led a team at the International Farm Machinery Show in Toronto and out of 34 teams vying for honours, he placed fourth. Teams from the US took the first, second and third positions.

Soil conditions play a vital role in horse draws. A week ago at the Con Hill Clifford's team lugged 7,800 pounds over the line but with the soft team at Stirling the big beasts could manage only 5,500 pounds.

Fireman At Seminar

TRENTON — Certificates will be presented to those volunteers who pass an examination at the end of the regional fire-training course which started here Monday.

The exercises, sponsored by the Ontario Fire Marshall's Office, began with Trenton's deputy fire chief, Henry Barr, extending a welcome to the 48 volunteers taking the course.

Deputy Chief Barr was acting for Fire Chief Cecil Ellis, who is in Winnipeg at the Canadian Fire Chief's convention.

Firefighters taking the course are mostly from Hastings and Prince Edward Counties. There are also two volunteers from the village of Bethany, north of Oshawa, and two from Lennox and Addington County.

Also at Monday's opening were George Hess, MP, Prince Edward-Hastings; Jack Ellis, MP, Hastings; James Taylor, MPP, Prince Edward-Lennox and Trenton councillor Peter DeGroot. Also present was Fire Chief Leo Culhane, coordinator of the Hastings-Prince Edward Mutual Aid Association.

The volunteers are required to learn the newest techniques in firefighting. After learning the theory in the classroom, they move outside to gain practical experience in firefighting demonstrations.

The course concludes Friday.

Fire Hits Dealership

TWEED — Fire Chief Ross McNaught estimates damage at $10,000 from a fire that broke out early Sunday evening at the rear of Trudeau Motors on Victoria St., here.

The blaze is believed to have started in an old gas bags truck parked beside the building.

Fourteen volunteers and two pumpers fought the fire for two hours before bringing it under control. Damage, mainly to roof beams, was confined to the older part of the car dealership's building.

Tools and equipment stored in cabinets were undamaged.

Tough Slugging

Strike Ends as Workers Accept New Agreement

Students returned to classes today — with school bells pealing for only a half-day in Hastings County.

Schools will also open a half-day Wednesday, returning to normal schedules Thursday.

The slow start to the new term will give the county's education system time to prepare classes following settlement of a contract dispute with custodian and maintenance workers.

The extra time is needed to get transportation schedules organized, cafeterias stocked and other supporting services effectively operating again, said Eric Runacres, school administrator.

Members of Local 1022, Canadian Union of Public Employees marked the 1974 Labor Day weekend by striking the strike.

Their new contract does not include a cost-of-living clause for which the workers had walked off their jobs Aug. 20. But it includes 22-cents-an-hour more over two years than had been previously proposed.

The new pay increases, retroactive to April are as follows:

From April 30 cents an hour with an additional 12 cents Oct. 1; From April, 1975, 42 cents an hour, with an additional 10 cents the following October.

Base rates under their old contract ranged from $2.65 to $3.80 an hour.

Chemical Disturbed During Breakin

A highly poisonous chemical was disturbed during a breakin at Belleville's Dusek Brothers Ltd. and police today said they fear for the safety of the vandals.

The chemical, phenylmeathiprine, a fungicide, was in a five-gallon can. Plant manager John Gee said the can was punctured and much of the chemical splashed on the floor.

"It's deadly poisonous," said Mr. Gee. "If it gets on the skin it will continue to burn through several layers.

"These kids that broke in (sometime over the weekend) might wake up this morning itching like crazy with large white blisters," he said.

"If the chemical splashed on them, they need attention right away," he said.

Police said they believe the vandalism was done by children. Damage was estimated at about $500.

Why $500 worth of stripes in front of your eyes beats $500 worth of spots.

The next time you turn on your colour TV, go up to the screen with the magnifying glass, and take a close look at what's really making up that colour picture you're looking at. Dots. Red, blue and green dots. If the dots are kind of blurry, they're coming at you through a white matrix.

And we can tell you right now that your set is at least 5 years old. Because the black matrix improvement has been around about that long. Colours against a black background. ground will always stand out much better than colours against a white background.

So maybe it's time for a new colour TV.

When you do decide to go shopping take the magnifying glass with you.

When the salesman turns a set on, go through the same procedure.

Examine the screen up close with the glass. The dots look much clearer now, because they're coming through a black matrix. Now stand back and look at the picture. You may be so impressed with the brilliance (as compared with what you've been seeing at home), that you'll start getting out your chequebook right then and there.

Drop in to any Toshiba dealer.

And don't forget the magnifying glass. Go right up to the screen with the glass, as soon as the salesman turns on the 14" screen C-335. While he's talking about 100% solid state dependability, plug-in modules for easy servicing, Automatic Fine Tuning and Automatic Balance Control, you study what's happened inside the colour. Black background for definition, you've seen that already. But, the dots aren't dots any longer. They're stripes of colour. And it doesn't take a lot of thought to realize there's more colour area in a stripe than in a dot.

It's these colour stripes against the black background that give you the most brilliant colour picture in the industry.

Now stand back and look. That's called Toshiba Blackstripe™ colour television. It's $500 worth of colour if ever you saw it. And for only $459.95 (suggested retail).

Quinte Cuisine

Lena Vanstein is a potter, newly settled in Tyendinaga township in an old stone house with her husband John and son Kolja. One of the things she enjoys most about country life is her garden, from which she feeds her family all year long. This particular vegetable stew is Mrs. Vanstein's version of the famous French dish, which is excellent at this season and equally good frozen for winter use.

Tyendinaga Ratatouille

two onions, chopped
two cloves garlic, peeled and sliced two large zucchini, or four small ones, sliced two large tomatoes or four small ones, sliced one eggplant, sliced and quartered (optional) one green pepper, sliced (optional)
one bayleaf
fresh or dried oregano, thyme and basil to taste freshly-ground black pepper salt
grated cheese

In a large, heavy pan, brown the chopped onions in cooking oil. Add the garlic as the onions are browning, and the bayleaf. Then add the zucchini and green pepper if you are using them. Then add the tomatoes, and let them all cook a little. Add the sliced zucchini. Sprinkle the mixture with the herbs and seasonings, and simmer until the vegetables are soft but not mushy.

Pour the ratatouille mixture into four oven-proof individual serving dishes. Cover with grated cheese. Place in a hot oven till the cheese bubbles, or under the broiler for two minutes. Serve hot with crusty bread.

Scientist Defends Middle-aged Women

Estelle Ramey - - - Scientist

WASHINGTON, D.C. — More and more mature women are coming "out of their cocoons," developing their own identity and purpose in life, said Dr. Estelle Ramey, professor of physiology and biochemistry at the Georgetown University School of Medicine here. Divorce is a healthy sign.

"It becomes much more acceptable when there are no children at all," says the 56-year-old scientist, who has always combined family life with a career. "Middle-aged women are now getting more ego support. Their children are proud of them. Other women are not reading them out of the clique."

In 1969, Dr. Ramey made headlines when she debated Dr. Edgar Berman, a physician who suggested that women were unfit to hold positions of authority because of their "raging hormonal influence." Since then, Dr. Ramey has been in great demand as a public speaker on women's place in society. She contends that not only do women cope well with monthly periods and menopause, but when it comes to survival, estrogen gives women the protoplasmic edge" over men.

"Physically middle-aged women are healthy. If they have menopausal problems, hormone therapy often helps." But Dr. Ramey worries that "emotionally, those women who stayed home and raised families and never developed any sense of self, are beginning to show stress and fear. We are seeing more mental illness in women, more women on tranquillizers and more female alcoholics. How terribly wasteful!"

Dr. Ramey complains for the day when husband and wife share home and job responsibilities. In her own case, she had housekeeper-assistance in running a home and raising her two children, a son who's a doctor and a daughter who's a lawyer. Husband, lawyer James T. Ramey, not only approved of her having a career, but "he threw me out and sent me to work!" she says, laughing.

Both met as students at Columbia University in New York where Dr. Ramey, a straight-A student with summa cum laude degree from Brooklyn College, was doing graduate work in chemistry. Although she was just a few credits short of a PhD when they married in 1941, she was prepared to give it all up to become a wife and mother. "That isn't good enough," he told her. "I don't live two lives for both of us."

They moved to Knoxville, Tennessee, where Jakes Ramey had a job with the TVA and Estelle Ramey applied for a teaching position with the University of Tennessee. The chairman of the chemistry department looked at my credentials, and said 'very nice, now go home and take care of your husband.' So I went home and got pregnant and then World War II started. The chairman called me back and said, 'Mrs. Ramey, it is your patriotic duty to teach!'. I spent the war years there."

Now a full professor at Georgetown University, author of two books and president of the Association of Women in Science, Estelle Ramey insists it was "good luck" that challenged her from other women and has done as well scientifically. She also credits her mother, who believed "I was a unique human being and there was nothing I couldn't accomplish" as well as her husband.

"I was fortunate to marry a man who had a strong sense of his own identity so he wasn't diminished by my success," reflects this professor.

Nestled in the hillsideness of her university office is a framed picture of her husband. It's signed: "To Estelle, my not-so-silent partner. With great admiration, James."

Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Hannah

Hannah — Holland

St. Thomas Anglican Church was the setting for the June 27 wedding of Lenna Christine Holland, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. V. Holland, and Ronald William Hannah, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Hannah.

Rev. P. M. Tett performed the ceremony.

Given in marriage by both parents, the bride wore a gown of sheer over taffeta with a high neckline, long sheer sleeves, a front and back bodice of Alencon lace and seed pearls, and a wide lace-trimmed flounce around the skirt hem. Her floor-length veil was caught by a crown-type head-piece of lace and seed pearls. She carried red roses and baby's breath.

The bride's sister, Jackie Shamnik was matron of honor in a sleeveless empire-waist gown of pale blue crepe touched with pink flowers and accented by a stand-up collar. She carried a bouquet of multi-colored mums and baby's breath that matched the bridesmaid's gown.

The bridesmaids were Heather Shamnik, the bride's sister, Barbara Hannah, the groom's sister, and Pat Allen, the bride's cousin. Dressed similarly to the matron of honor but in green, pink and yellow respectively, they carried similar bouquets as well.

Janice Shamnik, the bride's niece, served as flower girl in a gown touched by pink flowers with a full skirt and lace sleeves, carrying a basket of mums and baby's breath. Ring bearer was Jamie Hannah, the groom's nephew.

Acting as best man was Doug Shamnik and as ushers Ralph Shamnik, Roy Holland and the groom's brother Steven Hannah.

After a reception at the Oddfellow's Lodge, Mr. and Mrs. Hannah travelled to the Maritimes. They reside now in Belleville.

Ann Landers

Surefire Ways to Meet Your Second Mr. Right

Dear Ann: I hope you received some good suggestions for "Are There Any Decent Men Left?" She wanted to know where the divorcees and widows in your reading audience met their second husbands. You said you'd print the best letters.

Five girl friends plus myself are eagerly waiting. We've spent a small fortune eating hoodl- to restaurants where, successful — but impersonal — clubs, Church groups bored us silly. Finally, we were forced to go to cocktail lounges just to meet somebody to talk to.

Please, Ann, let's hear what those winners have to say.— Michigan Lasses

Dear Mich: Here are suggestions literally from Maine to Spain. Please note I'm not endorsing them; I'm merely printing them—as promised.

From Hollywood, Fla.: I met my second husband when I wrecked his car. I lived in the same block, bashed out of my driveway and the rear end of my Toyota rammed into the grillwork of his Lincoln Continental. It was best accident I ever had. He was so calm and understanding! I fell for him at once. We were married within four months.

From Seville, Spain: I'm writing this on my honeymoon

Successful Living

Recipe for Preserving Children

One grass-green field
One half-dozen children or more
Several dogs and puppies
One brook
Pebbles

METHOD — Into field, pour children and dogs, allowing to mix well. Pour brook over pebbles till slightly moist. When children are brown, cool in warm place. When dry, serve with milk and fresh baked gingerbread.

—From the scrapbook of Joan Buston, Derbyshire, England.

Dear Doris: A daughter is getting married in three months' time. My son is coming from a distant city to give her away.

As you know, the first dance is for the bride and groom, with the two attendants joining in a little later, and then the parents. So I wrote that since my son was doing the honors in place of his father (who died) I would like him to have the first dance with me. The photographer is to take a picture of the bride and groom and myself attended and parents dancing.

But my daughter-in-law writes to my daughter that my son doesn't like to be told how he'll have the first dance with and if I this mother) want the first dance I should ask (not tell) him.

I always thought that where the oldest son is doing the honors he would also sit with the bride's mother and have the first dance with her. And that he would do it graciously without being asked.

Am I right, Darling Hurt.

Dear Feeling: A typical in-law problem! Your son's young wife still doesn't feel very important to him and wants to be sure of an escort at the wedding.

The job when given his sister away does take an absent father's place throughout the proceedings. But obviously you will save your daughter-in-law's feelings by seating her at the parents' table at the reception, beside her husband.

After the bride and groom dance, the groom's father dances the bride's mother to the dance, and the bride's father dances with the groom's mother. Then the bride dances with her own father and then the groom's father and the groom dance with the bride's mother and his own.

Your next letter should suggest that you were trying to go by this tradition and had no intension of ordering your son around. It's your daughter's day and you don't want a family feud. Your son has a double duty; help him to keep his new, unpracticed wife in the family.

Confidential to Distracted Parent: In this stage, all you can do for your daughter is offer her love and moral support, and help her to develop greater self-confidence. She is an adult and must start finding her own way. Your first role is in the background to comfort and encourage.

(Leaflets mentioned by Doris are available to readers for 25 cents and a large, stamped, self-addressed envelope. If you have not received a leaflet requested, it may be that you have neglected to include the necessary eight-cent stamp. Write to Doris in care of this newspaper.)

New Look on Trent Locks

ORILLIA, Ont. (CP) — Any wolf whistles heard at Trent Valley locks this summer could be for the lock operators, nine women are working on the northern division of the Trent canal system this year, some as lockmasters.

"Students are hired during the summer months to assist the regular staff," said Hergerist Hall, of Orillia who is employed as a canalman at the Big Chute Marine Railway. "They can't even get Fall's for the second year in a row." Women were hired for first time in 1973.

She helps load boats onto the marine railway for toward passage into the canal system and does maintenance work such as cutting grass and cleaning toilets. Other students, lockmasters, do similar duties, but they do not receive as much help from tourists bringing their boats onto the railway.

"Sometimes the men rush to help me," said Margaret, who says some tourists about women's liberation. "I'll quickly become they don't trust me with their boats."

Margaret was offered the job through Canada Manpower. She was hoping to obtain a unique job involving outside work, good pay and good pay. She gets $3.50 an hour.

She also enjoys her hours of work. Her 40-hour week begins at 7 p.m. on Wednesday and ends at 8:15 p.m. Saturday.

During the winter, Margaret studies honors geography and her future may hold a teaching career.

Elaine Lillico, 19, of Canningston, a journalism student at Ryerson Polytechnical Institute in Toronto, spends 36 hours a week helping move boats through Lock 42 near Seven Bridge. Along with four male students, she helps move customers at 38 locks scattered through the locks.

Her duties include catching boats when they are coming into the locks, helping to open them up, giving instructions on rules for canal users, filling locks, and opening and shutting the lock gates.

She also admits that she receives a lot of looking, especially because of the fig on the blouse which says "canalman."

"Many people say something about women's lib but most of the women passing by seem pleased that women are employed here now," Elaine said.

Patricia White, also of Canningston, is a canalman at Lock 39 for the second year.

Marilyn Brentnell, who lives near Kirkfield and Clare Jamieson of Cobocook, work out of the box 1 office of the north-ern division at the Kirkfield lock.

Marilyn was employed as a canalman last summer and fills in for any canalmen who are away, does office work, and generally work around the locks.

Clare drives a van to all the lock stations delivering correspondence and supplies. She had the same duties last summer.

Clare's sister Teresa operates the hydraulic lift bridge at Lock 36, where Louise Palmer of Peterborough is lockmaster.

Ruthann Drury of Lindsay and Deborah Harmer of Canton also work at this lock as tour guides. Their job is to assist the public, give out information pamphlets and give talks on the operation of the hydraulic lift locks.

Assembly Rejects Women

REGINA (CP) — The Pentecostal Assemblies of Canada have rejected a move to ordain women.

At the 9th biennial general conference of the church during the weekend, the motion calling for the ordination of women was rejected by a vote of 149 to 143, to pass, the motion needed two-thirds under the constitution.

Leading the debate for the motion were Grace Brewster of Saskatoon, a Central Pentecostal college teacher.

Rev. Lyle Corbett of Rocky Mountain House, Alta., said he opposed the motion because "the role of a woman serving on the local church deacon board."

Other opponents of the motion included Rev. John Sh're of Waterloo, Ont., and Rev. Horace Castelon, assistant district superintendent for western Ontario of the Pentecostal Assemblies.

Those supporting the resolution included Rev. William Griffin, formerly of Saskatoon and now of the Eastern Pentecostal Bible College at Peterborough.

THE WAR GOES ON

ISTANBUL (AP) — When her mother persuaded Ismail Ardinc's wife to leave him, Ismail Ardinc distributed 1,000 handbills advertising the opening of a beauty salon in his wife's and his in-law's address. As visitors began to arrive, she complained to police, who arrested Ardinc on a charge of defamation of character.

Radio Operators End Strike

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Air and maritime radio operators in several Canadian cities today began ending a 24-hour partial withdrawal of service.

About 300 of Canada's 1,100 radio operators, demanding wage parity with air traffic controllers, refused from midnight Sunday night to transmit non-emergency messages.

Although spokesmen for the Union of Canadian Transport Employees said most workers were returning to normal duties, one official said some may not yet have started their withdrawal. The timing was being staggered.

The 61 radio operators at Gander, Nfld., were the first in Canada to return to normal service following a 24-hour interruption.

A spokesman at the airport there said the Gander situation was the most serious across Canada since the operation supplies weather reports for about 75 per cent of flights across the North Atlantic.

Students Face Scarce Housing

TORONTO (CP) — Some Ontario University and community college students likely will have to contend with a housing shortage when they start school next week.

An administrator at Seneca College, Toronto, said the student housing situation exceeds crisis proportions.

University of Guelph administrators considered—and rejected—a proposal to house students in railway cars.

And student associations there and at the University of Waterloo and Lakehead University, Thunder Bay, are proposing the erection of tent cities to draw attention to the situation.

Indians End Road Blockade

CACHE CREEK, B.C. (CP) — Armed Indians blocking Highway 12 north of this British Columbia interior community removed their barricade Monday, 10½ hours after the noon deadline agreed to the previous day.

The Indians, led by Bonaparte Chief Ken Basil, had blocked the road Saturday for the second time within a month to back their demands for better housing on their reserve.

School Raided

KITCHENER, Ont. (CP) — Two days before classes resume, administrative offices, two gyms, the cafeteria and a number of classrooms were wrecked at Forest Heights Collegiate in what police called "the worst vandalism ever" at a Kitchener school.

Canal Closed

ST. CATHARINES, Ont. (CP) — The Welland canal, blocked by the wreckage of a bridge that was toppled Aug. 25, will not reopen before Sept. 12, a spokesman for the St. Lawrence Seaway Authority said Saturday.

Children Killed

MATHESON, Ont. (CP) — Three children and their father were found shot to death Monday in what police believe was a murder-suicide.

Dead are Roland Michel Adams, 44, of nearby Hoskyns, and his children Natalie, 5½, Julian, 2, and Nicole, one.

Police said the man apparently turned the shotgun on himself after shooting his children.

Matheson is about 40 miles east of Timmins.

Accident

MONTREAL (CP) — Police said Monday they believe the shooting death Friday of Gilbert Chartrand, 28, in a downtown bar was accidental.

Witnesses told us Chartrand had given his gun to a friend who accidentally pulled the trigger," a police spokesman said.

Prices Rise

NEW YORK (AP) — Food prices in the United States continued their climb during August, rising to a level 14 per cent higher than a year earlier, an Associated Press market-basket survey shows.

STILL GOING UP -

The price of fed cattle has increased more than 30 per cent since February, 1972.

20 Turkish Cypriots Buried in Mass Grave

MARATHA, Cyprus (AP) — Troops dug the broken bodies of more than 20 Turkish-Cypriot men, women and children from a mass grave in a garbage dump outside this abandoned village Monday.

Survivors of the slaughter said that the victims were killed by gunmen from nearby Greek Cypriot villages, and that the death toll might be as high as 75.

It was the worst atrocity against civilians so far committed in the aftermath of the war in Cyprus where Greek-and Turkish-Cypriots have accused each other of countless killings and rapes.

The bodies were so battered and decomposed that they crumbled to pieces when soldiers lifted them from the garbage with shovels, and an accurate count of the dead was impossible.

"I have counted 2 skulls so far," said Chief Insp. Lars Hakansson, a Swedish United Nations officer who was at the graveside Sunday when the bodies were discovered, and again on Monday.

At least another half-dozen bodies were seen sticking grotesquely from the earth. At least two of them were of women holding the remains of babies in their arms.

Turkish soldiers with handkerchiefs covering their noses against the stench dug past the rusty tin cans of the garbage pit and unearthed body after body. A bulldozer rumbled across the rocky field outside the village to dig for more.

Two peasant women hugged each other and cried in anguish. UN officers watched silently as the earth-covered bodies, their clothing wrapped around them like mummies, were piled in a bier.

Ahmed Suleyman, a 19-year-old Turkish-Cypriot soldier, hit on his handkerchief, sobbed and said:

"My mother and my five sisters and my brother must be in there. They are all missing. My father is a prisoner. I came home from Famagusta yesterday and they told me my whole family was gone."

Hassan Nihat Mustafa, the 62-year-old imam, or religious leader of Maratha, said:

"There were 90 souls in the village. Six of us are alive. The Greeks took away 11 men as prisoners and we do not know what happened to them. All the rest may be in the grave.

"I hid with my wife and my son and daughter in the cellar. We covered ourselves with sacks and we stayed there for five days.

"I heard the Greeks say, 'Don't be afraid, we will take you to the Greek school and bring you home again.' Some of our children were laughing. They thought they were going for a walk.

"The Cyprus radio says the Turks are barbarous, but it is the Greeks who are barbarous."

The imam said he asked UN patrols for protection "days before the gunmen came. A UN officer on the scene said patrols had visited Maratha, but no one asked for help. We had checked the village and everything was all right."

Kemal Mustafa, 50, a grizzled shepherd who discovered the grave, said Greek-Cypriots came into the village Aug. 14, two days before the Turkish army captured the area. He said the killers came from the villages of Milea, Ptyi and Perintorna, all within sight of the mosque in the Turkish hamlet.

"I know them and I recognized their voices," he said. "One was the baker and another was the field watchman. They rounded up all the women and children and took them away. I hid in a ditch for two days and nights. I heard shooting."

Maratha is about 25 miles from Nicosia and 11 miles northwest of the port of Famagusta, captured by the Turks two days after the village massacre. About two miles away is the hamlet of Aloa, where the bodies of five Turkish-Cypriot men, women and children were found two weeks ago, murdered in a hay field.

A Greek-Cypriot government statement broadcast by Cyprus radio did not deny the Maratha massacre, but noted that hundreds of Greek-Cypriots were missing from the same region and their fate was unknown.

The statement claimed that an article from the body of a woman in the grave showed she was Greek, not Turkish.

The statement said the unidentified article is in government hands, but did not explain how it was obtained. Greek-Cypriots are not allowed within miles of Maratha which is one doned off by the Turkish army.

Federal Inaction Assailed

WINNIPEG (CP) — Tension between Indians and whites in Kenora, Ont., is expected to ease somewhat Tuesday, but Peter Kelly, president of the Grand Council of Treaty 3 chiefs, says federal government inaction could lead to further problems.

Mr. Kelly said Saturday night the department of Indian affairs "abdicated its responsibility" during the six-week armed occupation of Anicinabe Park by a group of Indians calling itself the Ojibwa Warrior Society. The park is to be re-opened to the public Tuesday.

Despite the departure of most members of the warrior society and the re-opening of the park, Mr. Kelly said a segment of the Indian population is "still very uneasy."

"The tension again will mount and as the tension in the Indian community mounts, it will be felt by Kenora residents. So there's going to be problems living in the town."

This continuing tension can be "directly attributed to the inaction of Indian affairs."

The council president said area chiefs who make up the council fear that financing of new projects in the area as a result of the occupation will be "at the expense of existing services to Indian people."

In a written statement, Grand Council said the federal government representative in the Kenora area refused to answer questions about the possibility of diversion of funds, even after consulting Ottawa.

Logger Killed

KAPUSKASING, Ont. (CP) — Antonin Belanger, 53, a logger killed their weekend, he said. Fraser Pulp and Paper Co., was killed Friday when a tree he had earlier attempted to cut down toppled on him.

Police said Belanger cut the base of the tree but it remained upright in the thick forest and he went on to cut another tree. A strong gust of wind blew he first tree down on him.

Plumptre Blames Board For High Egg Prices

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadians eggs and it's largely because of mum marketing agencies, says have been paying too much for federal and provincial govern- Beryl Plumptre, chairman of the food prices review board.

Speaking on the CTV television network program Question Period, taped Friday for broadcast Sunday, Mrs. Plumptre said provincial marketing boards are not enforcing federal agency quotas and "so they've got to settle this 'furis dictions' dispute."

"We're not criticizing the producers. We're not criticizing the marketing boards themselves, but we are criticizing the actual structure and the actual policy behind that."

She said that in January the prices review board drew the government's attention to what was happening in the egg market. "In no uncertain terms it recommended establishment of a commission of producers, processers, consumers and government officials to review the structure of the marketing boards.

The federal Canadian Egg Marketing Agency (CEMA) last week reported it had destroyed nine million eggs that had gone bad while sitting in storage facilities.

Mrs. Plumptre said the outlook on food prices was "very gloomy." Earlier optimism that prices might ease was dashed by a drought in the midwest that hit corn crops. "The one crop that does lend to fix the price for other feed grains."

Sugar prices would remain high because of unsettled world markets and average crops, she said.

Although bread prices now are going up in some areas, "the bakery industry acted very responsibly in reply to our criticisms."

"Now let me tell you that they've had labor negotiations, they've had considerable increases in their wages, sugar prices going into bread as well as in all other bakery products, the increase in packaging has gone on and, you know, you've got to be sensible."

British Bank Reports Heavy Exchange Losses

LONDON (AP) — International pressures for tighter controls on foreign exchange dealings by major banks will likely increase following the disclosure by Lloyds Bank of London that it lost as much as $78.3 million in currency transactions in Switzerland, financial commentators said today.

Lloyds, one of Britain's big four clearing banks, announced the loss on the manager of its branch in Lugano, Switzerland, and his subordinate in charge of foreign-currency dealings.

The bank, which has no connection with the famed insurance syndicate of the same name, said an accountant, not the boss did not threaten its solvency. It said tax offsets and insurance may reduce the loss to $39.2 million, only about half the amount of the foreign-currency losses that forced the collapse of the Herstatt Bank in West Germany earlier and left creditors $22 million less in the red.

Lloyds said the international foreign exchanges operations like a vast gambling casino with none of the central bank authorities able to impose the proper control over what is going on," one business commentator said.

However, U.S., West German and Swiss banking authorities have recently been calling for more detailed accounting of foreign-exchange dealings by banks operating in their countries.

The Western central bankers hold one of their regular meetings in Zurich this weekend, and they are expected to discuss controls. Some central bankers have argued that a return to a system of fixed exchange rates is the only answer to dangerous speculation by banks.

Catalytic Converters Emit Sulphuric Acid

RALEIGH, N.C. (CP) — Studies have confirmed that the catalytic converters on many 1975 automobiles will cause an air pollution problem of their own, says Environmental Protection Agency official said Monday.

The converters will be standard equipment on about 70 per cent of the 1975 cars in the United States in order to meet federal air pollution standards.

Jason Morris, director of the EPA's $3.5 million study of auto emission problems, said the study confirmed that the converters will produce emissions of sulphuric acid.

Morris and his colleagues have found the converter-equipped cars give off exhausts of sulphuric acid, perhaps in a fine mist from the exhaust systems, while cars without converters give off no sulphuric acid, Morris said in an interview.

Liberal Victory Pares Opposition Research

OTTAWA (CP) — Much of the New Democratic Party's attack on the so-called corporate rip-off thrice the last two general election campaigns was bankrolled by the Canadian taxpayers.

David Lewis based his frequent skirmishes with the corporate interests largely on federal research into the business activities of more than 100 companies operating in Canada.

Mr. Lewis, like other political critics of Parliament Hill, relied heavily on the labors of government-paid researchers for the ammunition that he took into the Commons or onto the election trail.

Now the opposition parties face the unhappy prospect of losing part or all of their research power. The July 8 election that gave back a Commons majority to the Liberals also gave opposition claims to government research grants.

Under a formula adopted in 1972 the four political parties received research funds based on $40,000 for the first 20 seats in the House of Commons, $2,000 for each additional MP in caucuses with 20 to 40 members and $1,500 additional for each member for caucuses of more than 40 MPs.

Returned Deserter Advises Caution

VANCOUVER (CP) — Ronald Anderson says he hopes other military fugitives in Canada will learn something from his experience and be cautious in visiting the United States.

The 31-year-old U.S. army deserter was captured by American authorities Aug. 24, as he, his wife Marion and her 11-year-old son attempted to enter the U.S. to visit his mother.

"I hope others in my position will take it as a lesson and be cautious," said Mr. Anderson.

He was asked in a weekend telephone interview whether he had any advice for someone attempting to outwit American authorities:

"I don't know whether I'm in any position to counsel anyone," he said chuckling about his unsuccessful sprint at the border.

He spent a relaxing day at home Saturday, visiting with his father who had come from the U.S. to be with him.

"Now I'm going to just sit back and resume what I call elder my day-to-day life," he said.

After crossing back into Canada Friday night, he said he received no brutal treatment during his confinement.

But the first order of business at the Fort Lewis military stockade near Tacoma, Wash., was the shearing of his beard and hair.

"I didn't care to lose some of my character and ideality, but they give you a choice: either you shave or they do it for you. I let them do it."

Mr. Anderson said he was a celebrity among the 150 other prisoners, almost all charged with being absent without leave.

"Guys would come up to me and say, hey, did you hear about the dude that got busted up at the border.

"Although there were no news media, television, newspapers or magazines, they still pick up a little feedback from the outside."

He said the confinement was "extremely boring."

"I'm not a lot of time for deep thought. "You don't know what's going to happen to you. It's a real bummer."

Mr. Anderson says he was conscripted into the army in 1967 after his student deferment was revoked. After six weeks at boot camp he ran away, but was caught after 10 months and sentenced to six months in the Fort Lewis stockade. In 1968 he escaped and came to Vancouver.

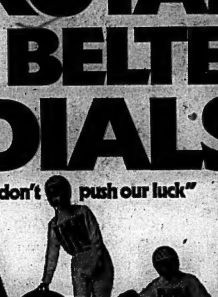
He was granted landed immigrant status in September of 1969. He has been working as a carpenter foreman at the site of a senior citizens' housing project and makes his home in Mission, B.C., about 40 miles east of here.

It was Thursday that Canadian officials confirmed allegations by witnesses that Mr. Anderson had been pursued across the border and caught in Canada. The Canadian department of external affairs then issued a formal request for Mr. Anderson's release.

Elated but composed Friday, Mr. Anderson told his latest of a dozen visits to the U.S. since his escape in 1968 will be his last until the U.S. government declares unconditional amnesty for draft evaders. And he'll "never return to the U.S. to live."

Mounties' Secrecy Questioned

MONTREAL (CP) — A lawyer for two former members of the RCMP said Saturday he will ask the Federal Court of Canada early this week to decide on the constitutionality of a law that would keep documents from a federal judge.



The invoking of the Federal Court Act followed an application by lawyer Jean-Guy Cardinal to give former staff sergeant Donald McLeary and former sergeant Gilles Brunet the right to hear reasons why they were dismissed from the RCMP late last year.

The attorney for the RCMP urged a motion by the court to quash the application and on Aug. 3, three Federal Court justices ruled unanimously that all pertinent documents and evidence should be brought before the court to show why the two men were discharged."

He said he received a copy of an affidavit from Postmaster-General Bryce Mackasey, the acting solicitor-general, which said some documents could not be produced because they would harm international relations and national security.

Mr. Campeau said "this is the same type of tactic used unsuccessfully by Richard Nixon during the Watergate scandal.

B.C. NDP Convention Pits Party Against Government

KAMLOOPS, B.C. (CP) — British Columbia's New Democratic Party ended its four-day convention Monday after the traditional blood-letting and now it remains to be seen if some sore issue can cover the wound.

The party's executive produced a report highly critical of the government for not following party lines in some of its legislation. It also complained that the membership was not consulted before legislation was introduced.

This and a lack of communication with the party membership dominated the convention.

"The problem is not going to go away," said Vancouver delegate Mike Lebowski. "The voters may, however."

Health Minister Dennis Cocke said the report, which was rejected by the convention by a vote of 302 to 202 was "highly inflammatory in most areas."

The executive has almost dedicated themselves to holding the government accountable to them."

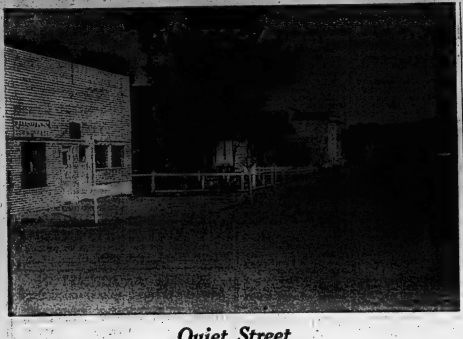
The report said party membership is stagnating and in order to strengthen the party "the members must feel they have a significant role to play in framing, implementing and defending the party policy and the legislation introduced by the government on the basis of that policy."

Premier Dave Barrett told the final session many people "want to support us and we must give them a reason to support us."

But some resolutions that were hangovers from last year were again endorsed this year although the government says it has no plans to act upon them.

These included an emotional resolution to establish a department of women's rights, another to establish a department of the environment and a third to get deeper into industrial democracy by putting labor representatives on the boards of Crown corporations.

Labor delegates took the government to task Monday for abandoning party principles and legislating an end to a firefighters' strike this summer in four New Mainland municipalities.



"Either people have the right to strike or they don't have the right to strike, and by God they should be given the right to strike all the way down the line," said George Johnston, president of the British Columbia Federation of Labor.

Federation secretary Len Guy said "if any other government had brought compulsion down on the labor movement there would have been hell to pay."

Labor Minister Bill King said he did not welcome the confrontation but back-to-work legislation was necessary because there was a need to provide for protection of life and safety as the firemen had given no guarantee of providing emergency services.

Quiet Street

A single car moves down the dusty main street of Willow Bunch, Sask., a community of 388 that faces continued population losses. It has been hard hit by the move of rural people to the major cities and out of the province. (CP Photo)

Not Even Higher Priced Wheat Revives Dying Prairie Town

WILLOW BUNCH, Sask. (CP) — Not even $5 wheat could keep the projector running in the Palace Theatre.

For the residents of this valley town in southern Saskatchewan, last winter's closing of the theatre was hardly remarkable: just a small addition to the long list of businesses that have vanished with a dwindling population.

The tidy, well-maintained wooden houses spotted along the dirt streets haven't been joined by a new home since 1971.

It seems longer to the three councillors sitting talking in the small town office—until someone looks at the records, the consensus is that five years have gone by since the last building.

When the railway station agent goes in delayed recognition of the fact that only grain cars roll over the tracks now, there will be one less house needed. When the elderly dry cleaner retires, there will be one less business.

The benefits of soaring farm income seem to have bypassed the town.

"We have only one machinery agency and he can't get machines," said Coun. Francis Therrien, agent at one of the four grain elevators that form one of the main reasons for the fact Willow Bunch exists at all.

Larry Eger, Esso station operator and another councillor, agreed that the farmers' new wealth isn't really helping the town: "I don't think that makes that much difference because they go to Weyburn or Estevan to buy anyway."

"People never seem to be happy shopping at home," Mr. Therrien added, prompting Mr. Eger to reflect on the effect of modern highways: "Miles don't mean too much anymore."

However, there are factors other than increased mobility.

Gord Greene, a third councillor, electrician and the man who operated the Palace Theatre's projector for 29 years, said the fate of the theatre was sealed with the spread of color TV.

He wondered whether he was wise to remain in the town instead of moving to a larger centre.

"I was invited to Assiniboia 25 years ago. Maybe I made a mistake not going."

By not going, he was left out of the process of centralization of businesses and consolidation of population that have benefited a few centres at the expense of smaller communities.

The young people, however, show little hesitation in leaving and their elders don't blame them.

"There's nothing for them here," said Mr. Eger. "There's no jobs."

Last spring there was an unusually-large high-school graduation class—16, including some from neighboring communities. Few if any will stay.

"They get their education, they're gone," Mr. Eger said.

Those that remain in the town are the elderly—of the 388 residents, 116 are over 60. Five years ago, there were 527 townspeople.

One government action that could help, Mr. Therrien said, is a restriction on the size of farms.

When a farmer expands his dealings to include land which previously supported another seven families, he said, that takes away another business in town since on the average seven families are needed to support one business.

Some large farms, he said, have replaced 10 to 15 families.

Mr. Therrien also contended that the large farms are inefficient since with the shortage of experienced help the farmers cannot operate properly.

"If you're farming alongside those guys, you're just feeding their hoppers and worms."

The large farmers often miss substantial amounts of grain by harvesting too fast, he added.

Both he and Mr. Eger said there are young people interested in farming—particularly at current prices—but there are few ways they can begin.

"There's no way a young guy can start by himself," said Mr. Eger. Even with available land, there would be the heavy expense of machinery.

And, said Mr. Therrien, "there's no damn way you can borrow unless you don't need it."

The Saskatchewan government operates a land-bank program which is supposed to rent government-purchased land to new farmers, but like only person in the area renting such land had already been farming before and in fact stopped renting other land from a private owner when he got the government lease.

The prospects for Willow Bunch, however, are not hopeless.

The councillors talk of a possible coal power plant in the area that government spokesmen have said could employ 200 people if and when it is built.

Many of those, it is felt, might stay in Willow Bunch.

But the three men discuss the proposed plant without excitement, as if unwilling to believe fully in such development until the first concrete steps are taken.

They are also aware that Willow Bunch has not necessarily reached the lowest possible economic level.

The biggest payroll in town is about $120,000 a year for the 13 teachers at the high school, at a time when enrolments are falling throughout rural Saskatchewan.

Also important is the $6,000 in taxes and $24,000 in annual wages paid by the three companies that own the four elevators, at a time when elevators are being closed across the province.

If the railway and the elevators go, said Mr. Greene, "You can bulldoze us into the ground."

Meanwhile, as the population erosion continues and the town waits to see whether it will boom with a power plant or die with railway abandonment, no one expects much economic progress.

Mr. Therrien hardly needed to pause at all before replying to a question about possible new developments in Willow Bunch:

"Artificial ice for the curling rink, that's about the only new thing that's coming in here."

Ducks Face New Hazard

WASHINGTON (AP) — Harassed for many a long year by dried-up breeding areas, by hunters and by the march of civilization generally, American wild ducks now face a new hazard: DVE.

That's an acronym for the disease called duck virus enteritis or duck plague. Present among domestic fowl in Europe for about 50 years, it was first reported on United States farms six years ago. Then in the winter of 1972-1973 it killed 43,000 wild ducks and geese at the Lake Andes National Wildlife Refuge in South Dakota.

Biologists fear that the virus, known to be present now in some domestic flocks and probably in wild flocks, may spread. Stricken birds die within a week after being seized first with lethargy and then with convulsions. The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service is marshalling its laboratories, scientists and powers to try and deal with the threat.

Mountie on Lonely Frontier Gets Aid from Everybody

CLIMAX, Sask. (CP) — Two years ago, a marijuana smuggler tried to slip through Dennis Schneider's territory.

It must have seemed an easy task to cut a wire fence on the Montana-Saskatchewan border and traverse this sparsely populated area of 1,152 square miles where the RCMP corporal is the only policeman.

But the smuggler and his truckful of marijuana didn't make it, thanks to an informal but effective surveillance system.

"I've asked all the people in the area, whenever they see a strange car, to phone me," said Cpl. Schneider in an interview.

That approach might not work elsewhere, but it does in the handful of small towns and in the scattered farmyards where arrival of the RCMP means a smiling "Hi, Dennis."

The textbook terms for most of his work now are community relations and preventive policing.

Here, that means swapping fish stories over coffee in the New World Cafe, sometimes bringing up the subject of unsolicited liquor from during a friendly chat, chasing stray calves back to the main herd, and in off-duty hours, helping out with community concrete-pouring projects, clearing rocks from a farmer's field or coaching the local hockey team.

"This isn't like a big place where we're from, people can be said. "I work long hours but I take it easy when I'm not work."

The 22-year-old corporal, a veteran of 12 years on the force, has been based in this community of 350 for three years, working out of a 13-by-13-foot office in the front of the brick house where his wife and three children live.

The nearest RCMP detachment is 31 miles to the north, at Shaunavon. Before relay radio telephones were installed in between, "you went out at night and you hoped that if you needed help your wife could hear the radio."

The basement of the house has a cell for emergency-use: "If I need to run an education for a young fellow who turned 16 and got into the beer, I take him there for an hour until his parents come and picked him up."

Liquor and traffic offences involving young people are a large part of his work, but not a great problem: "Everybody talks about the kids being a problem, but they've been going on like that for hundreds of years."

He allowed that "some of them probably don't like me because I've had to do the job their parents failed to do," but said he has excellent relations with most youths, partially because of the area where "I think they get a different attitude to me and I know I got a different attitude to them."

Much of his time is taken up simply getting from one place to another on dirt and gravel roads. The 1.89 people in his area are mainly divided into four communities miles that appear on the map—Climax, Lonetree, Frontier and Gordon—and several others like Divide, Orkney and Lonesla that the mapmakers have dropped because they have withered to a handful of folk.

Farmhouses may be separated by several miles of the rolling, virtually treeless countryside, and even between the communities cars are rarely met.

An exception is Highway 37, leading from the Montana border up to the Trans-Canada at Gull Lake, but even that is mainly fuel coal traffic since its American connection is a rough, twisted road that tourists avoid.

Another time-consuming chore is paperwork, everything from advisory notices to parking tag telephone bill.

Bill-paying was, in fact, the first fault on a sunny Wednesday morning when he started on what turned out to be an easy-going, seven-hour, 189-mile patrol.

It took a while to get that done, since he was greeted by virtually everyone in sight at Climax's dusty main street. They wanted to find out how he and his family enjoyed their recent vacation.

The next stop was the border crossing, too sy hello to a new United States immigration official and to pass on a notice to the Canadian official to watch for a person wanted for forgery.

Then it was off over miles of gravel to the farmhouse of an elderly woman who parked in the wrong place on a Regina visit. She wasn't home and, after checking with a neighbor a few miles away, headed for Mrs. Bracken, where the person who rents her land lives.

During an informal talk in Bracken, he determined that the elderly woman was away as expected and would be next and left word that he had a minor matter to discuss with her.

Theoretically, the next stop might have been the most serious one of the day. He pulled into a farmyard with a warrant for the arrest of a youth who was supposed to pay a fine for having liquor in a car.

But it was as easy-going an encounter as any other that day and even Cpl. Schneider smiled at the informality of it all: "You get some kids with a warrant for their son, to arrest him, and they end up giving you a handful of fresh peas to eat."

The son was away that day and, after small talk while munching peas from a pail offered by the mother, he mentioned the unpaid fine, stressing that he had no intention of actually executing the warrant but that the matter should be cleared up in a week or so.

The black-and rest of the patrol car seemed to fill up with fresh air as it blew in through open windows, he realized wonderful if the powers that be will only provide an air-conditioned car so the dust and perspiration can be shut out during the hot summer.

He also wondered what new arrangement, if any, will be instituted for overtime. Members of the force now get a time-and-a-half payment of $920 a year in lieu of overtime and also to cover miscellaneous expenses like the cost of personal clothes.

That's one reason why a week is supposed to consist basically of three day and two night shifts, but it doesn't always work that way in practice.

Friday, for example, he is on night duty but has to meet someone in Frontier at noon. He'll be back "in time for supper."

The next stop was e coffee break in Climax—no lunch due to the pounds put on during holidays—and the radio quickly filled up with townspeople trying to discuss fishing.

From there, it was eight miles west to Frontier, to advise a fard-owner that another load may have been stolen from his farm building.

The surveillance system recently caught an antique truck—the phone calls going to Shaunavon during Cpl. Schneider's holiday—and the thief had on him a list of places to hit.

From the persons around the general store, Cpl. Schneider found out what farm became the cryptic note referred to.

On the way back to Frontier, after checking an empty farmhouse possibly visited by the antique thief, he got a radio message that the wife of the man he talked to in Frontier took the break-ins had found articles missing at their old farmhouse.

He headed to their town-site, along the way meeting a truck back at the driver of a small van, the first vehicle the patrol car met in the 189 miles.

"After all," they told him, "you're our policeman."

Re-enact Crash

ZAGREB (Reuter) — Yugoslav authorities plan to re-enact the Zagreb train disaster to clear up the mystery surrounding the crash in which at least 124 persons died.

Officials said Monday they hope to establish the sequence of events which led to the crash by running an identical train into Zagreb main station in conditions as close as possible to those of June 30.

Wednesday has been set as a tentative date for re-enactment. Also, provided weather conditions are similar.

Cape Breton White Man Manages Micmac Band

ESKASONI, N.S. (CP) — Every working day, Roger Hill climbs into his car and leaves the peeling houses and tub-thumping soundtracks of Sydney behind him.

He drives through the trailer-town suburbs of the Cape Breton steel city into soft green hills and past glass-clear carving lakes.

Eventually he turns onto an axle-jarring, dusty dirt road that winds and dips around Bras d'Or Lake. Thirty miles from Sydney, he bumps along the road into the Micmac reserve of Eskasoni.

Roger Hill, 29 years old, white, is comfortable here.

He arrives at the offices of the band council, early good morning to whoever of his staff is already at it, and sits down at the desk of the band manager.

This summer, Roger became the first white to hold the post. In effect, he is the civic administrator of the reserve of 1,558.

Of his staff, one other person is a non-native. She is married to a Micmac on the reserve. The staff includes three welfare officers, two welfare record clerks, an education co-ordinator, a band manager, a stenographer and two special constables.

The drive from his home in Sydney is the drive from a white man's world to the world of welfare and overflowing garbage cans, of crowded shacks and sagging houses, of frustration and anger.

"Before coming here, I'd known only Indians kids in Sydney, but I didn't realize how bad things were on a reserve," he said. "Most people have no idea."

Dan Sereveza has been chief of the reserve for six years. When the post of band manager became vacant, he arranged for advertising across the province.

Five people applied. Three were Indian, two white.

"The young man came in here and the councillors asked him questions. And he answered, these things well. He'd been in college, and had a lot on the ball."

"Now of course he is a white man. But I'll tell you, there is no much discrimination around already, and we Indians aren't going to discriminate. I couldn't care if he was Chinese or black or whatever. We needed somebody who could get things moving."

Roger Hill was on a March break as a second-year political science student at Dalhousie University in Halifax when he read the ad.

"I'd been concerned that a lot of my courses were too theoretical. I thought this would be a good chance to do something real.

"I was quite surprised when I was selected. I think the council had a lot of courage picking me."

He had some qualms about the reaction of some members of the reserve.

"But I find I get along very well with them, maybe because I'm learning from them and not telling anything else. The people I work with are the nicest I've ever met."

Roger spends most of his time visiting people on the reserve, discussing their problems and appraising requests for assistance.

You don't get daily complaints about sewage problems, or welfare problems, or housing problems and remain sane. Or make the numerous small daily decisions about who will get which small council contract or should be recommended for that one.

"I think being white is an asset," he said. "I came from the outside and I can be relatively impartial, detached."

"He's doing damn well," Chief Stevens said. "I'm kind of tough job—a demanding kind of job.

Racing Action at Long Reach

Championships Draw 25,000

By MIKE BRADSHAW
Sports Staff

PICTON — More than 25,000 people turned out to Hayward Long Reach, Picton on Sunday and Monday for the richest two days of power boat racing in Canada.

All together, there were 222 drivers registered for the 10 different competitions.

Lady Schindler from Pickering Ontario, drove in U Class Sportscraft to three firsts and a second to win the Belvedere Challenge Cup for Sportscraft.

Five sets of races were run to decide the winner of the Cup at North Bay, Parry Sound, Orillia and one on each of the two days at Hayward Long Reach.

Points were awarded for placings in every heat of the five races. There were six categories of boats involved and Schindler finished on top with 3100 points -- 1900 of those points came at the Picton races.

Rip Kelly, of Cheeffet Lakes, Ontario came second. He was driving an SE Class boat. Third was Bill McConegal from Carleton Place in his F/J boat and fourth was Jeff Newell in an FE. Newell is from Prescott, Ontario.

Six Sportscraft National Sprint Champions were also crowned at the Reach.

Fred Finchan, of Peterborough, won the U Class hosting out Lady Schindler by four seconds in a two heat, total time.

Spencer Dunn, from Port Credit, Ontario, became Canadian Champ of S Class.

Marc Rosenberg of Massapequa Park, New Jersey took the title in SJ competition.

Terry Huberty, from St. Paul Minnesota, was named champion in FE class.

FJ Class was Bill McConegal from Carleton Place, Ontario, and SE champ was Frank Hargreave from Ajax, Ont.

In hydroplane competitions, Tom D'Eath, from Michigan, and Jim Sypherd, from Pennsylvania drove to the big money.

D'Eath won $1,300 in the Molson's Grand Prix and Sypherd won $1,800 in the same event.

The Gold Cup for Grand Prix racing in seven litre was taken by D'Eath. He drove a five litre with a 305 cc engine. His boat was the smallest in the Grand Prix event.

Lady Schindler, (right), accepts the Belvedere Challenge Cup Series trophy from Bill Coriell, director of Sales for Belvedere. Schindler won the cup on his total points showing in five different sets of races. The final two sets of races were held at the Gold Cup at Hayward Long Reach, Picton, on Sunday and Monday.

Ron Brown, (left), owner of Gone Heavy, captured Gold Cup honors on the weekend. Brown had a bit of trouble preparing for the races. He had to borrow a motor for his boat from David Irwin, (far right). Next to Irwin is the driver of the boat, Tom D'Eath, who is a last minute fill-in driver. On the right hand side of Brown is race committee chairman, John Sibbitorpe, making the presentation.

D'Eath is Some Pinch-hitter

For Tom D'Eath winning the 1974 Gold Cup at Hayward Long Reach, Picton, was rather a fantastic affair.

Tom was a fill-in for the boat's regular driver — his brother Roger. Last week at American Power Boat Association National Championships in Dayton, Ohio, he was asked by the boat's owner, Ron Brown, to come to Picton and take his brother's place. Tom's brother was racing elsewhere.

"This is the first time I've ever raced here," said D'Eath, "and I think it's great."

We had a real time getting things ready for this race, but I'm glad we made it," he added.

D'Eath wasn't the only fill-in on the winning crew. In Dayton, Ohio, the boat, Gone Heavy, blew her engine. With the Grand Prix at Picton only a week away, owner Brown had to get hold of a replacement motor.

As it turned out the replacement came from a friend in Florida. David Irwin was the owner of the engine — a 305 cc. class, Chev. engine.

The boat was all that was unchanged from the Nationals last a week before.

The motor was a 305 cc.

Blewett Is Sharp

The only sanctioned female driver in the Canadian Boating federation, Barb Blewett from Bridgnorth Ontario came through with third place finish twice in her class.

In four races at Hayward Long Reach, Picton, Miss Blewett came up with two thirds, a fifth and a sixth.

She finished third over-all in FE National Sportcraft Championships and third in her class (FE) in the running for the Belvedere Challenge Cup Series.

This was the first time Miss Blewett had finished in the top three. She was running against 31 men.

The replacement came from a friend in Florida. David Irwin was the owner of the engine

Weather Keeps Crowd Down For Exciting Racing Card

Only a handful of people braved last night's 10 degree weather to be on hand for the special Labor-Day edition of Harness Racing.

The featured ninth race, the Canadian Invitational Series, took place drew a host of nice entries.

The No. 4 horse, Carmen Comet owned by Bob Everson of Whitby broke loose from the control of driver Gord Irwin and was scratched.

Before the horse was brought under control how- ever it had spurred over two sulkeys and thrown its driver.

Thanks to the quick thinking of one of the spectators the gate leading onto Catharine St. was closed before the horse could get on the street.

When the race finally got under way Bae State Marty took the lead and held on until the midway point of the race as he was challenged by Sunicrest Marlene and Grand Farmer of Boonsmeville and driven by Doug Brown.

Sunicrest Marlene was able to hold the lead for the remaining half mile to win the race a quarter of a length ahead of the No. 8 horse Sonny C. J. owned and driven by James Wood of Odessa.

The driver of Minaxtroy, Ed Weeks, claimed interference.

The objection was upheld by the judges and Stormy C. J. was placed second in front of Minaxtroy.

Hain throughout the week-end created continual delays and threatened to stop the final match late Monday afternoon midway through the second set.

The 23-year-old Belleville coupled with Mike Sedacka took the men's doubles championships earlier in the week.

Hack, steady and normally flawless from the baseline, had troubles with his service and drop shot.

Hicks took the match easily with strong first serves and a booming forehand.

Hicks, attending school in Waterloo, worked for the summer as Tenn's Coordinator for the Kitchener Parks and Recreation.

Hot Hand For Hicks

KITCHENER — In straight sets, Belleville's Robert Hicks defeated Jerry Hack of the host club 6-2, 6-2 to take the men's singles championship at Kitchener Tennis Club on the weekend.

Penetang Takes Honors From Broadloom's Grasp

Although not chosen as the series most valuable player, Joanne McGinnis can feel satisfied with her performance.

Joanne and her team from Penetang captured the Provincial Women's Softball Under AA-Ontario Intermediate "C" championship over Belleville Broadloom on Saturday.

The fact that Joanne pitched two complete games in one afternoon is impressive, but having to do it with a broken catching hand is!

The reason that she stayed in the game?

"They needed me," she explained.

In the opening game of the best of three games series, Penetang defeated the Broadloom team by a score of 9-8. The second game was played at Centennial Ball diamond on Saturday afternoon.

It was a do-or-die situation for she home team and they came through on the power of a two-run homer by Chris Smith and a three-run homer by Norma Fuller.

Mary-Anne Sills started on the mound for the Belleville team going one and two-thirds innings before giving way to relief pitcher Sue Fobert.

Sue, who was voted the series most valuable player went on to lead her team to a 15-12 win. The game was third and deciding game, played at the Alemite.

Penetang won the title with a 2-1 victory.

Belleville started out strong in the final game exploding for three runs in their first at bat.

Going into the sixth inning Penetang had narrowed the gap with the home team leading by a score of 5-4. The bottom of the sixth proved to be disaster as the visitors came alive and managed to add five more runs to the score, putting them ahead 9-5.

Pitcher Mary-Anne Sills was again replaced by Sue Fobert. By the time the Broadloom team got on track it was the top of the ninth, and they were down by three runs.

With two out and two on base a line drive hit by Lin Van Rompey was misjudged by second baseman Maryanne Smart allowing the two runners to score putting the home team within one run. With the tying run at third the pressure was on.

A shallow, well placed hit appeared to be good enough for the equalizer but a diving catch by centre fielder Marilyn Gammell ended the season for the Belleville team.

Black Diamond On Top

Black Diamond jumped into a 1-0 lead in their best of seven quarter-finals game Series Friday when they stamped Quinte Hotel Leaders 6-2.

Ron Bateman earned the victory driving out just five hits. He struck out four and walked one.

Mark Sheridan and Terry Murphy took the loss fanning six, walking three and allowing eight hits.

Gene Francis pounded a home run for Black Diamond.

Jim Niel had a triple. Jack Francis had two singles and Myles McDonell, Ron Bateman, Bob Henderson and Ralph Francis each had one single.

Bob Lloyd was tops for Leaders with a triple. Cliff Hineman, Mark Sheridan, Bob Strobe and Terry Murphy each singled.

Schindler Repeater In Belvedere Series

After five sets of races for six different classes of Sportcraft boats the Belvedere Challenge Cup went to the same driver that won it last year.

Lady Schindler, the 41-year-old driver from Pickering, Ontario, won the Cup for the second year in a row.

Racers were awarded points for their placings in races at Orillia, North Bay, Parry Sound, and at Picton-one September 1 and the final September 2.

The points system was 400 for a first, 300 for second, 200 for third, 100 for fourth with eight down to 17 for twelfth.

Previous to the weekend in Picton Schindler was tied for first place in the points standing with Rip Kelly from Cheeffet Lakes, Ontario. Both drivers had 1200 points.

Kelly had a string of racing, in Picton, both drivers were awarded 700 for wins with 1000 points each.

Schindler was awarded first place on the basis of his racing times. They were faster than Kelly's.

Drivers were awarded $100 for, each race won, $75 for each second place finish, $50 for a third and $25 for a fourth.

Schindler won $725 for his efforts over the two days — three first and a second. Kelly won $350.

Kelly was awarded second place and third in the Challenge Cup series went to Bill McConegal, from Carleton Place. Fourth was Jeff Newell, from Prescott.

Two Tight Fits

Devolin Motors was involved in a pair of 1-0 ball games on the weekend, gaining the upper hand Saturday at Alemite Park to knock Peterborough out of Ontario Amateur Softball Association Senior B playoffs and losing to Howard and Robert Fleming Monday night, in Quinte Fastball League action.

Dave Holloway pitched the Motors team past Peterborough, firing a solid game to black the visitors.

Devolin now meets Kingston in second round play with the first game in that set scheduled for Alemite Park Thursday night at 8 p.m.

Brad Ebbert continued his superlative pitching for Howard and Robert, shooting his way to a 3-2 lead in games in the QFL semi-final set.

Ebbert had company, Monday. It wasn't until the 14th inning that the Flemers were able to pin the defeat on Larry Griffin.

No date has been set for resumption of the QFL playoffs.

Tykes Bow Out

Belleville Elliott Motors tykes lost out in two straight in Ontario Baseball Association (OBA) playoff action on the weekend, according to a Belleville Minor Baseball Association executive member.

Elliott Motors gave it a big try but lost 13-12 Saturday in Brampton and dropped a 10-8 decision Sunday, at home.

Two Trenton teams now OBA playoff action on the weekend.

In Bantam B play, Trenton State Farm split a pair of games with Newmarket, winning 4-3 Sunday at home and lost Monday, 3-1.

In Spite of Problems, Ireland Places 4th

In Sunday's races, driver Bill Ireland from Trenton started out on the right foot, but went a leaf in his bid for a National Championship in the SJ category of Sportscraft.

Ireland came up with a second place finish in his first heat, but bad fuel injection problems in his second race around as he placed ninth.

Despite his sudden drop from second to ninth he still finished fourth over all in his class in the National Championships.

Monday, Ireland had a problem with timing. He jumped the gun at the starting barge twice and was disqualified from the races both times.

Melrose SHBL Champs

Melrose captured the 1974 South Hastings Baseball League Championship on Sunday with a 3-2, 10-inning win over Latta.

Ted Ahrens won the distance for the winners, giving up five hits while walking three and fanning nine.

John Masterson buried the first four innings for Latta, striking out three, giving up one hit and walking four.

Dale Lauder pitched the final six innings for Latta. He allowed two hits, walked two and struck out four.

Melrose hurler banged out a 10th inning double to account for winning run and Don McTaggart had a pair of singles.

Latta hits went to Rob Allison with a double and Bob Smith.Kirk Sheets, Damon Hamilton and Dale Tummon with a single each.

Penetang's Jan Ladueur slides safely into third base during Provincial Women's Softball Union Intermediate C playoff action on the weekend. Belleville Broadloom third baseman is Helen Sills.

Tiger-Cats and Bombers Swap Quarterbacks

Chuck Ealey for Don Jonas Says Leader-Post

REGINA (CP) — The Leader-Post says quarterback Don Jonas of Winnipeg Blue Bombers has been traded to Hamilton Tiger-Cats for quarterback Chuck Ealey.

In a copyright story by sports editor Bob Hughes, the newspaper said today the Canadian Football League trade was made after Monday's games.

The Bombers defeated Saskatchewan Roughriders 30-18 in Western Football Conference game Monday afternoon in Regina while the Ticats took an 11-10 win at home over Ottawa Rough Riders to set Eastern Football Conference night contest.

Ealey, 24, bothered by hamstring muscle injuries and a sore knee, had not been impressive in his six starts this season, prompting coach Jerry Williams to start backup man Bill Etter in Monday's game.

Etter failed to generate any offence and Ealey returned late in the first quarter and scored Hamilton's only touchdown.

The 6-foot-1, 195-pounder, who starred for University of Toledo during his college career, joined Hamilton in 1971 and led the club to victory in the Grey Cup. That year, he was named the CFL's rookie of the year.

In 1973, Ealey completed 143 of 253 pass attempts for 1,373 yards. He passed for 22 touchdowns. He also rushed for 519 yards on 67 carries and scored four touchdowns.

Last season, the Tiger-Cats finished last in the four-team EFC and Ealey completed 181 of 359 passes for 2,241 yards. He fired 14 touchdown passes.

Jonas, a six-foot, 200 pounder, joined Toronto Argonauts in 1970 after playing in the now-defunct Continental League. The Penn State graduate, in his fourth season with the Bombers, was named Canada's outstanding player of 1971 and in the same year was selected as all-Canada quarterback.

In 1971, Jonas wound up first in scoring in the CFL with 121 points.

After Winnipeg lost its first three games of the season, the Bombers coaches attempted to call the plays from the bench but Jonas rebelled and waved off some of the calls.

Despite the clash, the Bombers have won their last three games.

Jonas, 35, was traded in May 1971, by the Bombers for defensive end Joe Vijak and defensive halfback Ward Smith.

Winnipeg is fourth in the WFC with a 3-3 record and six points, five behind co-leaders British Columbia Lions, Edmonton Eskimos and Saskatchewan.

Hamilton is tied for second with Montreal and Toronto, all with six points, two back of Montreal and Alouettes.

Bombers, Eskimos Say It With Last Minute Efforts

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Last-minute efforts turned the tables and gathered victories for both Winnipeg Blue Bombers and Edmonton Eskimos in the Western Football Conference Monday.

Winnipeg kicker Walt McKee booted a 35-yard field goal on the last play for a 30-18 victory over Saskatchewan Roughriders in Regina.

And in Calgary, Edmonton quarterback Bruce Lemmerman passed to split end Stuart Low with 30 seconds left to play for a touchdown that snapped a 26-yard scoring drive, giving the Eskimos a 20-13 win over Calgary Stampeders.

Edmonton, Winnipeg, tied with Saskatchewan's loss, moved the Eskimos into a three-way tie for first place in the WFC with Edmonton, Saskatchewan and British Columbia.

Winnipeg's victory extended the club's winning streak to three games, biggest in the Canadian Football League, but the Bombers were in third place with a 3-3 record while Calgary tied at 1-4.

Winnipeg's victory avenged a 23-13 loss to the Roughriders earlier this year and marked a solid performance by Bombers' quarterback Don Jonas who used his running game to advantage.

Winnipeg led 7-3 after the first quarter and went ahead 17-10 in the second but Saskatchewan came back to lead 18-17 heading into the final 15 minutes.

McKee kicked two field goals, a convert and a single although he missed on another convert.

Tom Scott scored for the Roughriders on a 37-yard pass from Jones and John Bledsoe got another on a seven-yard run, also in the first quarter.

The best pass of the game was a 75-yard toss from Saskatchewan's Ron Lancaster to Peter Watson for a touchdown in the second quarter. Brian Berg kicked one field goal, a single and two converts.

In the second quarter, Saskatchewan marched 46 yards, ending with a two-yard run for a touchdown by Steve Molnar.

In the other game, Calgary was unable to capitalize on eight turnovers on fumbles, interceptions and a blocked punt and scored on two plays set in motion by stiff defensive play.

Starting Edmonton quarterback Tom Wilkinson took the Eskimos from the opening kick-off downfield 78 yards for a touchdown in the first quarter and scored on a 30-yard pass to Don Warrington.

Calgary scored eight minutes later on a seven-yard touchdown pass from Pete Liske to wide receiver Moody Jackson.

Edmonton kicker Dave Cutler was good on two converts and field goals from 35 and 19 yards while rookie Cyril McPhail hit on a field goal of 19 yards for Calgary in the third quarter.

At Regina, the Bombers gained 426 yards net offence, with 146 yards' rushing and 280 passing compared with Saskatchewan's [illegible] of 296 yards, 181 rushing and 115 passing.

Ealey – Hampered by Injuries

Levy has been preparing his defence to work out for quarterback Mike Rae.

"He is better than a lot of people give him credit for," said Levy.

Cats Take Squeaker 11-10

Poor Snap Costs Ottawa

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Coach Jerry Williams had said before Monday's Eastern Football Conference match that he regarded a fourteen conference race "right down to the wire."

Williams' Hamilton Tiger-Cats did their part—with the help of Ottawa Rough Riders centre Dom Smith— to keep the race close Monday.

The Ticats emerged with an 11-10 win over Ottawa to move into a three-way tie with Ottawa and Toronto Argonauts, all with six points, two behind leading Montreal Alouettes.

Tonight, the Argos will try to keep Montreal from widening the lead when Toronto plays host to the Als in an 8 p.m. EDT game to be televised on the CBC national network.

Ottawa had a chance to tie Monday's game and Hamilton after Rhome Nixon's touchdown with less than three minutes remaining but Ottawa quarterback Jeff Smith, the Riders centre, made a bad snap to Ted Woodward who was to hold for kicker Gerry Organ.

"That was the ball game," said Ottawa coach George Brancato.

"There were other things though. They stopped three parts trying to give the game to us but we wouldn't take it."

Quarterback Chuck Ealey scampered four yards for Hamilton's only touchdown early in the third quarter and kicker Ian Sinclair added the convert, a second-quarter field goal from 28 yards and a fourth-quarter single.

Organ scored a single in the first quarter and a 36-yard field goal in the third.

Nixon's touchdown came on a five-yard pass from Rick Cassata who shared quarterback duties with Jerry Keeling.

Heavy rain in the second half contributed to a number of fumbles and Ottawa recovered two of their own punts in the last quarter. The second recovery led to Nixon's touchdown.

Ealey failed to start for the first time since coming to Hamilton last year ago. Williams started Bill Etter who had been impressive in previous relief appearances but this time he came up empty and had his last pass intercepted.

A change in quarterbacks may be in store for the Als tonight with Sonny Wade itching to make a comeback. Jimmy Jones insists he'll be ready to start at quarterback despite a sore back but Wade could get his chance if Jones falters.

Toronto's big threat this season has been the running of Doyle Orange and Ed Shuttlesworth but also coach Marv

"Pride" the Key Word For Team Canada '74

By JOHN SHORT

Three members of Team Canada '74 used the same word Monday to describe the feeling of elation in preparing for their eight-game hockey series with Russia—pride.

Ralph Backstrom, J. C. Tremblay and Rick Ley used the word in separate discussions. It has been stressed by coach Billy Harris since the series was announced. Today the five players were selected from World Hockey Association rosters.

"Pride won it for Team Canada '72," Ley said at a news conference following the first scrimmage of the two-day-old training camp.

"I think they were at least two games when their pride won for them. They lost three games out of eight, and could have lost five or six."

Tremblay said his pride was a factor and Backstrom said we have too much pride in this league to let the team go give anything but our best."

Tremblay is playing at 181 pounds, almost 15 below his weight last season with Quebec Nordiques and five below his best weight with Montreal Canadiens of the National Hockey League.

"I did all-ups, push-ups and almost every kind of exercise to get ready for this," he said.

"I have pride that I can play the Russian style of game. I play that style all the time. I can prove wrong. It will be interesting to see."

Backstrom, 37, touted by Team Canada members Pat Stapleton and Andre Lacroix as the man most likely to surprise said he does not believe his legs are failing.

"I've been good to my legs and they've supported me well for a long time," said the Chicago Cougar centre. "I don't see any of the young players moving away from me and I don't see any reason why they should fall suddenly—unless I start neglecting them."

Backstrom, a member of six Stanley Cup teams with Montreal of the NHL before he was traded to Los Angeles Kings, said he was not surprised to be selected despite his advanced years.

"I know they would be looking for players who could skate and had some good experience," he said. "This is like getting ready for a Stanley Cup playoff.

"It sounds awkward, but it's an honour to be playing for your country."

Tremblay said after the scrimmage that he was not as sharp as he would like to be, "but it's only one practice and some of the guys had the same problem."

He said, however, that Backstrom and Ley, along with linemates Paul Henderson and Bruce MacGregor, as the Blues beat the Yellows 5-4.

MacGregor and Bobby Hull each scored two goals for the winners. Ron Chipperfield of Vancouver Blazers, leading scorer in the Western Canada Junior Hockey League last season, scored the other.

Frank Mahovlich, Serge Bernier, Rejean Houle and Mike Walton replied for the Yellows.

Coach Harris said he was pleased with the scrimmage.

"Only one player was hurt — a centre, Defenceman Al Hamilton took a hard shot on his calf and had to be applied to it, but will not miss a shift during today's workouts.

"You know, before this game I said the score would be 4-3 but I didn't know for whom."

Elliott said he was pleased with the performance he got from Jerry Miercis, who pitched nine innings and gave up seven hits while striking out 12. It was the best single-game strikeout performance of the tournament.

The Condors trailed 3-1 after two innings but grabbed a 5-3 lead in the top of the third and held it until the B.C. club got a run in the bottom of the sixth.

Fredericton's winning run came in the top of the seventh inning when second baseman Pete Matthews reached first on an error, stole second and scored from there on Brent Hallett's double into deep right centre field.

The Condors reached the final by striking for two runs in each of the fifth, sixth, seventh and eighth innings and a single in the ninth against New Brunswick.

The Steelers needed right fielder Dave Schwab's two-run homer in the top of the ninth inning to gain a 9-7 win over South Windsor, Ont.

Loser Comes Out On Top

CAYUGA, Ont. (CP) — Jerry Roberts of Rochester, Ont., had the final stock car race of the season Monday, but was the series champion before 6,500 fans at Cayuga International Speedway.

Art Clark of West Seneca, N.Y., Roberts' closest rival, won the first 100 laps of the 250-lap event, before overtaking him and pulling away for the win more than a lap. It was the second consecutive year that Clark has taken home the $1,000 first prize money in the series' longest race.

Clark averaged 83.2 miles an hour in his 1974 Camaro over the 156-mile distance. Makara was second and Norm Leffard of London, Ont., was third.

Makara's record of four wins and two second place finishes race Export A troubles series earned him $15,000. Harold Brown of Brantford, Ont., was second in the series, one point ahead of Mike Setterington of Wheatley, Ont.

Tanner Topples Nastase

FOREST HILLS, N.Y. (AP) — Roscoe Tanner upset former Wimbledon champion Ilie Nastase in a wild five-setter Monday at the United States open tennis championships.

In a marathon duel finished in semi-darkness before a crowd of some 12,000 at the West Side Tennis Club, the 22-year-old Tanner toppled the seventh-seeded Nastase 4-6, 6-7, 7-6, 6-4, 6-4.

Another seeded player was among the victims. Dick Stockton, seeded 16th, was beaten by Ismael El Shafei of Egypt 4-6, 7-6, 6-3, 3-6, 6-4.

El Shafei joined an international brigade crowned of Tom Okker of The Netherlands, Jan Kodes of Czechoslovakia, Alex Metreveli of the Soviet Union and Sydney Ball of Australia in addition to Stan Smith, Jimmy Connors and Tanner in the fourth round.

The top-seeded Connors, celebrating his 22nd birthday, blasted the cannonball service of Australia's John Alexander and won a two-hour, 39-minute duel 6-1, 7-5, 6-7, 6-4.

Smith, seeded No. 3 and bidding to regain the title he won three years ago, won in straight sets over Brian Teacher.

Okker won over Tomas Koch of Brazil 4-6, 6-3, 6-7, 6-4.

Five-set marathons were the order of the day. Kodes rallied from two sets down for a cliff-hanging 5-7, 4-6, 7-6, 6-3 triumph over 20-year-old Balazs Taroczy of Hungary, and Metreveli beat Briton Mark Cox 6-7, 6-2, 6-7, 7-6, 6-3.

Meanwhile, Billie Jean King defeated fellow American Betsy Nagelsen, 6-7, 6-4, 6-3 for a quarter-final berth in women's singles.

In other women's matches, Nancy Richey Gunter of the U.S. turned back American Ann Kiyomura 6-2, 6-3, and Helen Heldman, also of the U.S., beat promising 17-year-old Martina Navratilova of Czechoslovakia 6-4, 6-4.

Billie Jean's next opponent will be Rosemary Casals, who won over Dianne Fromholtz of Australia, 7-6, 6-2. Miss Heldman and Mrs. Gunter meet in another quarter-final, while top-seeded Chris Evert of the U.S. defeats Lesley Hunt of Australia and fourth-seeded Kerry Melville takes on fifth-seeded Evonne Goolagong in an all-Australian duel.

Only 12 of 40 Last, Yarborough is First

DARLINGTON, S.C. (AP) — Cale Yarborough, the only survivor among the pre-race favorites, won a silver anniversary Southern 500 stock car debacle Monday that turned into horrendous destruction of expensive racing machinery.

The 35-year-old veteran, who crawled under the fence to watch his first race at Darlington Raceway when he was 14, himself was the victim of one wild spinout.

But he recovered and watched as four other top aces, including front-row starters Richard Petty and Buddy Baker, were eliminated by wrecks that kept the race slowed to a crawl much of the way.

Only 13 of the 40 starters were around at the finish as Yarborough drove his Chevrolet home almost 1½ miles ahead of two-year pro Darrell Wallick, also in a Chevrolet.

Third place went to David Sisco in a Chevrolet, fourth to Dave Marcis in a Dodge and fifth to James Hylton. The latter's Chevrolet was eight laps back of the winner.

Earl Ross in Allan Craig Ord., driving a Chevrolet, completed 146 laps to earn $1,958.

Nicklaus Salvages Year

ATLANTA (AP) — Jack Nicklaus, disappointed over not winning any of golf's four major tournaments, says his triumph in the $250,000 Tournament Players Championship "has salvaged the year for me."

Nicklaus put on one of his patented charges over the final round which began Sunday and concluded Monday morning due to torrential rainstorms.

The 36-year-old Golden Bear took home the $50,000 first prize when the strong together six birdies en route to a 67 and a 72-hole total of 272.

J. C. Snead, the third round leader, equaled par 72 on the final round for a 274 total, two strokes behind Nicklaus over the 6,885-yard Atlanta Country Club course.

"I don't want to let this one get away from me once I get in a position to win," Nicklaus had told Monday. He was three shots behind Snead after the third round Saturday but regained his putting touch over the final 18 holes to overtake the perky, fast-talking Snead.

Snead said it was difficult for him to play after the rain delays—of Sunday which finally suspended play until Monday with 12 golfers still on the course. Nicklaus, with five birdies Sunday through 13 holes, completed the other five holes while Snead was a threesome behind and had six to play Monday.

Fredericton Takes Title

FREDERICTON (CP) — Team manager Garmont Steeves enjoyed what he called "the greatest thrill of my life" Monday when his Fredericton Condors beat GWS Steelers of British Columbia to win the Canadian Junior baseball championship.

"Oh, I was worried a few times there with Davis but each time I went out, he wanted one more."

Pitcher Don Davis went the distance in the title game after pitching all but a third of an inning in a semi-final game earlier in the day against the New Brunswick all-stars.

Davis, named the tournament's outstanding performer, scattered 18 hits in the game with the Steelers and limited the B.C. nine to single runs in three separate innings.

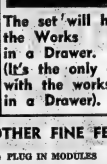
Seamon said he was willing to see how far Davis could go in the game, which he started an hour after completing the 8-3 win over New Brunswick.

On the other side of the diamond, B.C. manager Ron Elliott was philosophical.

"I said the score would be 4-3 but I didn't know for whom."

Elliott said he was pleased with the performance he got from Jerry Miercis, who pitched nine innings and gave up seven hits while striking out 12. It was the best single-game strikeout performance of the tournament.

The Condors trailed 3-1 after two innings but grabbed a 5-3 lead in the top of the third and held it until the B.C. club got a run in the bottom of the sixth.



Fredericton's winning run came in the top of the seventh inning when second baseman Pete Matthews reached first on an error, stole second and scored from there on Brent Hallett's double into deep right centre field.

The Condors reached the final by striking for two runs in each of the fifth, sixth, seventh and eighth innings and a single in the ninth against New Brunswick.

The Steelers needed right fielder Dave Schwab's two-run homer in the top of the ninth inning to gain a 9-7 win over South Windsor, Ont.

On Guard

Dressed in black pants, glistening boots, busby bearskin hoodies and scarlet tunics, post-secondary students hired by the Canadian Armed Forces for the summer stand guard on Parliament Hill during changing-of-the-guard ceremony. The show take place every summer morning, attracting up to 8,000 tourists. (CP Photo)

Changing-of-guard Conducted

Students Hired for Summer To Put on Show for Tourists

OTTAWA (CP) — Nineteen-year-old Jeff Ludlow of Markham, Ont., relaxed in a T-shirt on his dormitory bunk bed. Beside him was his scarlet tunic and fur hat that makes him one of the biggest tourist attractions in the national capital.

"Wow! I can't believe I'm really here," he remembered thinking the first day he marched to Parliament Hill, led by the Canadian Forces central band.

Dressed in black trousers, glistening boots, busby bearskin and the handsome tunic of the Governor-General's Foot Guards, "it's great to be the centre of attention," Jeff said.

He is one of 128 post-secondary students hired for the summer by the armed forces to perform the colorful changing-of-the-guard ceremony beneath the Peace Tower every morning at 10 o'clock.

If there isn't much to guard during Parliament's quiet summer months, the show at least perpetuates a scene of British tradition with military precision.

And thrilling up to 8,000 tourists a day is only one on a list of duties performed by the summer soldiers.

A busy morning, beginning at 6:30, includes polishing boots, grooming the uniform and passing inspection for the day's parade.

Sports occupy the afternoon for most, while others take turns manning sentry posts at the Governor-General's residence, Rideau Hall.

While only 75 march on parade at a time, extra men are dressed, ready to march in case of emergency.

Training begins the first week of May at Petawawa, Ont., a forces base 120 miles northwest of Ottawa.

"We learned everything you'd learn in the regular army," said Brave Lacroix, 20, of Ottawa. "The structure of the army, first aid, the history and biology of nuclear warfare. There's not too much we didn't touch on."

They also had hair cuts — short above the ears.

Short hair doesn't bother Victor Libaicon, 17, of Montreal, but he said some don't take it so lightly.

"Some of the guys, when they're told to get a haircut, try to wet it down to make it look shorter, or tuck it behind their ears," he said.

Of the 250 men recruited by radio ads, campus posters and word of mouth, about 80 graduate from the six-week Petawawa session to begin guard training at Rockcliffe air base in Ottawa.

There are two regiments at Canada and the Montreal-based Grenadier Guards—and there is spirited rivalry between the two groups. Pay is $1,200 plus room and board for the four months between May 1 and Labor Day.

Drill continues after the soldiers are ready for the first ceremony, usually the last week of June.

"I made it!" Jeff Ludlow remembered telling himself during his first march to the Hill. The experience, he said, was hard to relate to his memory of the Guards he watched as a boy when his family brought him to Ottawa on a visit.

"It's really a strange sensation."

He remembers, too, the first time pretty girls gathered to watch him stand sentry, their eyes popping, tongues hanging.

"A lot of talk and no action," said 19-year-old Rob Notman of Montreal. "The girls flock around you, taking pictures. But they never come home on the bus with us."

Yet, everyone seems to value the unique camaraderie among themselves.

"Guys who'd never get along in civilian life become friends here," said Rudy Goel of Ottawa, the oldest guard at 21.

Though tensions are inevitable among men living 36 to a room, morale is high.

"Somebody's going to get mad if someone steps on another guy's freshly polished boots," admitted Cpl. Steve MacIlish, a senior officer, "but we have a very happy organization."

They won't remember just the good times," he said. "They'll remember when the chips were down. Like when it was cold and rainy and the truck broke down and every one pulled together.

"It's a good experience for all young men," the captain said.

40,000 Attend CSN and Y Concert in Toronto

TORONTO (CP) — The five-year absence of Crosby, Stills, Nash and Young has done little harm to the smooth sound that launched the group to the recording industry's top ranks in the late '60s and early '70s.

Back again with their characteristic close harmonies, David Crosby, Stephen Stills, Graham Nash and Neil Young visited Toronto's Varsity Stadium Monday night for their 30th date in a 31-concert North American tour. It was their only Canadian performance.

Following an excellent showing by The Band, CSN and Y hit the stage amid thunderous applause to begin their three-part show.

An opening amplified rock set was followed by a piano-down acoustic segment featuring individual solos. A second electric rock set closed the show, which lasted almost seven hours.

By the end of the first set, which included such CSN and Y favorites as Love the One You're With and Wooden Ships, it was evident that the quartet had retained its golden touch.

Although the official count of ticket sales for the $13-a-head concert was reported at 40,000, one Varsity official said many holders of the counterfeit tickets which circulated Toronto last week were believed to have slipped past security check at the gates.

Hours before the concert began, the stadium bleachers were filled to their 27,000 capacity and the open-air stadium floor was covered with fans.

A light drizzle which accompanied the group, as the stage turned to a heavier and colder rain midway through the group's three-hour performance, discouraging some spectators in the last hour.

CSN and Y disbanded in 1969 after the release of their album Deja Vu, believing they had exhausted their potential together.

Solo work followed, with Crosby and Nash teaming up for a period. But only Neil Young, a Toronto native, established a top solo career, achieved any modicum of success on his own.

Their current tour, which finishes this week in New York City, is expected to gross $15 million.

Girl Hurt In Hit and Run

A 14-year-old girl remained in hospital today with injuries suffered in a hit-and-run accident near her Sidney Township home Saturday night.

Penny Aikens suffered severe leg injuries when she was hit near her home on the township's third concession, just west of the Wallbridge Road, police said.

She was taken to Belleville General Hospital with fractures and cuts.

Police said a car hit a fence post, struck the girl then bounced into a telephone pole before the driver took off.

Your Horoscope

By BERNICE BEDE OSOL

Wednesday, Sept. 4

Aries—(March 21-April 19) A few responsibilities you didn't count on will shorten the leash on your liberty. They end before some fun you had planned for yourself.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) A good idea you have will not be followed through on as thoroughly as it merits. Self-doubts will enter in, unfortunately.

Gemini (May 21-June 20) Be sure that you have enough funds in your budget to cope with anything extraordinary that may be in the future. Begin setting a little aside now.

Cancer (June 21-July 22) The goals you're now striving for are a bit too self-centered. You'll do better by including others in order to realize them.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22) You're going to begin to complicate and make more difficult something that is going along quite smoothly. Get out of your own way.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Someone who has done you a favor lends with some hesitation you're not really appreciative. Let this party know you are grateful.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Don't spend too much time now with friends or interests that aren't related to your more practical and important needs.

Scorpio (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Something you're having an affair do for you won't be close to your satisfaction. Better be ready to lump it and finish it yourself.

Sagittarius (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Don't wait too long on something that needs doing early. As the days go by it lessens your chances of success.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Someone who is co-operating with you on a common interest is not completely in harmony with your aims. A problem will arise.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) You're apt to be a bit too hasty in tackling something you don't fully understand. Take each new step carefully.

Pisces (Feb. 20-March 20) Be careful that you don't get immersed in something that will cost you more than it promises. It looks interesting, but its values aren't lasting.

Opening lead—K♦

By Oswald and James Jacoby

Here is a rubber bridge hand played at the old Ac'ron Whist Club long after it had given up whist and contract.

The late H. Hal Hall, one of the all-time great, cashed his high diamonds and led a trump. Charles Lochridge, another all-time great who sat South, won the trick, opened his hand and asked, "I make it, don't I?"

Hal folded his cards and said, "Yes, you do." But East wanted to know why Charley didn't have to close a club trick.

Charley's claim was perfectly legal since he did not intend to take any finesses. His plan was to cash his ace of hearts, lead a trump to dummy, ruff a heart, lead another trump to dummy, ruff a second heart and play out his last trump.

At that point Hal would be down to four cards—the king of hearts and three clubs. Dummy in back of him would be holding the jack of hearts and three clubs. Hal would have to discard first and any discard would give Charley the rest of the tricks.

Why did Charley bother to ask? Because if East held the queen of clubs or four hearts to the king or queen the squeeze would not develop.

CARD Sense

The bidding has been:

West	North	East	South
1♠	2♠	Pass	3♠
Pass	4♠	Pass	?

You, South, hold:
♠ A K Q 10 8 7 ♥ 8 4 ♦ K 6 ♣ 3 2

What do you do now?

A—Bid four spades. This second jump says that your spades are self-sufficient, but that you don't have very much in high cards.

TODAY'S QUESTION

Your partner continues to four notrump. You show one ace and he bids five notrump. What do you do now?

Reducing Weight Cuts Cholesterol

By G. C. THOMPSON, MD.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My husband was sent to a heart specialist recently or chest pains. He's 6'xyrs and the cardiogram did not show too much.

The doctor told him to stop smoking, lose weight and reduce his cholesterol intake by 50 per cent. I am at a loss as to how to estimate his cholesterol intake.—E.C.

My regular readers know how I tel about this whole business o cholesterol. Take care of the weight and the cholesterol will usually take care o Rest.

Your doctor decided your husband's warning signals were set off by a number of actors—overweight, excessive smoking and cholesterol. So his suggestions were sound—reduce, quit smoking and reduce cholesterol.

But I doubt he needs a 50 per cent reduction o cholesterol intake, which would be unattainable. Remember the rabbit which got only a low cholesterol diet o vegetables still has cholesterol.

I don't mean that cholesterol content in cod gets o scot-free in all this. But I'm suggesting that it is a kind o accomplice to other factors, like overweight and arterial hardening, cigarettes, etc.

Now as to the diet. It is nearly impossible to come up with a diet that is going to assure any specific reduction in cholesterol. You just can't calculate out the way you can calories. So no wonder you are at a loss as to how to estimate the cholesterol. The doctor can give you a rule o cods known to be high in example. Visible fat should be avoided. Fats used at room temperature are saturated ati.

The only true measure would be a series o spaced-out blood chemistry tests to determine the cholesterol levels. This would provide a rough estimate as to the excitveness o any diet. But the chances are that any diet that produces weight loss would provide a cholesterol drop as well. A 15 pic cent reduction would be quite an achievement.

Since you have become cholesterol-conscious or your husband's sake, you should immediately learn more about it than I can write in this limited space.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: "I have an itching problem all over my body which starts at night only. There is no rash o any kind but I itch all over. I've tried hot baths, lotions and talcum powder without stop the itching or an hour or so and then I'm right back to the same problem. I'm taking the following medications (listed) or about circulation. Would appreciate any help.—H.C.

Have you reported this to your doctor? O the medications you named, I would suspect the Nicolar, which is a niacin preparation and itching b one is its occasional side ects. I see physicians agree with my suspicion, be can make a change in your medication.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Please answer two questions. First, what is meant by a slee positive blood test?

Second, what kind of specialist would a person go to if they have a chemical imbalance?—Mrs. R.L.

First, a "false positive" blood test indicates that a particular disease or condition might be present when it really isn't.

Second, a chemical imbalance covers so much territory that I can't safely answer your question. So I'd say go to your regular physician or internist.

Fireworks as Pirates Sweep Phils

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Pittsburgh Pirates' 7-4, 11-1 Labor Day sweep over Philadelphia left some bad feelings among a couple of the Phillies.

"We're going to get, even," vowed Phillies' slugging baseman Dave Cash, who was struck in the batting helmet by a pitch during the eighth inning of the nightcap.

"And if nobody else on this team will throw the ball, I will."

Phils relief pitcher Eddie Watt made no bones about his feelings.

"The next-time I throw a baseball in this park, I will be trying to kill somebody. And that somebody will be a member of the Pittsburgh Pirates," he vowed Watt.

Bruce said the pitch to Cash, a fastball, slipped from his hand because of a chronic blister on his middle finger. He said he talked briefly with Cash after the game and that Cash didn't indicate any anger.

"Dave knows better than that," Kison said.

"I'm not going to take a shot at anybody with an injury. It's a ridiculous subject to bring up. We're on the field to win games, not play games."

That did not satisfy Cash.

"He was trying to intimidate me," said Cash. "A pitcher who can't have control better than that doesn't belong in the big leagues."

Elsewhere in the National League, New York's Tom Seaver beat Los Angeles Dodgers 5-3, Houston Astros edged Cincinnati Reds 4-3, Atlanta Braves swept a pair from San Diego Padres 8-4 and 9-2, Montreal Expos at St. Louis Cardinals and New York Mets at Chicago Cubs were rained out.

In Sunday's games, Phils delphia beat Houston 8-1, New York blanked Atlanta 3-0, Montreal edged Cincinnati 2-1, St. Louis defeated San Francisco 8-3, Chicago beat San Diego 4-1 and Los Angeles beat Pittsburgh 6-2.

Saturday scores: San Francisco 2 St. Louis 2, New York 6 Atlanta 5, Cincinnati 16 Montreal 3, Philadelphia 10 Houston 5, Pittsburgh 4 Los Angeles 3.

Pittsburgh's victory increased its lead in the NL East to 10½ games over St. Louis, which was rained out.

While Pittsburgh's bats have been making the noise, the Pirates' pitching has been equally impressive. It has been a climb to the top of the NL East. The Pirates have won 15 of their last 17 outings, and they've given up an average of just 2.2 runs a game.

"We're like the Mets of last year," said slugger Willie Stargell, who had two homers, a double, and three runs batted in five runs in Monday's doubleheader.

"It's a good feeling, especially against a contending team.

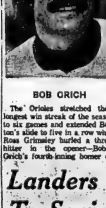
Red Sox Bats are Silent

Yankees Just One Game Off the Pace

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Boston Red Sox were supposed to have a day off today.

But because their hitters took it on unscheduled day off Monday, the day off is cancelled.



The hitters didn't call in sick Monday, but the Boston bats were certainly ailing and the faltering Red Sox managed only five hits—two of them bunts—in dropping a doubleheader to the surging Baltimore Orioles, both by 1-0 scores.

However, the Sox held on to first place in the American League's East Division by one game over New York when the Yankees split a twin bill with Milwaukee Brewers, winning the opener 3-1 but dropping the nightcap 3-2. Baltimore is only three games out.

Elsewhere, Chicago's Wilbur Wood became a 20-game winner for the fourth year in a row as the White Sox rallied to beat Kansas City Royals 6-4 in 10 innings, Oakland A's edged California Angels 6-4 and Minnesota Twins beat Texas Rangers 8-3. Cleveland and Detroit were rained out.

In Sunday's action, Oakland beat Detroit 5-3, Minnesota beat Boston 8-6, New York downed Chicago White Sox 18-6, Milwaukee defeated California 5-1, Baltimore beat Kansas City 7-1 and Texas whipped Cleveland 10-3.

Saturday's scores: Milwaukee 6 California 5, Minnesota 6 Boston 2, Detroit 7 Oakland 3, Baltimore 3 Kansas City 2, Texas 3 Cleveland 6, New York 18 Chicago 6.

BOB GRICH

The Orioles stretched their longest win streak of the season to six games and extended Boston to five in a row when Ross Grimsley hurled a three-hitter in the first game of Grich's fourth-inning homer off Bill Lee.

Baltimore's Mike Cuellar and Boston's Luis Tiant was the only run—and Mike Cuellar went into one better by firing a two-hitter in the nightcap.

Paul Blair's bases-loaded sacrifice fly in the 10th inning scored Cuellar to outduel Bill Lee.

Boston manager Darrell Johnson ordered extra batting practice for today.

He refused to be discouraged by the poor showing, however, and that has seen Boston's lead whopped from seven games to one in the last 10 days.

"There's no way you can get low when all it is is lack of hitting," Johnson said.

The Yankees equalled their longest winning streak of the season at six games by taking the opener behind Rudy May's four-hit pitching. But the Brewers built a 3-0 lead in the nightcap on an RBI single by Dave Hrabosky, Mike Hegan and Tim Johnson's two-run single and belt behind Tom Murphy's clutch relief pitching.

Wood survived a visit Kansas City attack and became the first White Sox pitcher ever to win 20 games four years in a row. Jorge Orta's two-run double in the 10th inning provided Wood's triumph after, the two-run pinch double by Ken Sanco capped a three-run rally in the eighth that erased a 4-1 Kansas City lead.

Home runs by Reggie Jackson and Joe Rudi highlighted Oakland's win and increased the A's lead in the AL West to 8½ games over Kansas City. Texas' Frank Robinson and John Doherty homered for California.

ROSS GRIMSLEY

Joe Decker pitched a six-hitter and Eric Soderholm, Craig Kusick and Tony Oliva homered for Minnesota. Toby Harrah hit his 19th homer for Texas. Steve Dunn have come against the Twins.

Vote Favors Working

Toronto Transit Back to Normal

TORONTO (CP) — The transit strike which paralyzed Metropolitan Toronto for 23 days has ended and operations were back to normal early today.

Most of the 3,700 members of Division 113, Amalgamated Transit Union, took part in secret balloting Tuesday. Of the 4,638 members who voted, 78 per cent were in favor of returning to work.

Toronto Transit Commission (TTC) officials reported that full service resumed by 9 a.m. today, although subway trains might be late frequent than normal during peak hours. Allnight bus, tram and trolley routes started at midnight Tuesday night.

For four days, the workers had defied a law passed in the Ontario legislature ordering them back to work. Whether the TTC will seek permission from the Ontario Labor Relations Board to prosecute the workers individually or the union as a whole was still unanswered Tuesday night.

Metropolitan Toronto Chairman Paul Godfrey said the question of punishment of the union was "a highly emotional issue" with the public, and he wanted "a cooling off period" during the next few days before having the commission decide on it.

If announcing the results of the vote, union division president Leonard Moynehan said all the union members must abide by the union rules and return to work.

Mr. Moynehan said that because the right to strike was taken away by the government, it was the government's duty to ensure that the workers would receive justice from the arbitrator.

"The men will work until the report of the arbitrator is handed down. If he didn't get a fair shake from the arbitrator, I don't know what their attitude will be."

The fact that more than 1,000 transit employees voted to defy the law was a matter of concern to some union officials.

TTC Chairman Karl Mallette also expressed concern that workers who voted against returning might refuse to go to work.

"There have been several votes in the last few days, but this one won't all been blotted," he said. "What about the 22 per cent who voted no? Are they going to walkout?"

Mr. Moynehan said the deadlock that led to the strike must never happen again.

Labor Minister John MacBeth plans to appoint an arbitrator to the dispute within 10 days or two weeks.

As strikers voted, they also signed for transit runs for the next six weeks.

Members of two other unions that had been of strike against the TTC returned to their jobs before the strike. They consist of about 150 electricians' and about 100 machinists', whose differences with the TTC also will be submitted to arbitration.

Printing Press Seized

MONTREAL (CP) — RCMP officers Tuesday arrested four persons and confiscated a printing press believed to have been used to print thousands of counterfeit Canadian and United States bills stolen in the last year and a half. An RCMP spokesman said one of the most active forgery rings in Canada had been broken. The names of those arrested were withheld until police complete their investigations. Several more arrests are expected, he said.

Unions Gets Cash

SYDNEY, Australia (Reuter) — An Australian union official said Tuesday that maritime unions had demanded and received $28,000 before they allowed a freighter with a foreign crew, including Asians, to dock at Sydney. E. V. Elliott, secretary of the Seamen's Union, said the money represented the difference in the wages paid to the crew and that which would have had to be paid to an Australian crew. The money was put into union funds, he said. Labor Minister Clyde Cameron said later it is "highly improper" for the money to be paid the unions rather than given to the foreign crew.

Public Housing Faces Obstacles

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario Housing Corporation (OHC), which has 11,846 families and senior citizens on its waiting lists, said Tuesday it is having trouble getting housing starts approved because of opposition from local municipalities.

"Public housing is a bit like the subway system," Grant Maxwell, OHC information officer, said. "Everyone's in favor of it as long as it isn't in their neighborhood.

Consulate Raided By French Family

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "We came out because the American police said they'd help us," said Cherlotte Berenguer. "We decided there was no use in staying faceless," said her daughter, Jackie.

Joseph Berenguer, his wife, son and three daughters, occupied the French consulate here for seven hours Tuesday.

The French nationals said they were frustrated over repeated attempts to settle a 12-year-old $20,000 debt and confiscated when France left Independence Hall in 1962.

The Berenguers, who run a dolicessen-deli in Santa Barbara, entered the office of Consul-General Jean Francois Roux Tuesday afternoon, ejected its three occupied, a secretary, and nailed the doors shut.

They said they planned to fast for justice and announced "we have enough gasoline to burn down the building and we're willing to burn with it unless we get justice."

Finally, Peter Noel Medina, a friend who said he had similar claims, told them they had won the publicity sensation and would do no more good by extending their stay. They voted 10 votes out.

Three escapades since he left clear liquid found in the consulate offices were labeled in red "dangerdanction." But a fire department spokesman said they contained water.

80,000 Kurds Flee Iraqi Air Raids

KERMANSHAH (Reuter) — More than 80,000 Kurds fleeing Iraqi bombing raids have streamed into a dozen refugee camps established by Iran along its 450-mile western border.

Iran's Red Cross organization, called the Red Lion and Sun Society, says that the numbers crossing the no-man's land between the countries have increased to 7,000 a day.

Foreign journalists in Tehran for the Asian Games were flown to the refugee camps as part of the Iranian move to get world attention to the magnitude of the problem.

Tehran newspapers have also published editorials criticizing an alleged lack of interest shown by the International Red Cross and the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees in the situation.

The refugee problem arises from a long and bitter dispute between the Arab rulers of Iraq and the Kurds who are seeking autonomy or their nationalist homeland in the north of Iraq.

The Kurds have rejected government proposals for limited self-rule.

Neighboring states are watching the conflict closely, partly because of a recent flood of Soviet military equipment into the country.

Red Lion and Sun Society officials, concerned over a possible Bangladesh-scale refugee influx, have had contact with it since for the last eight months and the flow is reached the level where help is needed.

The society's special representative for refugees, Dr. Sohab Shayfard, said Iran is the only country assisting the refugees. Turkey had closed its border to them.

Iran's own Kurdish population is in the border provinces of Azerbaijan, Kurdistan and Kermanshah is put at about 2½ million.

The largest refugee camp is at Siyran, 35 miles from the border The camp, built for 2,-10, now holds 12,000 people in long lines of tents.

More Massacres Alleged; Greeks Question Identities

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — More bodies were dug up today from a grave at the Turkish-Cypriot village of Maratha, and the Turks reported two more massacres in which they said 156 Turkish-Cypriots may have died.

Turkish Premier Bulent Ecevit threatened "serious measures" against the Greek-Cypriots if the massacres continue.

Officers of the United Nations peace force counting skulls removed from a garbage pit outside Maratha said 84 men, women and children had been buried in the grave. Survivors in the village 12 miles northwest of Famagusta said the victims were Turkish - Cypriots slain by Greek-Cypriot gunmen.

The Greek-Cypriot government of President Glafcos Clerides contended that the corpses might be those of Greek-Cypriots missing in the district. A Nicosia newspaper said a medallion found in one of the bodies belonged to a Greek-Cypriot woman who lived six miles from Maratha and was missing with her seven-year-old son.

The Turkish-Cypriot defence minister, Osman Orek, told reporters he has been informed of two other alleged massacres.

He said 98 Turkish-Cypriots were missing from villages near the south coast and were believed buried in Paleddia, but Greek-Cypriot police there refused to let UN investigators search the area.

Orek also said that he has information that 67 Turkish-Cypriot civilians from Tirni, west of Limassol, have been killed and buried in that area.

The Clerides government has called for an independent investigation by the UN force and the International Red Cross of all atrocity reports, and Vice-President Rauf Denktash, the leader of the Turkish-Cypriot community, said he would welcome the inquiry. But nothing has been done about getting it.

Ecevit said Turkey is determined "absolutely to find a solution" to the political future of Cyprus. "We shall not trust the lives of Turkish-Cypriots to the Greek-Cypriots," he said.

Teachers Say They Were Fired For Marrying Outside Church

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — Two former Essex County Separate School Board teachers say they were fired by the board because they were married this year in civil ceremonies outside th Roman Catholic Church.

Patricia Podgorsky and Susan Porter say they were appealed their cases to the Ontario Eng-ish Catholic Teachers' Association (OECTA), bargaining agent and representative for the province's separate school board teachers.

Leo Normandeau, OECTA president said, however, the association can take no action until the teachers' letters of appeal are received by his office.

The cases then will be studied by the OECTA's provincial executive at its next meeting Saturday Sept. 14, to determine whether the association will support the appeals.

Mrs. Porter said in an interview that board superintendent Gerald Brown gave her May 17 off so she could get married. She said Mr. Dwyer was aware at the time she was to be married in a civil ceremony to a divorced man but he did not counsel her that his might cost her her job.

She said that on June 11 she was told by an assistant board superintendent not to return to her Grade 5 class at St. Anthony's school in nearby Harrow because her contract had been terminated.

She appealed the termination of her contract to a board of reference in August and won, she said.

The tribunal ruled that because a board must terminate a contract by the end of May and November to take effect at the end of June and December, the decision was valid until Dec. 31.

Nearly two years ago, Mrs. Podgorsky divorced her first husband and filed with the Roman Catholic Church for an annulment. The annulment has not yet been granted.

The school board ruled that the women, by contracting civil marriages, should be formally dismissed because they "did not give an example of respect for the Roman Catholic Church.

Munro Visiting Vancouver To Probe Grain Blockade

VANCOUVER (CP) — Labor Minister John Munro arrived here Tuesday to investigate a grain handlers' dispute which has halted export of 85 per cent of the grain that flows through West Coast ports.

It was not known what direction his attempts to solve the dispute will take.

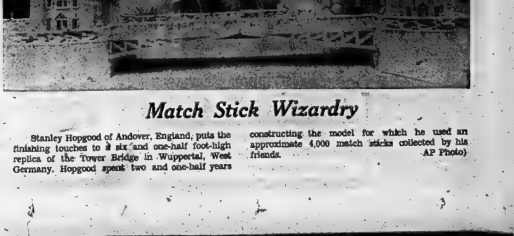
"I first want to be fully appraised of the situation here in talks with my officials," the minister said when asked if he had contacted representatives of the grain elevator companies and the Grain Workers Union.

A work stoppage at Pacific Coast Terminals Co. Ltd., United Grain Growers Ltd., Alberta Wheat Pool, Saskatchewan Wheat Pool and Burrard Terminals Ltd. began here Aug. 26 following a lengthy dispute between the companies and Local 333, GWU.

Until the full stoppage began, the 550 grain workers had been on a work slowdown.

The dispute revolves around a report prepared by conciliator Dr. Neil Perry which calls for pay increases of 87 and 65 cents an hour in a two-year contract plus cost-of-living adjustments and a new pension plan.

The base rate, when the old contract expired Nov. 30, 1973, was $4.99 an hour.



The union accepted the Perry report, but the companies rejected it on grounds that it would be inflationary.

Meanwhile in Ottawa Tuesday, Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau said he hopes there will be "some movement towards a solution of the grain handlers' strike by Thursday.

Mr. Trudeau said he was puzzled by the failure of western grain farmers to demand an early end to the tie-up. But the prime minister said the federal government is determined not to call Parliament into emergency session to legislate a settlement.

He said the government had expected that the largely producer-owned grain companies would be urged by grain farmers to settle with the union.

"The demurrage charges are going to the farmer," he said. "It is his money and I would think he would want an early settlement."

Third Offence Brings Three-year Sentence

BROCKVILLE — A man serving two life sentences for murder was sentenced to an additional three years here Tuesday for wounding a seven-year-old Colborne boy he pleaded guilty to the charge, said, in connection with the kidnapping of Darryl Turnman, of Colborne, in January, 1970.

Kelly, serving a life sentence for the murder-rape of a six-year-old Toronto girl in 1966, was given a pass from Kingston penitentiary to attend a Christmas pageant in December, 1971. He did not return and was arrested a month later in Toronto after the murder of a Toronto man.

He was given a second life sentence for that murder.

The Chapman boy was picked up on a Colborne Street, driven to several points in eastern Ontario, attacked, beaten and choked. Left in a Gananoque ditch, he subsequently recovered.

Kelly was originally charged with attempted murder of the boy but told Mr. Justice W. A. Donohoe of the Ontario Supreme Court that he would agree to plead guilty to a lesser charge of wounding.

Japanese Will Import Canadian Grasshoppers

REGINA (CP) — Protein-rich grasshoppers will soon join the list of exports Canada ships to Japan.

Bruce Danyluk, general manager of Western Regional Development Inc. of Brandon, Man., says his firm will ship a ton of the pests a week to Japan where they are considered a delicacy and will command a penny for them.

The plan is an experiment, but if it proves feasible, Mr. Danyluk may even try one of the Manitoba grown varieties.

The idea started in October when a Japanese trade delegation visited Manitoba looking for new supplies of popular Japanese foods.

Japanese pay $3 a pound for grasshoppers and provide 70 per cent of the world demand.

"They were looking for a constant supply," Mr. Danyluk said. "They have been purchasing from Korea but with disappointing results."

He made his own grasshopper harvester, a crop sprayer with nets strung on the arms. The harvester is driven along ditches and through fields and the grasshoppers fly into the nets and are held there by air flow.

The next step is to quick-boil the hoppers in water to preserve color and texture and then freeze them. In Japan, they are boiled in a mixture of sugar and soya sauce.

One of the possible dangers in eating grasshoppers is chemical poisoning from insecticides. The insects any highly mobile and can move from sprayed to unsprayed fields.

The corporation is working with University of Manitoba on the problem.

If the grasshopper experiment is successful, Brandon might become the collection centre for the Prairies, Mr. Danyluk said. The corporation will produce a brochure describing results.

Union Votes On New Pact

TRENTON — The 185-member local at Trenton's Quaker Oats plant voted to the Trenton legion hall Tuesday to vote on a company offer received Monday.

President of Local P 1251, Canadian Food and Allied Workers, Leo LeBlanc, said today he cannot reveal any details of the latest offer but "we (union negotiators) think its good."

The local has been on strike since July 5.

"The biggest issues were voluntary overtime and memory of course," said the union official. The union's last three-year contract ended March 31.

"I hope the membership is satisfied," said Mr. LeBlanc.

Bata Plan Discussed

The multi-billion dollar Bata plan for a residential and industrial complex that would ease Frankford and its neighbor to the south, Stirling, was discussed in a joint Tuesday in Township, Frankford, Bata and planners meeting next Tuesday.

Frankford Reeve Bill Rose says that after the initial idea was proposed it soured everybody and looked like the shelving out of all planning.

Under the proposed development population might increase by 6,000 to 10,000 persons. There 2 hundred homes would be built on the east side of the Trent River in Frankford.

The reeve says his community wants a say in any change in the township's official plan.

The meeting Tuesday he said, is to allow the various groups involved a chance to present their views. Further developments will be discussed at official planning board and council meetings.

Truck Overturns

TWEED — A tractor - trailer hauling three Conklin Shows rides to the Renfrew Fair overturned on the shoulder of Highway 37 Tuesday, resulting in $2,000 damage to the vehicle.

Madoc Provincial Police said the driver of the tractor-trailer, John Henry Adams, 28, of Paris, swerved to avoid a dog on the road, went out of control and hit the soft shoulder.

The accident occurred at 10:45 a.m., about one mile south of Tweed.

PUC Says System In Need of Repair

PICTON — The Picton Utilities Commission has requested town council to issue debentures totalling approximately $225,000 to provide funds for improvements in its water distribution system.

Chris Lockyer, a PUC commissioner told Councillors Tuesday consideration must be given to improvements of the system in the north-east or Delhi area of town. He said some of the sections of the system were installed in 1888.

Mr. Lockyer described this section of town as a growth area and noted that new houses, apartment buildings and condominiums are being built there.

David Hickman, a PUC commissioner, added that if improvements in the north-east quadrant of town are not undertaken the PUC will be forced to consider refusal of any connections to further developments in that area.

"We are on borrowed time," he said, discussing the limitations of the area.

Mr. Lockyer said a study of the area shows the flow and pressure is inadequate in certain locations. Adequate fire protection also is hampered by the low pressure.

He estimated cost of the improvements at $225,000, based on figures obtained last spring. The commissioner said he said, now has increased this cost 14 per cent.

Engineering fees would total $18,000 and legal fees, survey fees and easements approximately $5,000.

Also, the pumping station requires improvements as one of the major pumps is in operation and a new one may be required.

Picton reeve Rose Crunkwright asked if an increase in water rates could be expected if the capital expenditures were approved.

Mr. Hickman confirmed this possibility but added that there has been no raise in the water rates in the last eight years.

H. C. Blakely, manager of the PUC, added that the commission is in no position to estimate a future rate increase.

Councillor Jack Evans questioned how long the proposed improvements would prove adequate for future needs and was told by Mr. Hickman that they should serve for 20 years.

Although the PUC did not present council with a formal resolution for approval of the improvements, indication of approval was requested.

Mayor James Bird said the PUC's immediate payments up to 1981 now total $29,460 per year and that the debentures proposed by the PUC would substantially increase this figure.

Parking Becomes Major Issue At Picton Council Meeting

PICTON — A delegation of Picton merchants and professional men had petitioned town council to remove a recent parking ban on Main St. from the Town Hill to Paul St.

Parking in the area was prohibited last month and new traffic lanes established to alleviate traffic congestion. Seven meters were installed.

The petition, signed by 15 persons requested council to reconsider its action.

"There are three doctors, one dentist, one optometrist, one shoe repair, one radio and television store, one plumbing and heating establishment, the business office for Gulf Oil plus nine residences in this small area and it really assures a hardship for these people——," said forced to park in a no parking zone to allow the boy to enter the office on an injured foot.

Gordon Nourse of Nourse Radio and Electric suggested that the parking ban should be in effect only during rush hour, permitting shoppers to bring heavy items to his and other stores for repair.

Picton mayor James Bird replied that councillors had considered the traffic situation and the parking ban was their attempted solution. He noted that reconsideration might be possible in the future.

Council adopted a public works committee report limiting parking in the area in question and voted to extend the parking meter zone to include both sides of Main St. to the westerly limits of Johnston St. Meters will be installed to provide for parallel parking only.

Awnings Termed Hazard

PICTON — Picton deputy reeve Larry Richardson disagreed with other at town council Tuesday night as he supported the recommendations of a Prince Edward County meeting.

Aaron Robinson, a Picton businessman wrote to council to suggest that awnings on Main St. should be at least seven feet above the sidewalk.

Deputy-reeve Richardson said that he agreed with the suggestion that six foot two and is obliged to duck the awnings.

Town clerk Andrew Jarvis confirmed that there is probably a by-law regulating the height of the awnings but added there is not yet one to restrict the height of men to six feet.

The question of the low-hanging awnings was referred to council's public works committee for discussion.

Yardmen Winners

Winners in August's $30,500 Belleville Yardmen Benefit Fund draw were all from outside the Quinte area.

The first of $10,000 went to K. D. Thomson, of Aurora, while Deborah Cornwall was winner of $5,500 second prize, plus $1,000 for selling the ticket. "Mildred and Hazel" of Whitby will split the $4,500 third prize. The $2,000 fourth prize went to Mario Marchetto of Scarborough and fifth place of $2,500 went to Ross Barlow, a former Belleville now living in Scarborough, who also picked up an additional $1,000 for selling the ticket.

Tickets were drawn by PO Bill Ross from the tug HMCS Plainville from Hamilton which had been a recue vessel at Kingston's CORK regatta.

House Termed Unsafe In Government Report

FRANKFORD — A modern brick home perched on a 75-foot bank alongside the Trent Canal has been declared unsafe.

A government survey estimates it would cost $78,000 to shore up the site to prevent the house from sliding into the canal.

Frankford council Tuesday did not condemn the building, but Reeve Bill Rose said it had the responsibility to the public to have something on record as to the nature of the problem and should not encourage anyone to buy the building.

In order to be built the house had to receive approval from the department of Indian and northern affairs since it was adjacent to the waterway. The land was sold by the former department of Transport. Frankford issued the building permit.

Reeve Rose said it was approved despite a town council's protest.

A year ago the attached garage cracked, away from the main structure and was torn down.

Subsequently a detailed study was done by the provincial government, and its report states that conditions are unsafe.

The reeve said that during the water could be seen running out of the ground 30 feet below the foundation, and that the longer the situation exists the greater it will become.

The home is owned by Catherine Murray, who has died this year here, now a husband, a Bata Shoe executive, was killed in an airplane crash after they built the new home.

Re-opening Planned

MADOC (Staff) — William Hawthorne, owner of Crystal Beach here, now a manager of two Toronto recreation clubs, said he intends to set in motion a 10-year plan to make the resort "one of the finest campgrounds in the province".

Crystal Beach had several cottages and about 300 camp sites. Mr. Hawthorne said his long-range plans call for building of squash and tennis courts and a swimming pool.

U.S. Violence

A Bellevillian who some years ago travelled in United States centres as a badminton competitor tells us of the people he encountered in cities such as Detroit and Chicago some of the quietest, most cultured and conservative people you would find anywhere. And by contrast, some of the most shiftier types of people.

Today it is probably the same, except that in the interim the contrast between good and bad, manifesting itself in steeplyrising and virtually uncontrolled crime, appears to be much sharper.

It may be that this carnage finally is getting to the authorities. Attorney-General Saxby, referring in a Chicago speech to the Seattle, referring in a Chicago speech to the fact of national crime might be necessary to counter it, or the country, as he put it, would "fall apart."

In Maryland the police are stepping up action; they have instituted a $50 bounty plan for the return of weapons and this is meeting with some success.

Individuals are taking the law into their own hands, like the Buffalo cab driver who shot and killed a man who robbed him of $90 at knife point. And in Cordele, Georgia, a 16-year-old boy was killed by a booby-trapped cigaret machine; the owner was rencountil but he said he had set the trap after five burglaries.

There is a look on this theme of citizen counter-action. It is called Death Wish, is available locally, and a film version starring Charles Bronson is said to be entertaining a stir among the tame-nonsensical populace of the U.S. Bronson plays an executive whose wife is mugged and killed by hoodlums, while his daughter is raped and ends up in a mental institution. He embarks on a course of revenge and becomes something of a public hero after killing off a succession of would-be attackers.

It is understandable why such a film should have that sort of success in the U.S., given the one-sided violence occurring daily. The annual homicide rate stands at around the 20,000 — including, in recent days, a 12-year-old carpet girl gunned down in a Detroit suburb, reportedly in error by a man who feared for his life in a situation related to drugs, a 19-year-old girl bank teller shot dead in Augusta, Mich., and in New York a 33-year-old father of six knifed to death after being dragged from his car and being robbed of $7. And not to mention the killing spree of Texas mass murderer convicts.

Canada is fortunate in that its rate is relatively small and orderly population is free of such extremes. But we must continue to guard against proliferation of guns and weapons and the outcry of understables. The Americans meanwhile would do well to give priority to controlling the dangerous social malaise in their midst.

Escape Haven

The popular British vacation island of the Isle of Man, a mountainous chunk of land in the Irish Sea with its own historic Manx parliament, has become even more desirable of late for the people of beleaguered Northern Ireland.

Less than an hour away by air, it is a handy and peaceful haven away from the harsh realities of life in Ulster.

But the other day there was word that guerrilla leaders of the Irish Republican Army have found the island a convenient and safe place to hide out while planning their deadly campaign in the homeland.

Now that the authorities are onto this dodge the possibility of arrest may force a change of plan by the IRA. But the irony of such a situation, with all and sundry getting away from it all in the ICAM, is inescapable.

Immigration Policy Under Fire

Overseas Professional Talent Canada's Gain

Toronto Star

At a recent world population conference Canada was accused of looking poorer countries of their professional people.

It was a fair comment on an immigration policy which has, for a quarter of a century, favored highly educated and highly skilled applicants.

Not even national Sctisbocci can justify the continuation of such a policy. Thanks to a vast expansion of post-secondary education, Canada is in general producing as many professionals as it needs although there are still shortages of some specific tradesmen.

The wheel of immigration has turned almost full circle, and this high-technology country is finding that it needs very much the skills and energy of workers, who built it up in the first place — people willing to do manual or even semi-skilled jobs and willing also to go to remote places to earn a living.

For example, the James Bay hydro project was touted by premier Robert Bourassa for the jobs it would give to the people of Quebec, where unemployment is chronically high. But many Quebeckers — the many Maritimers, Ontarians and Western Canadians — were unwilling to forsake their contacts for work so far at the bush, even at high pay. Although the jobs were supposed to be reserved for residents of Quebec, it was found necessary to recruit Portuguese and Italian laborers from Toronto and elsewhere to complete the work crews.

The construction industry is facing both short-term and long-term shortages of workers, particularly of carpenters and operating engineers, as it contemplates further huge developments such as oil production from the Athabasca tar sands.

Even in the short term, contractors are applying to bring in immigrants on temporary work permits at times by six months. For the longer term, the industry does not expect to meet even 50 per cent of its needs from the existing population, unless four-as-five year apprenticeship training can be compressed into a shorter period, and unless trade unions allow a higher ratio of apprentices to journeymen on the job. The Canadian Construction Association estimates its members will need to get 100,000 workers from outside migration between now and 1985.

There was a substantial increase in immigration in the first three months of this year.

Statistics Canada has just reported — from 28,380 persons in 1972 to 41,381 this year — but with construction expected in the service industries such as restaurants and building maintenance, the demand is going to remain unbalanced. Government policy should accommodate it. Extra points should go to applicants willing to work and settle away from the great cities.

It's an opportunity to combine virtue with necessity. We can and should stop discarding poor countries of their best-educated people. We can also keep the Canadian living standards, and a stake in the country's future, of workers who would many Canadians are reluctant to take.

Soft Shoulder Can Be a Menace to Traffic

Brockville Recorded and Times

Recently, a young man was killed when his motorcycle skidded out of control on the gravel shoulder of Highway 401, west of Brockville. Two weeks ago, the writer witnessed a woman who was forced to the shoulder just west of Cornwall, again on 401. Though not killed, she suffered back injuries, and teeth, the cause of the accident was apparently loss of control after hitting the soft gravel shoulder.

Almost every day we read of similar accidents, and though it can be difficult to determine because in every mishap, the majority of hot-of-control accidents can usually be traced to that culprit — the soft shoulder.

And it is not only during these summer months that soft shoulders are a menace. Indeed, in winter driving, when snowbanks often hide the location of shoulders, it is even more difficult to determine where the pavement ends, and gravel begins.

Why then, are Ontario roads not shoulder-paved?

More correctly, the answer is expense. Mr. E.J. Orr, Director of Systems Design, a branch of the Ministry of Transportation and Communication, informed The Recorder and Times in a telephone interview that paved shoulders add approximately $30,000-$50,000 for per mile of highway.

According to Mr. Orr, Ontario has a policy of paving shoulders only on "heavily travelled, high volume roads", such as the QEW between Toronto and Hamilton, fill as it passes through Toronto, and portions of 401 in Barrie.

Mr. Orr also pointed out that paved shoulders, under certain circumstances, could lead to the traction provided by gravel shoulders under similar circumstances.

However, Mr. Orr stated that in his opinion paved shoulders were "the ultimate in highway design" and possible shoulder paving is under constant review by the branch of the Ministry.

In view of the many accidents attributed to soft shoulders, perhaps the Ontario government should consider improvement in shoulder paving. Instead of paving to the soft shoulders, cover 12 inches beyond the paved portion with one inch layer of lesser travelled highways. This would provide a margin of safety for drivers and cyclists, and is sure to reduce the number of serious accidents resulted from loss of control.

We think the idea is worthy of serious consideration.

New York and Montreal Again Linked by Rail

Kitchener — Waterloo Record

A few weeks ago, another significant move in the area of public transportation was accomplished with the revival of rail passenger service between New York and Montreal.

This natural rail corridor had been without service for some three years, yet the renewal was not a simple operation. It required, for instance, $50,000 for painting and restoring stations along the route and of a total expenditure of $3.2 million to get the trains rolling.

The problems involved in providing service which is likely to justify itself in passenger patronage are illustrated in the fact that even this expenditure comes far short of the track improvements required for high-speed service. The run, for instance, will take 75 minutes longer for the 381 miles than it did when the service was ended.

The trip will be made in 10 hours and 30 minutes, well over the bus time of 6½ hours for the same service. Comparisons are not entirely unfair, for instance, on French and Japanese high-speed inter-city trains made how far we have to go in North America merely to come close to that in other nations.

It is nevertheless good to see these evidences of a new determination to revive service on rail routes. Amtrak, the U.S. national rail passenger corporation, is up-grading trackage for high-speed services.

In Canada, the Canadian National's Turbo train is now operating between Montreal and Ottawa as well as on the Toronto-Montreal run. The Canadian reported must be improved greatly to allow this kind of service to reach its potential, however.

As for the New York-Montreal service, its renewal was greeted in a carnival atmosphere at stations along the way. This is a symbol of the desirability of this kind of service to those able to benefit from it.

Toronto Transit Strike And NDP Reaction to Stoppage

By DON O'HEARN
Queen's Park Bureau
Thunder Bay Chronicle-Journal

TORONTO — In campaigning on the NDP's statement of principles for the frequency of consultation for the legislature, this theme have been more critical and go far beyond the act-interest of hospital. Toronto) I have written about the possibility of both the government and the Liberals.

So when Grand and other party, the NDP, did it have anything to say?

Yes, it did.

At the apex of the dispute, when it was known there would have to be government intervention and after bills of staff had been put to intervene, leader Stephen Lewis issued a statement.

In it he proposed that the ministry of labor himself should conduct the negotiations.

Further, that a wage offer of 28 per cent or 5 per cent should be made (the offer then was 23 per cent).

And finally that the government should spend up to $5 million to subsidize the difference in the offers.

This he said "would win approval everywhere."

The government already is pouring a great deal of money into Toronto transit.

It is doubtful if this has "approval everywhere" but the idea is striking several cords millions.

But most notable is the NDP. the party's statement. It is also made no proposals for any new labor legislation to bring an end to essential services.

Rather, he proposed more public money and that let the traditional processes carry on. Nowhere did he suggest the dispute be directly handled by government.

Compulsory arbitration he declared against.

With it, he said, compounding labor relations within the TTC would never be the same.

A residue of bitterness would remain in the operation for the next two years, he said, and it was reasonable to predict that the TTC would suffer from slowdowns and cutbacks in overtime and other forms of work stoppage.

Nobody lacking in the statement was any thoughtfulness of over thought of new procedures in labor relations.

This was in strong contrast to the position of Liberal Leader Nixon who, though he has also one of the most; did make the comment that compulsory arbitration, the "final-offer" procedure should be considered.

But as NDP leader, with his ties to labor, and old-line labor at that, can't afford to be novel.

Car Prices Fuel Inflation

Montreal Gazette

A month or so ago, General Motors announced a 19 per cent increase in car and truck prices, which was considered inflationary by many people. GM-made its announcement just before Gerald Ford was sworn in as President. The latter's party got a presidential slap on the wrist, and GM got a kick off an average $500 increase and got the president's promise to consult with corporate citizenship.

Ford Motor Co. has been GM's shadow throughout, first announcing a price increase of 9.3 per cent in line with GM's, then its intention to remain within Phase IV guidelines, and back. Chrysler and American Motors have announced somewhat similar any day.

This is no 10 per cent increase. Or even a five per cent boost, after the GM roll-back. Auto buyers have been hearing steadily since the 1974 models were introduced that prices are on the rise. The biggest chunk of that boost will be attributed to the Yen that are just now being introduced by GM.

Holden's Vega is just because is the fact that the biggest-selling car seems to be coming on the most popular models. The Vega's price increase will not be as much as some of GM's second best-selling car, third and fourth.

Also, in the GM rollback of 1974 a 2.5 per cent reduction on cars, but an increase of 5% over what had been originally planned for trucks. Trucks have been selling extremely well, especially the pick-ups, being like proverbial hotcakes, will have their prices rise even more than that.

Once the distribution of the increases is taken into account, the impact is undoubtedly more than 19 per cent.

The theory that these increases are inflationary, though, is not completely true. Production-control theory dictates that any level is now immediately an asset, accounts for a healthy portion of the rise in the price of a product.

Lack of people who buy cars don't really need them. Many Canadians and Americans shelf the need for a new car during the years of the least true of the North American lifestyle that costs me money if I don't trade my car every two or three years. Statistics shows the most economical way to own a car is to drive it into the ground.

The shelf life is an excuse to buy a gaudy, air-conditioned, push-button seated, gas-gobbling aircraft carrier. Americans, though, the way North American-made cars, driving them into the ground takes a lot shorter time than it should.

Maybe the higher prices will crash us all into the real possible driving and maintenance habits. Certainly the price of a Vega, for example, is a bargain car every second or third year can be stepped without too much hardship.

The increase does add fuel to inflation, however, in the case of some car buyers. Those companies that buy in volume, such as taxi companies, leasing operations, and trucking firms generally buy the cheapest and get as much value out of a vehicle as they can, maintaining and servicing them for maximum profit.

The government of either U.S. or Canada finds Detroit in a position to be able to control its prices even when not contributing to excess inflation instead of just covering increased costs by passing it on to buyer. It can lower tariffs levied on European and Japanese cars and trucks, making available good quality automotive transportation at lower prices. A certain amount of "initiation" would remain in the price no matter what the government does.

Busy Year for Gardeners

Cornwall Standard-Freeholder

The cost of food may be high, but planning a bigger vegetable garden to compensate for it should be enjoying the benefits of his satisfaction this year.

Generally speaking, it appears to be an excellent year for gardens. There has been plenty of rain and we have escaped the excessive heat which can sometimes seem to scorch plants and vegetables before reaching their full potential.

Our own experience has been abundance in most parts of the garden. There was an ample harvest of beans and peas, the carrots and tomatoes are growing well and even the sweet corn looks as if it will mature before frost sets in.

Potatoes are more plentiful in the hill than has been the case for some years and there will be cucumbers for pickling, pumpkins for Hallowe'en and so on.

Gardening is a very satisfying hobby and it is such an idle. Not only is the exercise good for one, but the results are very pleasing and help to fill the larder. And if one goes in for flowers there is the added bonus. Freshly-cut bouquets add a splash of color.

Those who say they can buy flowers and vegetables at cheaper all the year round, can they grow them may be right. But look at all the satisfaction that are missing out on in not being able to boast about that prize tomato they picked for dinner or the carrot which had a finger on it for each day of the week.

Lakeshore Planning Concept

Peterborough Examiner

A consultant's report on Lakefield and Smithfield could become some kind gulps and rapid shifts in attitudes.

Municipal Planning Consultants looked at various ways of fitting the Big-Four municipalities together and came up with a predictable conclusion. Port Hope would pay through the nose for the meagre planning and service benefits amalgamation would bring.

The depressing news is underlined. Port Hope, has the most to lose because it has the lion's share of industrial assessment in the area. If the boundaries are expanded, the money would have to be spread over a larger area.

These higher taxes, and stretched assessments are an old story to any municipality forced into regional governance. And they will remain a common story until the provincial and federal governments get around to changing the tax structure so that municipalities will not have to live off industrial assessment and property taxes.

Grit Deputy's Leftist Background

Editor,
The Intelligencer:

If any of the Canadian voters are living under the delusion that the Liberals were forced into accepting a socialist approach by government action over the last two years, as the price of staying in power, they can forget it.

The Federal Government is gearing up with socialist heavyweights at the top, level as horse out by the latest reported federal appointment to the position of Deputy Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources.

The philosophical outlook of the person who holds this or other such high ranking posts will obviously have a great bearing on the long and short term policy of this and other departments and consequently the future of Canada as a whole. You and I as individuals will pay the piper.

The new Deputy is Mr. Tom Shoyama, who, prior to joining the federal government, was part of the NDP administration in Saskatchewan. Obviously, his NDP background held him in good stead as portrayed in his efforts on the famous May "Robin Hood" Budget.

You may say "so what if Mr. Shoyama is a socialist!", really what does it have to do with "how" he performs his job? Undoubtedly "how" is not the point in this case, the point is "what will he perform in that position?" and with his background the social writing would appear to be on the wall for all freedom and individual-minded Canadians.

Successful Living

Unfaithful Wife Fears Pregnancy

By DORIS CLARK

Dear Doris: I love my husband dearly, but my problem is I cannot be faithful to him.

We were separated a year because of this and now that we are back together I still go out behind his back. I can't seem to help myself. I'm not on the pill and am afraid of being pregnant; and since my husband cannot produce any more children he figures there is no need for me to take the pill.

If he knew that I was going out on him I know he would leave me. What can I do? — Guilty

Dear Guilty: Stay home. Can a brief letter from me stop you from doing what you already know could destroy your marriage?

What is this thing you call love? The self-indulgence of yielding to every physical temptation? Some people give in to the indulgence of eating chocolates and end up overweight; some cannot subdue their appetites for alcohol and become drunkards. You find sex irresistible.

And in every case there is self-love: selfish, immature indulgence.

But love puts the loved one first, is a deliberate and urgent enough way that the temptation to cheat would have short shrift. Don't write to me. See a social worker, a minister or someone who can give you the backbone to get that happy marriage of yours.

If you were busy enough studying the needs and nourishing the bodies of your four children, and developing your own, you wouldn't have any time to say "yes" to the philanderers.

(Every day Doris hears from readers who report success after taking her advice on a human dilemma. Let her help you with yours.

(Is it a point of etiquette that is troubling you? Doris can tell you how it's done in Canada. Write to her in care of this newspaper).

Career Found By Chance, She's Leading Profilist

LONDON (CP) — When Honoria Marsh emerged from three years with the Women's Royal Naval Service in 1946, she was at a loose end.

"I couldn't type or do shorthand," she said. "I didn't know what to do.

"Then, by chance, a woman I knew asked me to draw her nephew, 'I don't draw professionally,' I told her. 'You do now,' she said. That's how it all started."

Today Miss Marsh, who had been drawing since the age of two but never had any formal art training, is recognized as Britain's leading glass engraver and finest exponent of the revived art of the silhouette.

She is working on a series called The Trappings of State, an edition of 12 silhouette prints, based on pairs in a limited edition of 1,500, numbered and signed. The first pair appeared in June and the entire series will be available by Christmas.

Th first two, brilliant in color and accurate in costume detail, are recognizable portraits of Sir Anthony Wagner, Garter Principal King of Arms, and Yeoman Quartermaster H. T. Johns of the Tower of London.

Her first venture on leaving the service was oil portraits which, she said, are "better forgotten." Then she met Len Sleee, a craftsman of Huguenot origin, who was responsible for the glass repairs for the Cunard Steam-Ship Line.

He asked Miss Marsh to help him design a motif for the mirrors of one of the liners and was so pleased with her work that he gave her a set of engraving tools.

She discovered that she most enjoyed engraving goblets. Modern glass, she decided, was unsatisfactory, with an unhappy tendency to splinter under the impact of diamond engraving tools.

But early 18th-century glass she found ideal. The plain-glass colour goblets, suitable for engraving for presentation purposes, still turn up and one London dealer saves any that come his way for her use.

Not a single mistake can be made in glass engraving, Miss Marsh saih. She works entirely freehand on glass and finds that two hours of intense concentration is all she can stand.

Well-known firms commissioned her to engrave goblets for retiring chairmen. The Duchoff family asked her to depict the Chateau Lafit vineyards and the chateau itself. On a Churchill goblet were symbols of the statesman's many hobbies, plus a glimpse of a half-smoked cigar.

Meanwhile Miss Marsh retained her interest in silhouette portraits. During the century before photography came into general use silhouettes were the most popular LIKENESSES. Profiles, as silhouette artists were known, were to be found all over Britain from about 1770 to 1860. Some drew from the freehand, others traced their sitters' shadows.

When cameras became popular, silhouettes went out of fashion.

Miss Marsh pencils sketches in meticulous detail, making notes on colors and design. Then she paints the profiles in India ink, with the details of hair and clothing added in water colors. With paints specially mixed, she obtains a brilliance that is usually found only in oils.

In 1972 the National Portrait Gallery, London, staged an exhibition of silhouettes covering 200 years, in which Honoria Marsh—the only contemporary artist represented—had 16 studies.

Good No Matter How You Say It

"You say to-may-to and I say to-mah-to."

So goes the song, and as it implies, it doesn't matter how you pronounce a luscious tomato, or whether you consider it a fruit or a vegetable. It's delicious no matter whether you prefer it red, green or yellow. It's always the late summer's best gift to mankind.

Raw or cut-and-hand with a little salt or sugar, or done down into chili sauce, tomato butter, or just plain canned, tomatoes are a love-canker, high-vitamin asset to your diet.

Here are a few tried and true receipts to try with your last basket or two of tomatoes.

Tomato Tomato Relish

six-quart basket of tomatoes one quart vinegar, white or cider 2½ lbs. brown sugar
three tsp. ground cloves four or five onions, sliced three tsp. cinnamon
one tbsp. salt

Don't peel the tomatoes, but cut out the stem. Cut them into quarters or eighths, and put them all in a large preserving kettle. Pour in the vinegar and add all other ingredients. Boil until the relish is thick enough to plop off a spoon. Don't boil too quickly — be prepared to spend a long time stirring, especially towards the end when it becomes thick and a little "spitty".

Ladle the relish into sterilized jars, seal tightly, and let cool before storing in a dark place. It will keep for years.

Tomato Butter

six quart basket of ripe tomatoes four lbs. white sugar one pint vinegar
one oz. powdered cloves one oz. cinnamon
one oz. salt

Peel the tomatoes after they've been scalded with boiling water. Cut them in quarters into a kettle, and drain off the juice when they're all in. Add the other ingredients and boil the mixture until it is thick, stirring frequently. When it is as thick as you like it, ladle into sterilized jars and seal tightly.

Chili Sauce

eight quarts tomatoes
four green peppers, finely chopped or ground one hot red pepper, finely chopped six large onion, chopped two cups brown sugar three cups cider vinegar three tbsp. canning salt one tbsp. black pepper
one tbsp. allspice
one tsp. each of ground cloves, ginger, cinnamon, mustard seed

MAY HIRE STUDENTS

SYDNEY, N.S. (CP) — The city of Sydney is investigating the possibility of hiring students to help keep conditions in the fight against roaming dogs. Householders have complained that packs of dogs are ruining lawns and gardens.

TOGETHER AGAIN

HORNCHURCH, England (CP) — Because he thought his steady girl had taken off for Australia, Dick Stannell left home to join her. Police picked up Dick, 8, at the dock and observed to the misunderstanding. Mandy Harrock, 7, who was simply away on vacation, said: "What a silly he is."

two tbsp. dry mustard (optional)
Wash and quarter the tomatoes. Put them in a large preserving kettle, and add the red and green pepper and onion. Stir. Then add all the other ingredients, and simmer the mixture over a low heat for three hours, or until thickened to your taste. Stir frequently to prevent sticking or scorching. Add salt if need.

Ladle into sterile jars, seal tightly and store in a cool dark place.

Stuffed Tomatoes With Walnuts

four large tomatoes (best stand)
one cup of rice, cooked fresh parsley, chopped, amount to taste one onion, chopped finely one green pepper, chopped finely salt and pepper to taste
two tsp. fresh or dry basil
¼ cup finely chopped walnuts
grated cheese

Carefully cut tops off the tomatoes, and scoop out the centres. Turn upside down to drain thoroughly.

Mix the cooked rice (white or brown) with the fresh parsley.

Let this mixture sit while you brown the onion and pepper in a little oil. Add the walnut pieces and a little of the tomato juice from pulp you scooped from the centre. Simmer briefly.

Add this mixture to the rice, season with salt pepper and basil.

Fill each tomato with the mixture. Sprinkle the top with grated cheese, and place in a heavy shallow baking pan, with a little water in the bottom. Bake in a 350 degree oven for about half an hour.

Before serving, place under the broiler for a minute to brown the tops.

Macaroni and Tomatoes

four large tomatoes, thinly sliced four cups, cooked macaroni, any type one egg, beaten
½ cup milk
½ cup breadcrumbs (or more) dried thyme to taste salt and pepper
two or three tbsp. butter

Mix the macaroni with the egg and milk.

Grease a heavy medium sized casserole.

Place a thick layer of macaroni on the bottom, and cover with a layer of tomatoes. Sprinkle with bread crumbs, thyme, salt, pepper and a dab or two butter.

Cover with another layer of macaroni, and continue until tomatoes are all used. End with a layer of macaroni, dab with butter, salt and pepper and sprinkle with remaining breadcrumbs.

Bake in a 350 degree oven for half an hour. Serve with green salad or green beans.

Ann Landers

Addicted to Murder Magazines, Woman Scaring Herself to Death

By ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: I am an average housewife 31 years old. About a year ago I bought a detective magazine and found it fascinating. I then became incredibly addicted to murder mysteries.

After a while I began to think of myself as the victim of every horrible crime I read about. It was quite thrilling to imagine myself being killed in the manner described in every story.

When I told my husband about my fantasies he was horrified and forbade me to buy any more murder magazines or books. He says it is sure to affect my mind.

I don't believe I'm becoming mentally ill. Yet I become very frightened at night and feel like a basketball for wanted emotions—fun and fright. Please comment.—O.W. Of Utah

Dear O. W.: I urge you to seek professional help and learn why you get your jollies out of scaring yourself to death. I sense deep feelings of ambivalence and conflict in your thinking—probably repressed aberrations.

In the meantime, knock off the bloody books, woman, and read something else.

Dear Ann Landers: You frequently offer advice to spouses of alcoholics and drug addicts, but how about a word to people who are married to diabetics? It's just plain hell and I don't know how to deal with it.

My husband has been a diabetic for 18 years. From the beginning he has refused to stay on any kind of diet. Certain foods and beverages are poison to him but he eats and drinks what he pleases. I prepare his meals according to doctor's orders but what good does it do when he sneaks forbidden food at every opportunity?

The man has made such a wreck out of me that I had to go to a "head shrinker," as he calls it. I quit going because I figured that he was the one who needed one, not me. (Of course, he wouldn't go.)

Last year the crazy fool was hit with an insulin reaction and died in the ambulance on the way to the hospital. He pulled through but it didn't teach him a thing. He still eats and drinks whatever he pleases.

Is there an organization for spouses of diabetics like Alcoholics for people who must live with alcoholics? I can't leave this man because I have two sons and an 83-year-old father who need a home. I need some advice.—Rose In The Face in Springfield

Dear Rose: Please try Recovery, Inc. Look in the phone book and go to the next meeting. You need the emotional support of individuals who are coping, successfully, with a variety of continuing problems.

Had you stayed with the "head shrinker," he might have helped you realize that nobody can keep a self-destructive person from killing himself. You have the power to run your life, but not your husband's, and that's where your head should have been these past 18 years.

Dear Ann Landers: Wanted: A father who is willing to "train" a child in the way he should go and when he is old he will not depart from it.

Sign—my letter—A Mother Who Is Failing

Dear Mother: If your husband won't help you, get a professional counselor who will. And don't feel you are failing. Some kids go haywire in spite of good training from both parents. Why? That's the 64-million question and I have no answer.

Black Canadian Heroes Now Get Recognition

TORONTO (CP) — When a Toronto woman set out to find historical black Canadian heroes with which her fourth-generation-Canadian children could identify, she found enough for a book.

Rella Braithwaite is working on a book about the arrival and settlement of the first Canadian black settlers and visiting libraries across Canada to research it.

Mrs. Braithwaite is no newcomer to her field of study. She writes on black history for Africa Speaks, a newspaper for the Toronto black community, and on current events for Contrast, periodical for blacks.

She wrote a 60-minute historical script for CBC radio about the black settlers who came to Canada from the United States along the Underground Railroad, the network which helped runaway slaves escape to freedom.

Mrs. Braithwaite became interested in black history in Canada after she saw her children researching her own feelings as a teen-ager.

"I was afraid we were losing our identity," she said. It was her search for this identity for herself and her children that led her to a book on Canadian black history.

"Although there are certain differences in outlook between blacks who were born here and those who have recently immigrated from the West Indies, all of our ancestors did come from Africa," Mrs. Braithwaite said.

Mrs. Braithwaite has become more and more involved in Toronto's black community. In 1973, she was co-author of a booklet on prominent black Canadian women entitled Women of Our Times, published by the Canadian Negro Women's Association.

She also helped a Black Heritage group prepare a brief on Canadian blacks for government use during Heritage Ontario, a multi-cultural conference in 1972.

"I think it's important not only for black Canadians but for all minority groups to be able to relate to history in order to feel a real part of our country, and I hope my book will be of interest to Canadians of all descents," she said.

German Scholar Completes Monumental Task on Time

LONDON (CP) — In 1946 a German-born scholar named Nikolaus Pevsner worked out the task he would take on "moral" commission on historic monuments at least 375 years to complete its inventory of notable English buildings. He decided to show that the job could be done by one dedicated man in just under 25 years.

Right on cue, Sir Nikolaus Pevsner, as he now is, has published the last of his monumental Buildings of England series—46 volumes covering every English county, with two for London, totalling 20,000 pages and 8.5 million words.

Now aged 72, he has written 25 of these volumes entirely himself, travelling 70,000 miles in a battered car driven by his wife until her death two years ago.

The job meant a seven-day, 96-hour working week perusally examining hundreds of churches, inns, manor-houses, castles and 20th-century office blocks, and writing up his notebooks at the end of the day in a modest hotel room.

It is, says critic and historian A. J. P. Taylor, "a tremendous achievement comparable to climbing Everest or running the four-minute mile. . . . No one is ever likely to attempt this task single-handed again."

Without Pevsner, says Taylor, "we were men half-blind, only vaguely aware of the rich legacy that our forefathers left us." The next nine volumes have established such a reputation that the question "Is it in Pevsner" has become virtually a yardstick of architectural merit.

Pevsner, a refugee from Hitler's Germany, got the idea from the German Denkmäler series, established before the Second World War by an architectural historian who bicycled round the nation while taking notes.

It has been said that perhaps only someone with Teutonic gifts of thoroughness, tendency and orderliness could attempt a job of such magnitude, but Pevsner's scholarship is worn lightly and mixed with highly personal reactions to the monuments he describes.

Of Shakespeare's bust in the parish church at Stratford-upon-Avon, he says the sculptor, Gerard Johnson, "succeeded in making the hard look a self-satisfied schoolmaster."

"Small Perp. of no interest" was his concise comment on one church in the Perpendicular style.

Although he hates the "brutalism" of such modern buildings as London's concrete Hayward Gallery, he can defend some contemporary designs in spirited fashion. Describing the modern St. Catherine's College, Oxford, as "a perfect piece of architecture," he says if young people don't like it, "that may be an argument against them rather than against the college."

His period of work was first to have research assistants extract all available information about a county from printed sources. This often made a pile of paper a foot high. Next, he would take an ordnance map with a scale of one mile to the inch and for each square of the map, make a list of buildings and monuments to be visited.

"He made it a rule never to look at the research material until he had jotted down his own impressions, using the printed sources only to verify facts. Fieldwork would end each day around 6 p.m. and then would come long hours of writing up his notes.

"You had to do it while the memory was fresh," he explains, "because the next day it was overlaid by more details and was dead."

He aimed to do two counties a year, as well as lecturing at three universities, participating in numerous committees, guiding the history of art and turning out a half-dozen other books.

Ironically, neither he nor Penguin Books, the publishers, has made a profit out of the venture, though the books are steady sellers. Pevsner chose to take an editorial salary rather than royalties, and Penguin says it was always a costly and not a profit-making enterprise.

Allen Lane, Penguin's founder, once introduced Pevsner at a banquet as "my best loving author."

Even at 72, Pevsner's appetite for work is undimmed. He has just published a huge history of building styles through the ages and is embarking on four further series of guides, chronicling notable buildings of Scotland, Ireland, Wales and the United States. This time he will not be doing the field-slogging himself, but has personally selected the writers and researchers for the job.

As for his vast one-man achievement, he doubted that the books would be superseded for a while.

Railways Report More Passengers

OTTAWA (CP) — Railway officials are pleased but cautious about figures showing an upswing in passenger train travel this year.

Canadian Pacific and Canadian National Railways sources say they are still studying statistics showing the passenger increase and are unwilling to guess whether this indicates a long-term upward climb.

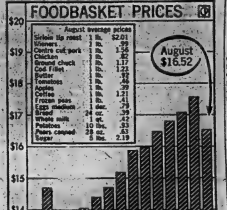
They agree rising fuel prices may be partly responsible for the jump in passenger traffic. But one CN source said improved equipment on some routes may be another factor.

Statistics Canada figures in fiscals passenger business rose five per cent in the first six months of the year from the corresponding period last year.

Passenger traffic has fallen steadily since the early 1960s except for a sudden boom in 1967 when Canada's centennial year and Expo 67 stimulated tourism.

A CN spokesman said that Montreal-Toronto passenger business has risen eight per cent in the first six months this year from the same period last year.

The fast Turbo train was suspended in January on the Montreal-Toronto run after cleared up. The Turbo has since been operating without any trouble.



Business has climbed 15 per cent in the Toronto-Windsor-Ont., region. The improved Tempo train has been operating in that area about two years.

Passenger traffic surged on the Montreal-Ottawa route in August when the Turbo was put on for a morning run. CN officials say business was six per cent higher from Ottawa to Montreal and 35 per cent higher from Montreal to Ottawa then in the same month last year.

There are some glowing figures. Traffic on the CN transcontinental trains between Montreal and Vancouver has remained unchanged while it has declined six per cent in the Maritime provinces.

CN sources could offer no explanation for the passenger downturn in the Maritimes.

FOODBASKET PRICES

A Canadian Press cross-Canada survey shows the cost of 17 basic food items is the survey — or food basket — dropped consecutively during August. The greatest decreases were in price of potatoes and tomatoes. Graph shows national average price for each item in the food basket in August, and the average total for each month since June, 1973. New Energy Sources Seen for Canada

By PETER MICHAELSON

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadians early in the 21st century may rely on energy sources that include geothermal and solar power, as well as synthetic gas and oil produced from coal, a scientist said Tuesday at the 19th Commonwealth Mining and Metallurgical Congress.

A. R. Pallister of Calgary, vice-chairman of the Science Council of Canada, presented a scenario of the country's possible energy future early in the next century that included the following:

—In British Columbia: Hydro power, natural gas and geothermal power;

—In the Prairies: Coal as a direct source and as a source synthetic gas, together with oil from the Athabasca oil sands;

—In Ontario and Quebec: Nuclear energy, hydro power, oil from the oil sands, oil and gas from frontier areas of the Arctic, gas from prairie coal gasification plants and synthetic oil;

—In the Atlantic provinces: Oil and gas from the continental shelf, supplemented by nuclear power and by hydro electricity in Newfoundland and Labrador; —Across Canada: Solar energy as an increasingly important complementary source of energy for space and water heating.

If this scenario is to have any feasibility, however, there are technological capabilities which have yet to be developed in Canada, said Mr. Pallister, a geophysicist and president of Pallister Resource Management Consultants.

These include the capability to use geothermal energy and to gasify Canadian coals, he said. Also needed was the capability to develop the Athabasca oil sands below 15 feet and the capability to use solar energy.

New Buses Provided For Montreal Kids

MONTREAL (CP) — More than 10,000 of the 230,000 students who returned to classes today were without school bus service because of a 23-day-old strike by garage and maintenance workers which already has shut down the subway and Montreal city bus service.

A spokesman for the Montreal Urban Community Transit Commission (MUTC) said it would not supply the Protestant School Board of Greater Montreal with special bus service for 9,000 of its students.

An additional 450 Catholic students from nearby Riviere des Prairies also required transportation.

"We would need a couple of hundred or more buses to offer adequate service," said the commission spokesman.

Questions and Answers On Highway Travel

Ontario Motor League
Eastern Ontario Club

QUESTION: Being interested only recreation bookings in in visiting St. Pierre and Miquelon of the Magdalen Islands, I wonder if you can supply any information about these places.

ANSWER: St. Pierre and Miquelon Islands off the southern coast of Newfoundland now constitute France's last possession in North America. The combined area of St. Pierre and Miquelon, once titled the Island of 11,000 Virgins, total only about 93 square miles.

Yet these small granite islands were much coveted and fought over by both England and France from 1600 until 1763, when, the Treaty of Versailles, France was given permanent possession.

The town of St. Pierre, most important on the islands, epitomizes the small French village. Its bewitching population, delightful French street names and interesting architecture all provide a refreshing change. Side trips may be taken twice a week from St. Pierre to Langlade a lovely beach section, and Miquelon Island. The town is accessible by boat from Fortuna, Newfoundland, and North Sydney, Nova Scotia. Air service between Sydney, Nova Scotia, and St. Pierre is usually available daily, though subject to weather conditions. A passport is desirable when entering; however, tourists without one are admitted to the islands upon payments of $1.

The archipelago of the Magdalen Islands is located in the Gulf of St. Lawrence about 130 miles from Gaspe, 70 miles from Prince Edward Island and 35 miles from Cape Breton. It is made up of seven major islands, seven of which are inhabited. The main islands in the group are: Havre-Aubert, Etang-du-Nord, Havre-aux-Maisons, Grande-Entree, Grosse Ile linked by highway (if rail) through the dunes and Ile d'Entree. There are also Ile Brion, Ile aux Cochons and Rocher aux Oiseaux.

From a distance, the coastline does not appear to be very irregular, but this impression changes when one draws near and discovers a whole world of curious forms of nature, where rocks form pillars, overhanging ledges, large arches, caverns and other odd forms that catch the eye. In general, this indented coastline has been carved in a red, clayish-red rock, but the sea has played a part in adding more color to the sandstone, gypsum and other volcanoid rocks of the islands. Everywhere else sand dunes are ubiquitous.

The undulating country-side is criss-crossed in every direction by roads and paths dotted with a variety of buildings. The houses present a picturesque spectacle, built as they are without regard to direction and giving the impression of leaves scattered by the wind.

The total area of the archipelago is about 14,000 acres. The population, in large part of Acadian origin, is 12,000 inhabitants, including about 1,500 persons of Scottish descent.

The climate is Maritime. Temperatures are not as high in summer and not so low in winter as those recorded on the mainland. From early June to the end of August they range between 50 and 80 degrees Fahrenheit, although one is assured pleasant hours on the vast beaches of fine sand.

Visitors returning from the islands say the beaches are the most beautiful in North America. They are so unique that many people pitch their tents. Swimming in the ocean can be enjoyed until almost the end of September, and for those who like it really warm, the waters of the bays and coves are kvite big.

MANY of the Island fishermen take tourists aboard their fishing boats to fish for mackerel, a magnificent fish that is as lively as trout. One can dig for clams (which the Madelinots call "coques") along the dunes; they are content on the spot and eaten with homemade bread.

The Islands are located on bird migration flight lines and in addition to many land species, there are more than 99 water species (seabirds, ducks, shields, shorebirds). Here is a sanctuary that is the delight of both artists and photographers, an ideal place for a quiet vacation in the great outdoors, far off the beaten track.

MEMO FROM HELEN GAGEN, CONSUMER ADVISOR

NOW'S THE TIME TO BUY FRONTQUARTER BEEF CUTS

Traditionally, beef frontquarter cuts are lower priced in summer and softy fall, because of heavy demand for hindquarter cuts to barbecue. So now is the time to buy short ribs, blade, shoulder roasts, and stewing beef, as well as frontquarters for your freezer.

Short of a major market upset, you'll save considerable money by stocking up now on beef frontquarter cuts. Watch the ads, take advantage of best seasonal buys, and learn exciting new ways to cook economical frontquarter cuts. I'll be glad to give suggestions — just drop me a line.

Transit Project To Start

TORONTO (CP) — Construction of the province's $23-million experimental magnetic levitation train at the Canadian National Exhibition will begin in October, says John Rhodes, Ontario minister of transportation and communications.

The controversial experiment, pushed to a planned 36-month transit system, has been criticized from opposition members of the legislature.

But Kirk Foley, president of the Ontario (Urban) Transportation Development Corp., which is building the 3.1-mile demonstration project, said costs have been reduced about $2 million following a four-month review of the project.

"In two years, the price has gone up roughly $5 million (to about $17.5 million) and, in view of the current rate of inflation, that does not appear to be unreasonable."

Mr. Foley said he would like to call tenders before Sept. 15.

The levitation system uses wheelless, driverless, 38-passenger cars floating by magnetic force over a concrete and steel track.

Pickersgill Praises Stanfield's Policy

OTTAWA (CP) — J. W. Pickersgill, a former Liberal cabinet minister, has some friendly words of advice for the Progressive Conservative party:

Retain Robert Stanfield's policy of treating French Canada as a full and equal partner in Confederation.

In a recent article in the Ottawa Citizen, Mr. Pickersgill analyzed Canadian voting patterns since Confederation and concluded:

"The Conservative party historically can neither win nor keep office without substantial support in French Canada which can be translated into seats in Parliament. A mere change in leadership will not secure that support; what is needed is a return to the attitude of Sir John A. Macdonald.

"Since 1891, the Conservative party has treated French-Canadians with condescension or indifference."

Mr. Pickersgill noted that until 1891, the Conservatives had a majority in Parliament in every election except one.

"Even in the Liberal sweep of 1974, the Liberals had just one seat more than the Conservatives in Quebec."

And, when Sir John fought his last election in 1891, the Conservatives held 30 of the 65 Quebec seats, even though they faced Wilfrid Laurier, a French-speaking Liberal leader.

Mr. Pickersgill wrote that Mr. Stanfield "is the first leader of the Conservative party since Macdonald who has regarded French-Canadians as equals."

Canada's Population 22 Million

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada's population was estimated at 22,446,000 at June 1 and the latest annual estimate from Statistics Canada puts Manitoba in the list of provinces with more than one million.

British Columbia had the greatest percentage growth during the year—3.5 per cent—among the provinces, said the statistics bureau publication released Tuesday, while Ontario had the great numerical growth.

For the sixth consecutive year, Saskatchewan had a drop in population—to 907,000 from a 1968 peak of 930,000. All other provinces have grown in population at least since 1970 when Prince Edward Island and New Brunswick also had drops in totals.

The percentage increase between June, 1973, and this June in Ontario was two per cent, in the Prairie provinces 1.4 per cent, in the Atlantic provinces one per cent and in Quebec nine-tenths of one per cent.

Radio Service Back to Normal

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Air and marine radio services were reported back to normal Tuesday after a 340-hour partial withdrawal of service by about 300 of Canada's 3,100 radio operators.

Bruce Cameron, shop steward for Local 4, Union of Canadian Transport Employees, said in Toronto Tuesday that "everything in Canada is back to normal."

He said when he reported to work at midnight Monday night, "all had returned to their stations," and he expected "no change in that status."

Ministry of transport officials were unavailable for comment.

Cheap Electricity Days Reported Over

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario Energy Board says the days of cheap electricity are over.

In two reports on Ontario Hydro, released Tuesday, the board predicts rapidly-rising costs and sharp increases in the cost of power.

The reports, delivered to Energy Minister Darcy McKeough, forecast sharp increases in the cost of electrical power over the next few years, although the recommended increases are somewhat less than those sought by Hydro.

The report dealing with Hydro's power expansion programs says expansion of generating potential will consist of small fuel and nuclear plants, leading to greater capital costs and higher prices for consumers.

The absence of low-cost hydroelectric generating sites to develop for future use, coupled with the effect of inflation, means that the doubling of the demand for electricity will require approximately a quadrupling of capital investment, the report says.

It adds that customers must be prepared to bear the cost of expansion. But the report calls on Hydro to become more conscientious.

It also suggested the Crown corporation reconsider its plan to build a nearly heavy-water plant at the Bruce nuclear generating site.

Hydro's estimates of heavy-water requirements appear to be excessive and should be looked at by an independent agency, it said.

The board's recommendations for proposed rate increases for 1975 reduced Hydro's proposed figures.

Hydro had suggested municipalities be charged 15.5-per-cent increases, but the board recommended 12.7 per cent.

Large industrial customers should pay 14.5 per cent more, the board said. The utility had asked for a 16-per-cent increase for such customers.

In making the recommendations, which are not binding on Hydro, the board said its suggestions for re-examination of Hydro's expansion plans should reduce future revenue requirements.

A spokesman for Mr. McKeough said the energy ministry will have to study the report in detail before commenting.

Hydro has until Nov. 1 to reply to the board's reports.

The first reaction from Hydro said the energy board's recommendations, if put in effect, might undermine some of the utility's borrowing power.

Board Chairman A. B. Jackman said Tuesday that if the report is implemented, Toronto Hydro will face a rate increase of about 13.4 per cent or about $2.70 on a $20 bill.

The proposed increases for municipal and industrial users ceded at the next meeting of the board of directors, scheduled for Sept. 16.

Nanticoke Fire Loss Placed at $100 Million

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario Hydro's generating station near Nanticoke, about 15 miles southeast of Simcoe, remains closed, five weeks after a fire from breakdown caused damage estimated at more than $100 million to one of the generators.

A Hydro spokesman said Tuesday that tests will be conducted this month to determine whether three other generators, working before the July 31 fire, are subject to similar breakdown.

When completed, the steam generating station on the shore of Lake Erie will have eight generators, each capable of producing 500 megawatts of power.

U.S. Chief Of Staff Is Dead

WASHINGTON (AP) — Gen. Creighton Abrams, United States Army chief of staff and former U.S. commander in Vietnam, died today of complications following surgery, the army announced.

He was 59.

He died three days before his 60th birthday.

The army said his death resulted from "complications that developed during recovery from surgical treatment of his cancerous lung," June 5.

After Abrams had that lung, he returned to duty at his Pentagon office July 25 and attended a White Housem eeting with President Ford Aug. 13.

His four days later, he developed a shortness of breath and re-entered Walter Reed Army Medical Hospital, where doctors discovered two blood clots.

One clot, it was found, reached the artery of his remaining right lung. The other was in his right leg.

Walter Reed officials said, as his condition deteriorated, that his remaining lung was overworked and his heart was under great strain.

Banker's Wife, Sons Held as Hostages

MONTREAL (CP) — Four men got away with about $50,000 from a Royal Bank of Canada branch in suburban Verdun Tuesday after threatening the lives of the bank manager's wife and three sons.

Three armed men, posing as painters, entered the home of Norman Cullen, 46, shortly after he left for work.

The men held his wife, Francoise, and three sons hostage while a fourth man visited the bank to ask for a loan, said a bank spokesman.

Mr. Cullen, discussing the loan with the man, received a telephone call from home and was told the lives of his family would be jeopardized if he did not follow instructions.

The spokesman said Mr. Cullen and a teller escorted the man to the bank vault and handed over "an undisclosed sum."

A Montreal police spokesman later placed the amount at $50,000.

Gets Licence

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — An appeals court ruled Tuesday that Dr. Bernard Finch, who served a 10-year prison term in California for the slaying of his wife, should be granted a Missouri medical license. But the Missouri Board for the Healing Arts said it would appeal the ruling.

Finch had appealed to the Missouri Court of Appeals after the board turned down his request for a licence.

Emergency Planner Relates His Woes

CAMBRIDGE (CP) — A Wawarning residents of the impending flood told a provincial inquiry Tuesday that it was too much work for one person.

Bert Camp, regional emergency planning officer, told the inquiry into the flood that he was not informed by the Grand River Conservation Authority how high the water would rise although he had six conversations with the authority during the night.

He said that no agreement was worked out for him to make the warnings, and he had no list to work from.

Mr. Camp said that the authority should have contacted regional police and radio stations, while volunteer firemen should have contacted the township residents.

Police should have called him and then he could have notified municipal officials, he said.

Mr. Camp said Canadian Forces does not have the capability to carry out night-time helicopter rescue missions "of anyone, anywhere."

He said that the provincial Emergency Measures Organization officials were told this when they met military officials after the flooding of the Grand River area May 17.

Mr. Camp testified that he phoned the military at about midnight on behalf of Cambridge to request the helicopter rescue of a man stranded in a tree in the middle of the flood-swollen river.

The military official on duty told him the earliest he could send a helicopter would be 9 a.m., he said.

He told him that a nine-hour delay was not acceptable to the city of Cambridge," said Mr. Camp.

About 6:45 a.m. on the morning following the flood Mr. Camp said he heard over a radio that the man had been rescued by a helicopter, and telephoned the military to congratulate the base commander.

He said that he later discovered that the man was rescued by a civilian helicopter.

Labor Threatens Boycott

A Quinte District Labor Council meeting Tuesday night to discuss a threatened boycott of Belleville's United Way campaign was forced into action after some of the membership showed up.

President Doug Sword was left with a handful of his executive committee in the second-storey downtown Trenton, office.

He speculated Labor Day might have had something to do with the delegates forgetting the meeting. The delegates represent about 4,000 organized laborers, who Mr. Sword says "will present behind the council concerning the boycott." Labor goes ED-ND next year.

Earlier this year, the council passed a motion moved by Ian Rankin calling for a complete boycott of donations to the United Way under which the money would be given to stronger units of the United Appeal of Canada.

Mr. Rankin's motion, charged the YMCA with "divisive disunity," the practice of getting public monies first from the campaign and again through the federal government grants.

"We want more bodies in the administration . . . in the budget committee," he added.

Hero's Award

Burly Michael Finnegan Tuesday was given a hero's citation for rescuing three youngsters from Athol Bay near Oulet, provincial park last summer. With him at presentation at provincial police Belleville district headquarters was wife, Nancy, and friend OPP Cpl. Bert Kes, of Picton.

Local Resident Receives Award For Saving Lives of Three Girls

Tuesday morning Michael John Finnegan went to work as usual as a buyer for a Belleville industry.

When he came back home he was officially a hero.

During the day he received a Royal Canadian Humane Association certificate for his valiant in saving human life.

The citation came on his birthday, Tuesday, when Mr. Finnegan turned 33.

The formal recognition of bravery came almost a year from the day he rescued three youngsters from drowning in Athol Bay near Prince Edward County's Outlet provincial park.

Aug. 23 last year was a cool summer day — but with a heavy wind disrupting the water. Mr. Finnegan was on holiday. A Picton native, who now lives in Belleville's Golfdale Rd. and works at Stewart Warner Corp., he was at the Athol Bay cottage of his brother Paul, a general practitioner in Marmora.

Suddenly he heard cries for help and ran to the water. In the bay's choppy water he saw four people.

He grabbed an extension cord, waded into water where waves were high enough to knock him over.

He threw the cord to two girls, pulling ashore Wanetta Johnson, RR. 3 Napanee, and her eight-year-old sister, Tamara.

Then he ran through brush to the shoreline and waded back for the water. He threw the cord again — this time to Karen Jane Beier, seven, of Oshawa.

The girl was alive but, tragically, clinging to the body of her mother, Mary Jennifer Beier, 35. All had been swimming when they were caught in an undertow.

Noting the rough conditions, provincial police later wrote: "There were other witnesses present at the time; none of them had the courage to jump into the water to assist." But they helped him lift the girls to shore.

Police suggested the rescuer's name for the RCHA award, only the second such proposal the force has made in the Belleville district, an OPP spokesman said.

Tuesday afternoon, Mr. Finnegan received the formal certificate — a testimonial for "heroism and presence of mind" — from OPP Supt. G. M. Keech.

But the events of a year ago linger graphically. Asked afterward how he felt about his recognition certificate, Mr. Finnegan said he'd just as soon "have rescued the other women."

Then he went back to work.

Council Urged to Meet Housing Needs in City

City council should hold a special meeting to discuss housing needs in Belleville and to make plans for servicing new vacant lands to allow housing development.

This is the feeling of Alderman Arthur Keegan who, at Tuesday's adjourned meeting of council, called for such a meeting.

He said there are 500 acres in the city still awaiting development and suggested that a concerted effort by council would accomplish two things — a badly needed accommodation and help to keep tradesmen busy.

Mayor Robert Jeffrey noted that council had already decided to take a look at servicing two of the areas referred to by the alderman.

Also, she said, council is working for plans from Cambridge Leaseholds who, earlier this year, announced plans for construction of two high rise apartment structures south of Bell Blvd. in the city's north end.

Belleville's Santa Claus Parade committee will meet in the Teacher Education Centre at the Ontario School for the Deaf, Monday, Sept. 9. Volunteer support is welcomed by the committee which reminded mailing list members there's 88 days to the '74 parade.

The band of Royal Canadian Sea Cadet Corps Quinte has been invited to take part in a parade and tattoo in the Hamilton and Niagara area next month. Reviewing officer will be former governor general Roland Michener, who presented colors to RCSCC Quinte during his visit to Belleville in 1970.

Donations Needed

Local residents with donations for muscular dystrophy are being asked to send the donations to fireman Jack Matthews, at the city fire department. Firemen are key organizers for raising funds against the disease and during the Jerry Lewis television telethon Monday, donors repeatedly phoned the fire alarm switchboard seeking an address for donations.

Alderman Wants Tunnel Instead of Bay Bridge

Construction of an underwater tunnel rather than a high-level bridge should be considered as a replacement for the obsolete swing bridges across the Bay of Quinte between Belleville and Rosemore.

That is the contention of Alderman Jean Smith, who at Tuesday's adjourned council meeting, introduced a notice of motion calling for investigation of the feasibility of a tunnel. The notice of motion will be discussed at next week's council meeting.

Three weeks ago Alderman Stu Meeks introduced a notice of motion calling for a city delegation to meet with John Rhodes, minister of transportation and communications to discuss a high-level bridge.

But before the motion could be discussed in council, the highways minister in an unexpected visit to Belleville last week, announced his department is proceeding with plans for a pew high-level structure.

Alderman Meeks admitted Tuesday that he was "at loss for words" following the minister's announcement.

The alderman agreed with Mayor Robin Jeffrey that in view of the announcement for a new bridge it would now be an insult to forward the motion to Mr. Rhodes and withdrew his motion.

"Mr. Rhodes must have a finger on the public pulse," commented Alderman Meeks. "My only concern now is how long will will be before construction starts.

"I wouldn't want it to be five years from now," he said.

Mayor Jeffrey promised that council would be kept fully informed about plans and possible location for the new bridge.

Alderman Smith then introduced her notice of motion calling for investigation of a possible tunnel instead of a high-level bridge.

There was no discussion on the motion but following the meeting the alderman said she would not like to see a subsistence 60-foot high bridge over the bay with possible disruption to city park property and long approaches on each side of the bay if a tunnel were feasible.

She said she feels a tunnel might make costly property acquisitions unnecessary and would prevent long maintenance problems than a high-level bridge.

In support of her idea for a tunnel, Alderman Smith cited Canada's proposed Confederation Bridge, a high-level bridge which will span the Gulf of Northumberland between Prince Edward Island and New Brunswick.

She noted that originally consultants had recommended an overpass with long approaches. However, after a review of the matter, she said the consultants are recommending an underpass which could be built at a slightly higher cost than an overpass.

City Rejects 'Humps' As Speed Curbs

The city traffic and light committee wants no part of installing traffic "humps" in roadways as a means of controlling vehicle speeds.

Such a suggestion was received by the committee in July from a resident on Front St. But, following investigation by the city engineer, the committee said it felt the disadvantages would far outweigh any benefit.

City Engineer Joe Angelo, in a report to the committee, said the opinion of the ministry of transportation and communications legal section is that there is no authority under the Municipal Act for installation of "humps" on roads.

Also in at least one regional municipality where they have been installed — Ottawa - Carleton — the residents now are "petitioning for their removal."

Disadvantages of such "humps" include noise factor, they may be hazardous to motor vehicles and trucks, there could be danger where the operator is unaware of the humps, and they could pose difficulties in street cleaning and snow plowing.

Also a design appropriate for controlling car speed might mean a truck speed as low as five miles per hour, which would hamper emergency vehicles.

The city engineer's report was adopted by the committee and Police Chief Douglas Crosbie will have a report on possible speed regulations for the next meeting.

Also at Tuesday's traffic meeting, a letter was received from a Linton Park Rd. resident calling for the installation of traffic lights at the Victoria — Herchimer Ave. intersection.

The resident suggested the unneeded but "politically allocated" traffic lights at Victoria and Farley could be uprooted and placed where they are needed — at Victoria and Herchimer.

Earlier in the afternoon, at the adjourned council meeting, Alderman Jack Ireland, chairman of the traffic committee referred to the request for lights at Victoria and Herchimer.

It was noted that present plans called for installation of lights at the Victoria - Herchimer intersection next year.

Lights for the intersection at Sidney and Moira streets now are on order and hopefully will be installed before the end of the year, he said.

Council Backs Existing Street-widening Project

The Victoria Ave. reconstruction project between Pinnacle and William Streets will go ahead according to plans — four lanes to John St. and two lanes between John and William.

This was the decision of council Tuesday when it, by a 6-2 margin a motion by Alderman Arthur Keegan to widen the two-lane section of roadway.

The two-lane roadway section between John and William streets, which calls for a 66-foot right of way and a 16-foot boulevard on the south side of the street, came under fire from Alderman Keegan at last week's council meeting and the matter was referred to this week for discussion.

Tuesday, council was told that traffic surveys show that while four lanes are needed to John street, a two-lane road with south side parking would be adequate from John to William for many years.

The design of he two block project was changed to a two-lane roadway in such that the street can be widened at minimal cost if this is needed in the future.

Alderman Keegan, however, maintained that in view of today's escalating costs the two-lane roadway section should be widened now.

To alderman said the result two-lane section is actually narrower than the roadway east of the reconstruction.

City Engineer Joe Angelo however, said the result two-lane section conformed with provincial ministry requirements and that the travelled roadway width would be as wide as the existing pavement.

Alderman Jack Ireland asked if the roadway width could be changed at this date and if so, how much would it cost.

City Manager Wilbur Purcell admitted that widening would not be impossible. He noted, however that work is now well advanced and if changes are made the contractor would ask for compensation.

The cost, he said, would be more than he would recommend.

Smoking Ban Proposed

Smoking in the city hall council chambers during council meetings will be a thing of the past, if a notice of motion by Alderman Joe Cox receives council approval.

The alderman presented the motion at Tuesday's adjourned meeting and will be discussed at the next meeting of council.

Some years ago a smoking ban during council meetings was discussed by aldermen but nothing have continued to be the rule rather than an exception.

The shift of 37 Black Diamond employees laid off three weeks ago returned to their jobs Tuesday.

John Rigg, plant manager, said "lay offs at the plant have been going on since time immemorium," and that this lay off was the result of a marked trend of wholesalers and retailers cutting back on inventory.

"The lay off will within the three-week period predicted by Mr. Rigg when the first workers were sent home.

He said the plant now is back to regular working hours and employees have been returned to their normal jobs.

Local Woman Forced to Leave Cyprus When Violence Began

A Belleville nurse is safe in England after being evacuated from a British military base in Cyprus.

Mrs. Granville Conroy, the former Deborah Rose of Belleville, now is living with her husband's parents in Bradford. She had been living in married quarters in Limassol, Cyprus, from which she was evacuated to the British base twice during the fighting.

Mrs. Conroy, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alex Rose of Belleville, married a Royal Army Signal Corps corporal last year and accompanied him to Cyprus in November. Her husband will remain on the island until his tour of duty there is completed in November.

After fighting began between Greek and Turkish forces, British families were put under a 7 p.m. curfew. Mrs. Conroy said she did not see any fighting, but did gunshots close to her house.

She said many Cypriots are sleeping out on the beaches and in football pitches. Mrs. Conroy said the climate is cold at night and sickness is breaking out among the people. The British army is attempting to provide some tents for the homeless.

Mrs. Conroy is a graduate of BCI and of Hotel Dieu Hospital in Kingston.

Harness Racing Loses Top Flight Competitor

A man whose name was ... and will remain ... synonymous with harness racing in this area is dead.

Since 1954, the name Gerrard Walsh has, appeared in the lineups for events at Quinte Exhibition and Raceway here.

He wasn't long establishing himself as a competent driver.

And I know that, he was likely one of the most respected by those he competed against, as well as the racing fans.

He put a great deal of time and effort into the sport he enjoyed so much.

It is not surprising that the man became a first rate participant on a sport which demands skill and determination and guts.

Walsh started in 54 races at Quinte this season.

He was also busy at Kingston's Frontenac Downs, and Peterborough's Kawartha Downs.

Gerrard was the top percentage driver at Ottawa's Rideau Carleton this year.

Gerrard Walsh succeeded where so many of us fail, painfully short of the mark.

He was able to reach the top of the ladder in his chosen field.

No man has the right to expect to accomplish more.

Yet Walsh went a step further.

He earned respect along the way.

Certainly, the sport of harness racing today starts the burden of grief carried by Gerrard's family and friends.

It has to be that way.

Won't it be an amazing thing if the Chuck Exley for Don Jonas trade which Winnipeg and Hamilton dropped on the sports world (shattering dozen sections of it, we suspect) Monday, works out for both sides?

We still find it hard to accept.

But, time will tell.

There could be more to this one than either side is willing to discuss right now.

White Sox Rookie Hot

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Jack Kucek has always had "confidence to make it in baseball because baseball now he has the confidence.

Making only his third start in the American League, the southpaw Chicago White Sox pitcher won his first game in the big leagues Tuesday night 6-0, and announced plans for more successes.

"My next goal," he said after scaling Kansas City Royals 2-1 with his relief help, "is to go the distance in a ball game."

In other American League action Tuesday, Jeffries beat the Detroit Tigers 5-1 in the first game of a doubleheader before losing the nightcap 8-7, Minnesota Twins swept a pair from A's defeated California Angels 7-6.

Gaylord Perry didn't allow a hit for five innings and fashioned with a six-hitter as Cleveland's first-game victory over Detroit.

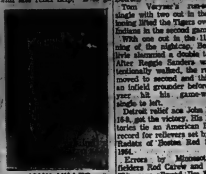
Tom Veryzer's run-scoring single with two out in the 11th inning lifted the Tigers over the Indians in the second game.

With one out in the 11th inning of the nightcap, Ben Oglivie slammed a double to left. After Reggie Sanders was intentionally walked, the runners moved to second and third on an infield grounder before Veryzer hit his game-winning single to left.

Detroit rallied ace John Hiller, 16-8, get the victory. His 18 victories tie an American League record for relievers set by Dick Radatz of Boston Red Sox in 1964.

Errors by Minnesota infielders Phil Carvie and Danny Thompson allowed Jim Fregosi to score with the tie-breaking run and Texas upset on to beat the Twins.

With the score tied 3-3, Fregosi drew a one-out walk in the ninth inning. After Lenny Randle struck out, Toby Harrah laced a grounder to Carew, who booted the ball. It then bounced toward Thompson, who fielded it but threw wildly to first, the ball bounding into the dugout. Fregosi was permitted to score on the play when second base umpire Bill Kunkel waved he had rounded second as Thompson threw the ball.



Harrah, who wound up as second, scored when Billy Hurdle drove lined a double to right. Joe Lovitto then singled home Hargrove, with the third run of the inning.

Ken Holtzman pitched a five-hitter for his 17th victory of the season to lead Oakland over California. The A's took advantage of Nolan Ryan's wildness.

Cards Whip Expos Twice

Brock Gets No. 99 in Sweep

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

To stop Lou Brock from stealing bases, it seems you have to either have for a lot of rain or keep him off the baseplate.

The first method worked Monday for Montreal Expos pitcher Ganse against Brock and St. Louis Cardinals was rained out.

The second method worked in the opener of their twi-night doubleheader Tuesday. Brock was retired in each of his four trips to the plate, although the Cards posted a 5-1 victory.

But the Expos ran out of methods in the second game, won by St. Louis 9-4, and Brock swiped his 99th base of the season.

Brock now is just five short of Maury Wills' record of 104 stolen bases set in 1962.

Elsewhere in the National League, Pittsburgh Pirates beat Philadelphia Phillies 9-3, Cincinnati Reds defeated Houston Astros 7-5, San Francisco Giants outscored Los Angeles Dodgers 9-5, Atlanta Braves topped San Diego Padres, 7-3 and New York Mets swept a pair from Chicago Cubs 3-0 and 11-4.

Brock singled to lead off the third inning of the second game against Steve Rogers. With a 1-1 count on Ted Simmons, he broke for second and easily beat the throw from catcher Barry Foote.

"The only way you can stop the guy is keep him off base," Foote said of Brock.

"The pressure is on the catcher, too, because you don't want to be the guy who goes in the book for No 100th."

Jim Rooker, 11-16, pitched a six-hitter for the Pirates and also contributed with the bat. His double started Pittsburgh on its way to a seven-run outburst in the fifth inning, and his two-run single capped that rally.

Rickie Zisk's bases-loaded triple was the big hit in the middle of the Pirates' seven-run explosion.

John Montefusco, promoted to the Giants on Monday from their Phoenix farm club, took over, with none out in the first inning Bill the Giants' first two batters and checked the Dodgers on just one run the rest of the way for the San Francisco victory.

The Giants scored in front 2-1 in the second when Dodger starter Doug Rau issued three walks and then Gary Matthews hit the first grand-slam of his career. They added two runs in the third when Montefusco, in his first time at bat of the year, hit a two-run homer.

The Reds scored a pair of runs in the ninth to beat Houston. Pinch-hitter Terry Crowley led off with a walk and moved to third on an errant pickoff throw. Crowley hold third when Pete Rose beat out a high hopper to shortstop. For a single, but came home on Joe Morgan's single.

Rose, who took third on Morgan's hit, scored on a sacrifice fly by Johnny Bench.

Mike Lum drove in the tie-breaking run and then moved what proved to be the winning run in the ninth inning for the Mets, who added four unearned runs in the eighth.

Lum's Run drives in right scored Dusty Baker, who had walked and stolen second. Lum scored when Craig Robinson bounced a single through the middle.

John Milner drove in the only runs of the Mets-Cubs opener with a homer and a single. Ron Hodges had three singles in the seventh inning of the nightcap with a two-run single as the Mets extended their winning streak to six games.

OHA Cracks Down

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario Hockey Association has decided to crack down on fighting hockey players, it was announced Tuesday.

Bill Hanley, secretary of the OHA, said the association introduced a rule Aug. 24 that a player who receives a five-minute fighting major will be thrown out for the balance of the game.

He said that on Aug. 28 the OHA executive committee decided any player who was assessed three fighting majors in the course of a season would be reported to the president of the OHA for "further disciplinary action."

At the same time the committee decided that a player involved in a fight after a game was over would be suspended for the next game and "receive possible further action at the discretion of the president."

We decided on the announcement these changes until we had met with Ontario Premier Davis and that meeting has just terminated."

He said he could not comment whether the premier approved of the changes.

Hanley said the changes were made as a result of a report commissioned by the Ontario government into hockey violence. The report was ordered after a playoff series last year between two Junior B clubs was called off after one said it feared continuing because had ily harm had been threatened following a game marred by numerous free-for-alls and several injuries.

Hanley said the OHA agreed with "the majority of the report" but there were areas which required more study. He said the rule changes would be binding on all OHA branches. They include the Ontario Minor Hockey Association, the Northern Ontario Hockey Association and the Metropolitan Toronto Hockey League and 15 branches. Thunder Bay and Ottawa District clubs are not covered by the OHA.

Argonaut "Gadget Play" is for the Birds

JERRY WILLIAMS

TORONTO (CP) — Explaining why he made a questionable call is becoming almost a habit with coach John Rauch of Toronto Argonauts.

For the third time this season, Argos lost a Canadian Football League game, mainly because of a questionable call by Rauch, dropping a 23-21 decision to Montreal Alouettes before a record crowd of 34,691 Tuesday night.

In one earlier game against Hamilton Tiger-Cats, Rauch called a third-down rouging play which failed and he neglected to admitting it was the turning point in Argo loss. A later game saw Winnipeg come from behind Rauch ordered a punt on the last play of the game, which the Bombers turned into a winning touchdown.

Tuesday night, Rauch was in trouble from the start. In the first minute of the game he sent Jerry Williams, a Canadian third quarterback with a "gadget play" which failed when Carmichael's high, floating pass into the end zone was intercepted by Dickie Harris.

The Argos were leading 11-9 at the time and the interception snuffed out a promising drive.

After the game, Rauch defended the play.

"The gadget play—you work on it and you work on it in practice and it works perfectly every time," said Rauch.

"The instructions are not to throw it if it will set you in trouble. But, in game conditions, a rookie feels the pressure."

Coach Marv Levy of the Als also defended Rauch's call.

"I think it was a good call and I'm not trying to be a wise guy," said Levy.

"Of course it wasn't executed well, but that doesn't detract from the call."

Montreal's win provided with a four-point lead in the Eastern Conference. The Als now have a 5-2 record, while the other three clubs—Toronto, Ottawa and Hamilton—are tied with 3-4 records.

All of Montreal's offense came from the boot of Don Sweet who provided four field goals—the last one providing the winning margin at 9:33.

Toronto's only touchdown came on a 61-yard interception return by cornerback Dave Ridgway. Rickey Zeron Andrusyshyn provided the convert, a field goal and a single.

The character of the game—a defensive battle along the lines of many that have bored fans this season—prompted Levy to propose a change in CFL rules to promote more offense.

"I know the fans will go nuts when I say this, but what Canadian football needs is four downs," said Levy.

"Four downs and unlimited blocking on punt returns. If Canadian fans want their game livened up, that's what they need."

Rauch, on the other hand, seemed to favor an improved performance from his offensive unit rather than a rule change.

"We made a spark or chance every now and again but just can't put a couple of sparks together to produce touchdowns," said Rauch.

Williams And Ealey Not to Be

HAMILTON (CP) — It was only in the books that Calgary should be Jerry Williams' quarterback.

Perhaps their brightest moment together—"pretty cool afternoon in December 1971, when Ealey led Williams' Hamilton Tiger-Cats in the Canadian Football League championship.

But the Hamilton coach never was convinced about a running quarterback, which Ealey did a lot of that year and during his undistinguished years at the University of Texas.

The Texas have fallen on dark days and Monday night shipped Ealey to Winnipeg Blue Bombers in exchange for aging quarterback Don Jonas.

"In 1972 we were able to accentuate his strong points," Williams said Tuesday. "But subsequent defenses adjusted to his style."

Williams didn't say outright, but it was obvious the Tiger-Cats are blaming Ealey's 1973 performance for them missing the playoffs for the first time in 14 years.

Jonas, 32 and 11 years Ealey's senior in Williams' type of quarterback, a passer who has learned from experience the dangers of rolling out of a protective pocket.

"Jonas is a drop-back type of quarterback," said Williams. "I'm a drop-back type of coach."

Williams said that despite published reports, there was nothing personal in the decision to trade Ealey.

"We tried to adapt our offence to fit his abilities," Williams said, "and at the same time maintain a certain amount of drop-back physiology which at certain times he did well.

"It's just that Jonas gives us the drop-back pattern that we want."

Nor did Williams feel that the ages of the two players gave either team an advantage, even though Jonas has said this year will be his last as a player.

The trade, however, caught the two principals off guard.

"I really can't see the justification for such a trade," said Ealey.

Jonas "really couldn't believe it" when told.

"I don't even know the reason why. That's the thing that shocks me also."

Argos May Get Dave Buchanan

TORONTO (CP) — Dave Buchanan, the leading rusher in the Eastern Football Conference with Hamilton Tiger-Cats in 1972, says he wants to play for Toronto Argonauts.

Buchanan was here Tuesday night with his agent, Pete Rubinate of Detroit, to try to promote a trade between Hamilton and Toronto.

Buchanan retired after the 1973 season but, the Ticats said, owns his Canadian Football League rights and have even threatened a lawsuit if he proceeded with plans to play for Hawaii of the World Football League this season.

"He wants to be traded to Toronto," said Rubinate. "I think Argos could use him."

Festival Opens

NIAGARA - ON-THE-LAKE, Ont. (CP) — The Shaw Festival begins its second year of winter programming Nov. 2 with the 1974-75 International Concert Series that will feature attractions such as the Vienna Choirboys, the Royal Winnipeg Ballet and the Moscow Chamber Orchestra.

There will be two Saturday evening series, each made up of five concerts, available on a subscription for about $15.

A Charlottetown Festival musical, Anne of Green Gables, will lead Series A. Other Series A attractions will include the Toronto York Winds Plus, the Canadian Opera Company's production of La Boheme and the 30-voice Mendelssohn Choir of Toronto.

Series B will feature Toronto pianist Marion Koerdt and the Festival Singers of Canada with a Carlisle program.

In addition to the two series, there will be eight special attractions offering the Manitoba Theatre's production of The Dybbuk; the Mohawk Opera Theatre's production of Amahl and the Night Visitors and the Buffalo Philharmonic in An Evening of Scott Joplin.

Thomas Barrower, festival programming manager, said that the overwhelming response to last season's concert series was responsible this year's more ambitious season.

Absenteeism Way of Life For Workers in Australia

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — Georgi Ermolenko, the young Soviet defector who changed his mind about staying in Australia, has gone home, no doubt puzzled by the power and politics of labor unions in Australia.

Ermolenko, a violinist, was unable to leave after deciding he didn't want to stay here at all, because airport clerks grounded his plane. Despite his classwork, they thought he was being forced by the Soviet embassy to return to Russia.

The Australian government solved the problem by flying Ermolenko to Singapore in an Australian Air Force plane.

Ermolenko has joined the ranks of other notable defecting Frank Sinatra—as well as Australians themselves who have found that Australian unions are among the world's most militant.

In various parts of the country, recent widespread strikes brought shortages of fuel, beer, meat, gasoline and milk. Public transport and mail deliveries have been cut in several states.

John Edgerton, one of the senior figures in he Australian Labor party and union movement has maintained that strikes are bringing anarchy to the country.

"There is no doubt that unions are engaging in disputes without regard to the general public or the Australian economy," he said in a letter to the leaders of 40 unions, calling for a national inquiry into the unions.

Figures from the Australian Bureau of Statistics show that in the first four months of this year, 3.4 million work-days were lost because of strikes. This was almost one third more than for the whole of 1973. The loss in salaries was estimated at $65.3 million.

Loss to industry has not been calculated.

A full-scale inquiry into union conduct might also lead to a closer study of Australian working habits. Industrialists claim that strikes and rocketing pay claims are only part of the gloomy economic picture that has lead to 16-per-cent inflation and the threat of mass unemployment.

Statistics on the habits of the Australian worker show that about 300,000 hard-drinking Australians miss work every day because of hangovers.

This figure comes from Sir Edward Dunlop, chairman of the Victorian Foundation on Alcoholism and Drug Dependence.

He estimated that 10 per cent of Australia's five-million-member work force was absent on any one day, six per cent because of excessive drinking.

He said about 500,000 workers are either alcoholics or well on the way to becoming ones.

In further condemnation of the Australian worker came from Russell Burge, the personnel manager of the giant Broken Hill Proprietary, Australia's biggest company, which employs 60,000 persons.

He estimated Australian industry lost more man-hours through absenteeism than strikes.

"Having time off from work, for one reason or another is becoming a way of life," he said to a conference of the Australian Institute of Management.

He had visited one plant on a Monday and found 65 per cent of the work force absent. The national cost of absenteeism was about $375 million a year for every one per cent of the work force who took a day off. Total losses are several billion, he said.

Poor Finishing Costs Olympics

Belleville Olympics dropped their second game in a row on Sunday as Oshawa Royals shaded them 2-1.

The loss is only the fourth for the Olympics this season against six wins.

Belleville came out in control and scored the first goal early in the first half.

The locals had trouble finishing their plays for the remainder of the half and couldn't come up with another goal, even though the opportunity presented itself many times.

Funder Zolevsky scored the opening goal for Belleville.

In the second half the Olympics lost control of midfield and Oshawa was allowed to set up their plays.

John Erickson came up with both Ottawa markers in the second half taking advantage of a couple of defensive lapses by the locals.

The Olympics play again on Sunday in Ottawa against the Nationals.

Tonight they travel to Smiths Falls for a game against the Bay of Quinte Soccer League game against winning Cobourg Tony's.

Radar Spots Moths In Budworm Fight

FREDERICTON (CP) — For more than a decade, aircraft and chemicals have waged a battle against spruce budworm infestation in New Brunswick forests.

Now, silent sophisticated equipment has joined the attack.

For the last two spraying seasons, radar has been used as an aid in plotting budworm moth flight paths.

Scientists say it is the first time radar has been used to study the after-dark activity of the moths and to check the accuracy of human observations.

D. O. Greenback of the Maritime Forest Research Laboratory, Fredericton, has co-ordinated the project involving about 30 scientific and technical personnel.

The use of radar to track insect flights was developed by Dr. Glen Schaefer of Kitchener, Ont., who first used radar as a post-graduate student in England to follow migratory bird patterns.

With Dr. R. C. Rainey from the Centre of Tropical Pest Research, Dr. Schaefer developed methods of tracking night flights of locusts in Australia.

Th New Brunswick program started in 1973 with Dr. Schaefer and Dr. Rainey and grew to include Dr. A. J. Armstrong, a forest entomologist with the Chemical Research Institute in Ottawa; specialists from University of New Brunswick represented by natives of Cibe-Geigy Canada, a pharmaceutical firm.

In 1973, a base camp was set up and radar equipment was installed in a clearing about a mile from an airstrip near Chipman, N.B. An observation platform was constructed at treetop level and a meteorological tower was erected nearby.

The team also operated an insect trap on a light aircraft for collection of insect samples at various altitudes and times. This was a study of the nature and composition of airborne insect populations.

Radar personnel studied insect flight activity, including time of takeoff, rate of climb, speed, gliding, duration, density at various altitudes and moth concentrations related to weather systems.

The team also operated miniature barrage balloons and a pilot balloon to measure wind velocity and air temperature.

Details were amassed on the effect of wind systems in concentrating spruce budworm moths in flight and on the ground.

The tracking project at Chipman has shed new light on spruce budworm moth activity in the forests.

Radar tracking has permitted the flights to be observed under all conditions, unaffected by dark, cloud cover, storms or other conditions that would interfere with visual observation.

Researchers said the study has raised the possibility of aerial attacks on moth flight masses, with night spraying.

Polio Victim Started Business With $3.50

SAINT JOHN, N.B. (CP) — Having only $3.50 is a big handicap when you want to start a business.

But to Raymond Fillmore, the lack of capital investment was the least of his handicaps.

His legs and most parts of his arms paralyzed by polio, he set out 19 years ago to earn a living on his own.

Today, he has used that $3.50 and his determination to build up a thriving gift shop in the Saint John Rehabilitation Hospital.

The hospital includes the veteran's wing where he has lived since his polio attack 22 years ago.

Mr. Fillmore not only operates the retail end of his business, he also is the manufacturer. He makes handicrafts and weaves place-mats and women's scarves.

In fact he has become so expert in his crafts that he has won awards such as first and second prizes in a fair in Calgary in 1972. Last year he won a bronze medal in a similar competition in Vancouver.

"I take great pride in the fact that I am earning my own living," he said. "Doctors had told me I wouldn't be able to do anything for the rest of my life. According to me for 19 years I have been doing the impossible."

He weaves on a modified loom that can be operated by one hand.

When he started, he could weave only about three mats a day but now he can weave out to eight if he works all day long.

He mainly does the work between serving customers.

Mr. Fillmore has a touch-tone telephone at the shop because he can't dial. He writes receipts or sales by holding the pen in the first two fingers of his right hand palm up.

The polio attack struck in 1952. Mr. Fillmore was working as a steam fireman and motor mechanic at the National Harbors Board in Saint John. Besides his wife he had two small children then to support. His son and daughter now are married.

Mr. Fillmore works hard—usually seven days a week and from seven in the morning to almost midnight. But this is dictated largely by a desire to stay busy.

"I don't want to be better than the next guy. As long as I can earn enough money to maintain my car and go to places I want to, that's it. . . It's a funny way to do business." He can't drive his 1971 station wagon, but friends transport him in it.

Inside Story of Watergate Is Written by Jeb Magruder

By ED SIMON
The Canadian Press

For anyone who has paid reasonably close attention to the continuing story of Watergate, there is little new information to be gleaned from Jeb Stuart Magruder's account about the scandal Reel.

The value of the book, An American Life: One Man's Road to Watergate, is in the clues it offers to the motivations of the author and his fellow participants and the insight it gives of the Byzantine atmosphere that pervaded the Nixon White House.

As deputy director of the Committee to Re-elect the President, Magruder, 39, portrays himself as a reluctant party to the birth of the clandestine organization that broke into the Democratic party's national headquarters in search of political intelligence.

Once the culprits were caught, he was one of the chief architects of the cover-up. He is currently serving a sentence of 10 months to four years after pleading guilty to a charge of conspiracy to obstruct justice.

A cooperative witness before the Senate Watergate committee, he impressed television viewers with his youthful good looks and his acknowledgement of a married contrast with some senior colleagues of the impropriety of the undercover operations in which he had been engaged.

Magruder's description of his early life and background makes it abundantly clear why he overcame his scruples and went along with the conspiracy.

He is the third Magruder in four generations to go to prison. His great-grandfather was jailed for smuggling boots and shoes to Confederate troops during the Civil War. His grandmother was convicted of misapplying $300,000 in bank funds as treasurer of a shipping corporation.

The author's father was content to live quietly as the operator of a small printing firm but his mother spurred Jeb to greater ambitions.

Graduating from a small New England college after 21 months' service in Korea, he took a succession of sales executive jobs, developing an aptitude for the work but frequently differing with his superiors.

At the same time, he became involved in Republican party politics, working successfully to elect an Illinois congressman in 1961 and, despite private misgivings, as a district campaign chairman for Barry Goldwater's presidential campaign two years later.

Moving to yet another job in California, Magruder helped organize the state for Richard Nixon in the early stages of the 1968 campaign but eased himself out to avoid becoming enshrouded in a dispute between state and national party officials.

In 1969 he was hired by H. R. Haldeman, the president's chief of staff, as a special assistant concerned with improving White House public relations. He saw it as a springboard to unlimited success.

"Jeb," I told myself, 'you're not going to screw this one up. You like this job and you're going to do what they tell you.'

He did so, faithfully serving Haldeman and later the tactician, estimable John Mitchell who was his immediate superior, on the re-election committee.

The author writes that he abandoned his scruples when he sensed that his associates were attempting to saddle him with responsibility for the Watergate scandal and began to co-operate with the prosecutors.

Summing up, Magruder says he, like many members of his generation, "placed far too much emphasis on our personal ambitions, on achieving success as measured in materialistic terms, and far too little emphasis on moral and humanistic values."

"Instead of applying our private morality to public affairs, we accepted the president's standards of political behavior, and the results were tragic for him and for us."

Rhodesians Cherish Sundowners

SALISBURY, Rhodesia (CP) — One of the earliest reputations acquired by Rhodesians was that of having a tremendous thirst.

And today the tradition that brought about this reputation—the tradition of the sundowner—is just as solidly entrenched in local customs as it was in the earliest days of European settlement here.

The origins of the sundowner date back to when malaria was rife in this part of Africa. It was said to be a wise medicinal precaution to take a whisky in the evening in camp, not as a precaution, against mosquitoes, but rather against the effect of their bites.

It was a treatment that was often adopted with enthusiasm far beyond medical necessity.

The hewnfists who wrote about this part of the world in the 1920s and 1930s added to the sundowner's reputation. Visitors from other parts of the world tried to live up to the tradition of the sundowner and on returning home added to the legend of the Rhodesian thirst.

Today the malaria is almost gone, but the sundowner goes from strength to strength.

"I never drink during the day—it spoils my sundowner," a Rhodesian said in all seriousness while discussing the subject.

In Canada, the early evening unwinding over a drink would go under the title of cocktails.

But there's something special in the Rhodesian sundowner. The daily friendly farewell toast to the departing sun now ranges over the taste of choice rather than the whisky of the early days.

The hot African sun is heading towards the Americas when the sundowners make their first appearance.

Exotic birds—bul-buls, pied-crows, ravens and hoopoe—add to the atmosphere with their cries as Rhodesians head for their patios and porches to relax over a drink before the evening meal.

It's a pause to be remembered with satisfaction and to be looked forward to with anticipation.

And there are those Rhodesians who are conscious of the overseas reputation of the sundowner.

Said one: "Ever since it became known we've tried to drink up to our reputation."

Attention Shifts to Howes

EDMONTON (CP) — Things changed Tuesday for Bobby Hull, Paul Henderson, Frank Mahovlich and Gerry Cheevers of Team Canada.

They got some privacy after being surrounded by reporters during the first two days of workouts for Team Canada '74.

The reason was a 46-year-old man with greying hair and two talented young sons. Gordie Howe arrived at camp—and he didn't even scrimmage.

Howe and the boys, members of Houston Aeros of the World Hockey Association, watched the afternoon scrimmage from a press box. Howe, only six pounds over his playing weight although he hasn't been on skates all summer, stepped on the ice in time to engage in wind sprints and stops and starts—exercises calculated to make 46-year-olds wish they had stayed in retirement.

Gordie asked coach Billy Harris if he could scrimmage, but accepted the decision that he might pull a groin muscle in preparation for the eight-game series with Russia that begins Sept. 17 in Quebec City.

Harris said no.

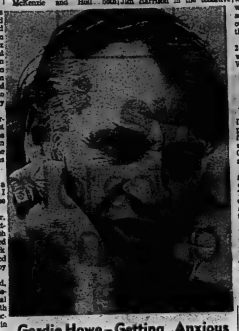
"He's the boss," said Howe, a trifle disappointed, "but I haven't had a groin pull in so long . . ."

A comparative youngster, Johnny McKenzie, 28, was outstanding in the scrimmage with three goals. He also levelled Pat Stapleton with a vicious check on his first shift and helped Andre Lacroix set up Bobby Hull for two goals.

At training camp opened, McKenzie was overlooked despite an impressive National Hockey League record with Boston Bruins and two productive but injury-plagued years in the World Hockey Association.

"I'm in shape," he said. "I've got things to prove."

In the dressing room, he was reminded that a big play in Team Canada '72's victory over the Russians was a slash by Bobby Clarke that ended in an ankle injury to brilliant centre Valery Kharlamov.



"I don't play like that any more," said the rugged McKenzie.

"But, just in case, what's his number."

McKenzie and Hull both praised Lacroix for his play. The nimble centre, who led straight-ahead speed, played briefly with Hull when they were team-mates at Chicago Black Hawks of the National Hockey League.

"He can hold the puck until the wingers catch up," said Hull, who added he would like to play with Lacroix if things continue to go well.

Harris had Hull teaming with Jim Harrison in the tentative

Belhumeur Is Suing

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The Stanley Cup champion Philadelphia Flyers have been sued for $1 million by former goalie Michel Belhumeur, who charges they failed to pay him $33,500 in playoff dividends.

Belhumeur, who played last season with the American Hockey League's Richmond Robins, the Flyers' No. 1 farm club, filed suit Aug. 5, claiming he was not paid $19,000 guaranteed to each member of the Stanley Cup team by the National Hockey League and $4,500 promised by the Flyers.

The suit contends Belhumeur, 25, and Philadelphia "had agreed that the plaintiff would receive a full share of playoff bonus money equal to that of any other hockey player on the team, whether or not the plaintiff was on the active roster of the Philadelphia Flyers or Richmond or any other team owned or controlled by the Flyers."

JOHNNY McKENZIE

Knaps has missed hitters training camp started, but he conceded that he'll change the program if required.

If official scoring had been announced Lacroix would have had at least four assists. He also set up McKenzie for a pair of outstanding opportunities thwarted by goaltender Don McLeod.

Lars-Eric Sjoberg, the Swedish International star working with Team Canada defence, will not play against Russia, and Rejean Houle added the other goalie as the Yellows beat the Blues 7-3.

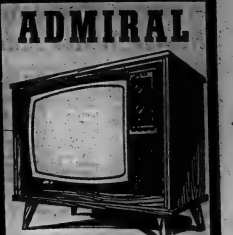
Scorers for the Blues, who led 2-0 within the first 16 minutes, were Bruce MacGregor, Tom Webster and Ralph Backstrom.

Duane Thomas Back

WASHINGTON (AP) — Duane Thomas returned as a player and presumably starting halfback for Washington Redskins Tuesday as the result of George Allen's "toughest decision ever as a coach."

Allen's reinstatement of the gifted but temperamental runner came exactly a week after Thomas was clinched because of an altercation with an assistant coach at the Redskins' training camp in Carlisle, Pa.

The rugged coaching Thomas had not twice with Allen since that incident to apologize and plead for reinstatement.



But Allen, despite praising Thomas for admitting he was wrong, had considered the answer for five days. He acknowledged over the weekend he was leaning in Thomas's favor, but noted: "Either way, it'll be unpopular with a lot of people."

It was understood that Allen had not consulted the players beforehand. Neither did he discuss the issue with other coaches except for backfield coach Ethan Walker, whom Thomas had threatened and shoved at Carlisle.

Walker was receptive to bringing Duane back," Allen said. "Charlie was for whatever I decided."

Amazon Radio Messages Revive White Indian Myth

RIO de JANEIRO, Brazil (Reuter) — A series of radio messages from the depths of the Amazon jungle has revived ancient legends about mysterious stone-age tribes of white-skinned, blue-eyed Indians roaming Brazil's unexplored hinterland.

In the messages Indian expert Ralamondo Alves reported meeting fair-skinned Indians with chestnut-brown hair and blue or green eyes near the Iplanna River in the northeastern Amazon jungle.

He told the government's National Indian Foundation (FUNAI) here that natives he encounters from other tribes lead them trouble in understand the language spoken by the Iplanna Indians.

Brazil's Indians, now estimated to total only 180,00, are dark-skinned, dark-eyed and black-haired, like all American peoples.

But ancient legends told of indigenous tribes of white Indians in the Amazon jungle and referred to the mythical arrival of blonde Nordic sailors on Brazil's shores long before Christians discovered America.

More scientifically based speculation holds that any fair-skinned Indians that might exist are the product of contact with earlier white settlers, or even of white babies kidnapped by Indians.

This would be substantiated by one of the more recent of Alves reports which spoke of several fair-skinned, green-eyed Indians encountered among a larger group of less obviously dark tribesmen.

The latest reports of white Indians began coming in to Brasilia in April when Alves heard vague allusions to them from other tribes in the Iplanna area.

After scouring the region for a month he reported locating a group of eight fair-skinned, blue-eyed Indians bathing in a river.

Aerial reconnaissance in June located three villages with a total of 60 malocas—straw huts—housing an estimated 32 tribesmen.

Alves and his expedition immediately set out for the area, 5½ days upstream by canoe and a further five days on foot through the jungle from FUNAI's forward post of Altamira on the Xingu.

By the middle of July he reported meeting a group of 31 Indians, "10 of whom have fair skin, chestnut-brown hair and green eyes." They were all naked and some had painted their bodies.

"Their ear-lobes were pierced and full of ornaments. The Indians themselves made the first move in approaching the expedition's camp. On the first day two Indians came and Alves gave them gifts.

On the next day three more Indians entered the camp for more gifts such as necklaces, beads, scissors and knives.

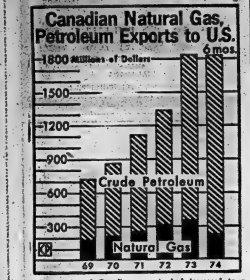
Finally 31 Indians came and took with them not only all the remaining gifts but also much of the expedition's equipment, including shoes, clothes and anything else that could be carried.

The tribesmen have so far blocked all attempts by the expedition to move through the jungle in the direction of the first village. But the fact that some of them approached the camp with women and children indicates that they are friendly.

The expedition decided to stay where it was in the hope that the Indians will eventually gain confidence and invite one of them into the village—although with other tribes it has sometimes taken years before such an invitation is forthcoming.

Anthropologist Helio Rocha of FUNAI's Amazonic affairs committee said fresh gifts would be sent to the expedition's camp—but no axes.

"We must introduce such tools among these Indians with the greatest care and only gradually to avoid the disintegration of their customs," he said.



"An axe can signify thousands of years of evolution for these Indians."

FUNAI officials said the fair-skinned tribesmen might be descendants of Dutch settlers who intermarried with Indians hundreds of years ago.

They might also be the more recent product of white men who have lived in Indian villages or of Indian women who have lived outside their villages, had children by white men and then returned with the children to the tribe.

ROUGH ON RATS

INUVIK, N.W.T. (CP) — Eskimo and Indian women from across the Arctic compete in Inuvik's annual "Good Worms" contest. Contestants spend three days skinning rats and seals, baking, brewing tea and displaying their traditional outfits to the judges.

Exports of Canadian natural gas and crude petroleum to the United States have increased steadily since 1969. In that year, shipments were valued at just over $700 million. In 1973, natural gas and crude petroleum exports had increased to a little more than $1.8 billion. The 1973 figure was almost matched in the first six months of 1974. Part of the increased value in 1974 reflects an export tax imposed by the Federal government. (CP Newsmap)

OUT OUR WAY — by Neg Cochran

Garbage Provides Source of Energy

BILLINGS, Mont. (AP) — Some energy sources being tapped today are anything but exotic.

What may be a lot of garbage to you may be a potential source of energy to a scientist. Research for more energy has taken experts from garbage heaps to manure from pigs and chickens.

One English farmer, for example, says he has been successfully running his car on energy derived from pig manure.

A college microbiologist near St. Cloud, Minn., is building a home that eventually will be heated by chicken waste. The actual heating element is methane gas produced by the waste produced by the chickens. The professor figures it will take about 300 chickens to do the job.

The Environmental Protection Agency says that more than 75 per cent of refuse can be burned to generate electricity. Several large cities are considering systems to convert trash to energy. Some projects involve mixing trash with pulverized coal.

St. Louis has a demonstration plant for energy recovery from waste disposal. Baltimore and San Diego have similar plants under construction. Other cities are looking at similar systems.

Others are looking to the sky—to the wind and the sun—for their source of energy. The old-fashioned windmill is getting a closer look. The federal government has a five-year program of studying and building windmills. By mid-1975 a 100-kilowatt-capacity wind-operated power plant capable of heating, cooling and lighting six homes will be in operation in Ohio.

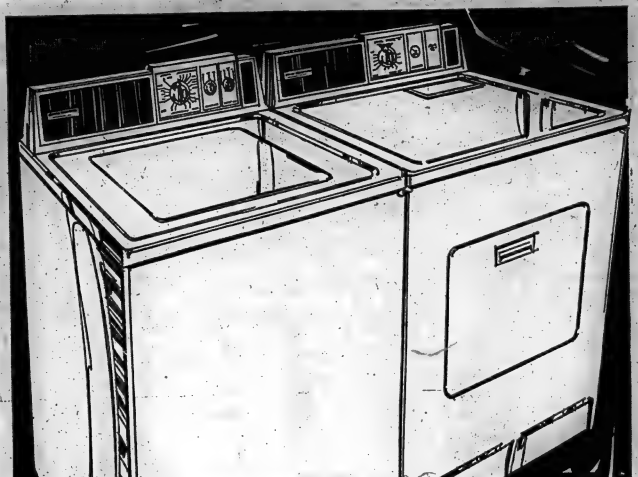
Solar energy gives hope of adding to the supply of energy. Enough sunlight falls on all the roofs in the United States, says one survey, to supply all its electrical needs. But sunlight is diffuse and must be concentrated before it can create economical electric power. Mirrors must track the sun across the sky. This involves expensive machinery and highly sophisticated electronic controls. Still it is a good long-range prospect.

Geothermal energy, fresh hot beneath the earth's surface, is another potential answer. A $3-million geothermal plant is planned near San Diego, Calif., but it is a year behind schedule because brine in the underground water finds heat exchangers.

Several large companies have obtained exploration rights to tap underground heat reserves. Land with geothermal potential leasing for 20 cents an acre a few years ago is being bid as high as $1,367 an acre, say federal authorities.

The surest answer to the energy problem for the next two or three decades, say many experts, comes from the earth's huge coal reserves.

"Coal now accounts for 18 per cent of the fuel used in this country each year, but its use is limited largely to coal-fired power plants," said Thomas C. Kryzer, vice-president of energy and minerals for Burlington Northern Inc. Kryzer, headquartered here in the heart of western coal country, said new coal research programs by industry and government should help hurry the arrival of an important new fuel, gas from coal.



Under an accelerated program, large quantities of high-BTU gas obtained from coal could be available by 1977, three years earlier than expected, Kryzer said. The National Coal Association says new coal gasification techniques produce a higher quality gas than the lighting gas of long ago.

Coal is plentiful too. Kryzer notes that the United States has more coal than Russia and China combined, much of it close to the surface and easily mined.

Canada Has Long History Of Parsimony With Indians

LONDON (CP) — A report by a private research organization specializing in minority rights says Canada has "a long history of a failure, parsimony and neglect" to overcome in its treatment of Canadian Indians.

But the report gives some credit to the Trudeau government for the progress Indians have made during the last decade.

The accomplishments of Indian organizations and individuals in that time have been "enormous," says the document published here by the Minority Rights Group (MRG), headed by Jo Grimond, former Liberal party leader.

These "have identified the problems of native people and suggested practical solutions that take account, as no government has ever done, of the fundamental social and historical factors underlying the present situation," the report continues.

"They have gained power, respect, and a great deal of political expertise after a century of being discredited and sapped of initiative and they have given more hope and determination to the Indian community than it has had for 100 years."

The report, written by British social worker James Wilson after he visited Canada-to study the Indian situation last year, says Jean Chretien, then minister of Indian affairs, was probably more criticized than any previous holder of that federal portfolio.

But Chretien, now president of the treasury board, helped set the Indian affairs department "to create the atmosphere in which criticism is possible, most notably by giving financial support to national and local Indian organizations."

"Like his predecessors he . . . made blunders—it is difficult to imagine a man in his position who would not.

"But unlike them he has had his blunders widely publicized."

Chretien, Wilson writes, "had the courage . . . to acknowledge mistakes and even his frecuent clashes with Indians show a willingness, markedly absent in earlier administrations, to take the views of native people seriously."

Yet, Wilson asserts, "despite these encouraging signs there has still not been a major transformation of Indian life."

The report charges that the Indian affairs department remains "a huge and costly vested interest and may, willingly or unwillingly, obstruct the movement of power and resources to the Indians."

Wilson alleges that the acceptance of educational reform and the adoption of a new approach to land rights "are nothing more than gestures until the new measures have been implemented."

"The enormous need for economic assistance has not really begun to be met," he main tains.

But he concedes that no one else has been able to resolve the Indian question.

Westinghouse Customers Are Asked to Pay More

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Westinghouse Electric Corp. asked its corporate customers Tuesday to voluntarily pay more for goods already on order.

The company said soaring costs of everything from steel to plastic have eaten up profits on millions of dollars of heavy electrical products ordered months ago, but still not shipped to customers.

If customers refuse to provide the "price relief" Westinghouse is seeking, the company will be committed to deliver the products at prearranged contract prices, a company spokesman said.

Escalator clauses, are built into the contracts, but the company said it was unable to foresee cost increases of 33 to 35 per cent for steel, iron, copper, brass, aluminum, pulp, paper, plastics and other materials.

GM Head Scoffs At Slump

MILFORD, Mich. (AP) — General Motors' Chairman Richard Gerstenberg discounted talk that the United States is headed for a depression and said Tuesday he is encouraged by the way business is "coming back."

Gerstenberg also said GM can cut car prices if the federal government drops some costly safety and emission regulations.

"I definitely do not see a depression," he said. "I see our business coming back and with business in general speeding as much as it is, this attests to the confidence (in the economy)."

Appearing at a news conference at the GM proving grounds, Gerstenberg said the company's costs are increasing at a rate of about $58 a car each month.

GM's 1975-model cars will cost the U.S. buyer an average of $446, or nine per cent, more than current models.

Ontario to Finance Hunt for Gas Supply

TORONTO (CP) — Plans to establish an Ontario energy corporation to pump, at least $140 million into the search for new sources of natural gas were announced Wednesday by Energy Minister Darcy McKeough.

Mr. McKeough said the new corporation will be set up by legislation to be introduced in the fall session of the legislature.

At a news conference, and in the announcement itself, Mr. McKeough said that Ontario's natural gas sources may be exhausted within two years.

He said he wants to demonstrate a sense of urgency in the need for fast exploration of new sources of the fuel.

The minister said the new corporation, with its initial government outlay of $100 million, will concentrate on helping to develop gas fields in the North—the Mackenzie delta, the Arctic islands and the Beaufort Sea.

But, he said, the corporation may move into other energy sources, possibly even solar or wind energy, in the future.

Mr. McKeough said rapidly-rising natural gas prices, coupled with depletion of Alberta gas reserves, caused the government to set up the proposed corporation. The move follows in the footsteps of British Columbia, Alberta and the federal government, which have made similar moves recently.

Gas supplies are a pressing problem, he said. Supplies are adequate for this winter and possibly the winter after, but then the picture "becomes less certain."

He said the basic idea is setting up the new corporation will be to help provide capital and guarantees for companies, such as TransCanada PipeLines Ltd., which now are engaged in gas exploration.

The corporation would provide investment and equity capital for exploration.

He said the government also might help with northern transportation and communications facilities.

Mr. McKeough said that natural gas which now cost about 21 cents per thousand cubic feet a year ago now is asking for about 41 cents a thousand cubic feet—due in part to increased royalty charges.

Alberta's reserves were dwindling, he said, as production led to flow to the United States.

City gate prices—the price a distribution company pays the transmission company—in Ontario will be about 70 cents per thousand cubic feet in November.

In Michigan, Ohio, Illinois and Wisconsin, the price will be $1.5 cents.

The minister said the National Energy Board has scheduled hearings on the export situation.

Mr. McKeough refused to recommend that exports be cut off, but did say that it might happen.

He called for shorter contracts for natural gas exports—present contracts run for up to 25 years.

The minister said that the new corporation will be set up to encourage exploration in Canada and help keep drilling companies busy in Canada.

"Now, they're leaving Canada," he said. "That's very serious."

There was little reaction from the opposition parties over the announcement.

North Liberal Leader Robert Nixon and Donald MacDonald, the New Democratic Party gas energy critic, said they want to see the actual provisions of the legislation before commenting on the proposal.

Ontario and Manitoba Agree Gas Supply Formula Faulty

OTTAWA (CP) — A formula used to determine supplies of natural gas surplus to domestic needs was described as inadequate Wednesday to begin filed with the National Energy Board.

Two provincial government departments and a consumers group said the formula used by the board in ans whether surplus gas is available for export does not provide sufficient protection for Canadian consumers.

Under the formula used by the board, Canadian needs are projected for four years and then multiplied by 25. Any gas production above the resulting figure is then deemed surplus and available for sale in the United States.

But briefs filed Wednesday in preparation for board gas export hearings next month and heard later this fall said that method is no longer effective. The board had asked for comments on its formula.

The Ontario energy department said it was not proposing a new formula at this time, but added there are grounds for believing the present method has not protected the foreseeable requirements of Canadians.

"This view is supported by the fact that Canada is faced with the prospect of allocating natural gas to domestic markets while continuing to export 50 per cent of its production annually," the brief said.

Last month, TransCanada PipeLines Ltd., a major supplier of gas to the large eastern Canadian market, said it might not be able to meet all the requirements of its customers during peak winter periods.

One mistake the board had made was including in its forecasts gas reserves that might not be ready for delivery when the needs arise, the brief said. It also did not provide a sufficient margin of forecasting error or estimating Canadian needs.

Industry Minister Leonard Evans of Manitoba, noting TransCanada's concern over peak demands, questioned the desirability of continuing to base exports on the peak net, in fact, surpluses.

The formula used by the board does not provide protection for domestic users once gas must be replaced, the minister said. Surplus figures are manipulated when the figures declared surplus are not available for transportation.

The Consumers Association of Canada also said the formula offers little protection and should not be used. The association said no amount of gas could be declared in surplus until an overall energy policy h it been developed.

Wheat Pools Defended

Prairie Premier Sees Attack On Orderly Grain Marketing

REGINA (CP) — Pressure on the Saskatchewan and Alberta wheat pools to accept a conciliation wage award for grain handlers at Vancouver appears part of a concerted attack on the orderly system of grain marketing, Premier Allan Blakeney said Wednesday.

The premier's comments followed a news conference at which he was critical of the federal government's "unclear response" to handling the grain which has virtually halted all grain shipments from the West Coast since Aug. 28.

He rejected suggestions that pressure by Ottawa and other agencies is aimed at destroying the farmer-owned co-operative wheat pools so grain trade could move into the private arena.

"But it does appear part of a concerted attack by certain groups to recover the role of government in marketing of all grain for domestic consumption in Canada," Mr. Blakeney said.

His child placing some feed grains on the open market and the federally-sponsored vote in which rapeseed producers opted for an open market rather than having oilseed marketing placed under wheat board jurisdiction.

"I'm sure the next phase will be to move wheat for milling into bread within Canada from the jurisdiction of the wheat board," Mr. Blakeney said.

The companies' stance in rejecting what they said is conciliatory conciliator's report remained firm Wednesday.

D. M. Lockwood, Saskatchewan Wheat Pool vice-president, said when the government originally announced it would support the conciliation award, industry thought it was justified. Ottawa stymied any future possibility of a reasonable, dispassionate collective agreement.

Many pool members have been upset at statements made by Henry Kroeker of Vancouver, the Grain Workers Union leader, and by Walter Hlady of Arcadia, Sask., president of the Palliser Wheat Growers Association.

Mr. Nelson said wheels pool officers are guilty of gross mismanagement and inefficiency and Mr. Kaeza has said the grain farmers are hiding huge profits from farmers.

Munro Stands Firm Against Calling House

VANCOUVER (CP) — Labor Minister John Munro appealed Wednesday to West Coast grain elevator companies for rationality in the settlement of a dispute which has slowed grain shipments out of here to a trickle.

Mr. Munro reiterated that Parliament will not be called back session before its scheduled opening Sept. 30 to deal with the 10-day-old dispute that has idled 500 grain handlers and could cost $200 million in lost sales if it lasts six weeks.

Ford Consults 26 Economists

WASHINGTON (AP) —After voicing optimism of eventual success in the fight against inflation, President Ford today asks a panel of economists for blunt opinions on what ails the United States economy.

Ford invited 26 economists to the White House to begin a series of meetings leading to an economic summit Sept. 27-28.

Ford want blunt views on what can be done to help curb economic problems as spiralling prices and high interest rates, and is likely to get them from today's participants, a range of economic viewpoints ranging from former treasury secretary George Shultz to Harvard economist J. Kenneth Galbraith, one-time adviser at Democratic presidents.

The former II meetings are expected before the inflation summit conference, involving union leaders, the building industry, farmers, manufacturers, bankers and state officials.

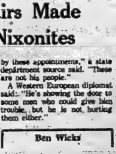
Ford Wednesday encouraged the searching of Alan Greenspan as chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers, and said both he and Greenspan are optimistic about the economy.

Greenspan is known in favor as little government interference as possible in the economy.

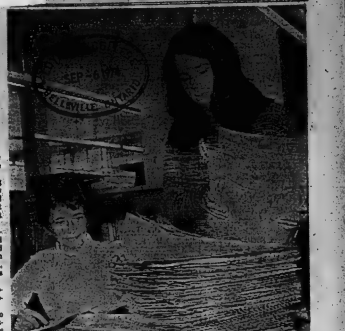
Foreign Affairs Made Refuge for Nixonites

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford appears to have used the American foreign policy establishment as a refuge for people whose past associations with former president Richard Nixon could embarrass the White House.

Two of three major diplomatic appointments announced Wednesday fall in this description, as does the White House decision to restore presidential chief of staff Alexander Haig to military duty, possibly as commander of NATO armed forces.



Ford named George Bush as the new head of the U.S. mission in Peking, ending Ellsworth Bunker's Republican national chairman.



Appointed ambassador to France was Kenneth Rush who served as Nixon's economic policy co-ordinator and who once taught law to Nixon.

"This certainly is not a question of Ford trying to show he is in command of foreign policy by these appointments," a state department source said. "These are not his people."

A Western European diplomat said: "He's showing the doves some men who could give him trouble, but he is not hurting them either."

Unionists Accept Pay Restraints

LONDON (CP) — Prime Minister Harold Wilson has won what appears to be a smashing last-minute victory in his battle to shape an anti-inflation programs acceptable to Britain's militant trade unions.

The critical moment in the development of Wilson's strategy came Wednesday as the climax of the annual conference of the 18-million strong Trades Union Congress (TUC).

The main issue was the Labor Cal compact, a torpedoism for cial compact, a euphemism for voluntary wage restraint by the unions in return for major government concessions.

Wilson had, it fell to TUC general secretary Len Murray to save the day for Labor.

In a powerful, eloquent speech just before the voting, Murray warned the unions that failure to agree on the social compact might destroy the Labor government and Britain's chances for economic recovery and eventual return to prosperity.

No one union, he argued, had the right to snatch the opportunity for a better future from all the others.

Techniques Behind the Tomatoes

Vic Warren, technician at Dominion Experimental Farm, Smithfield, explainedo techniques used in ripening tomatoes at centres. He was among officials meeting with local growers Wednesday as new grading machine was demonstrated. Experiments are also underway to test new varieties of tomatoes.

Experimental Farm Shows New Tomato Picker to Local Farmers

SMITHFIELD — Growers stood contemplatively munching tomatoes at twilight as officials of the Smithfield Experimental Farm here led some 30 men, through fields ankle deep in tomato plants Wednesday.

However, the two-hour session wasn't called to give Quinte tomato growers the opportunity of savoring the fruits of a federal government harvest. Rather, it was an exposition of current experimental farm work in tomato breeding, plant growing and harvesting techniques.

The farm hopes further strains can be bred and then economically grown in eastern Ontario. Already, three (the Trent, Motra, and Trienton varieties) have been developed by vegetable breeding researcher Jack Metcalf, and now are grown commercially.

Wednesday's session was the first "Tomato Field Day" held at the farm in two years. Acting farm superintendent Dr. Sherwood Miller said the sessions are held biennially "so we can have something new to show, or some result that would interest growers".

One of the innovations now being tested at the farm is a mechanical picking aid, originally developed in British Columbia.

"Supposedly, the machine is 42 per cent more efficient than handpicking," said Dr. Miller. "It was used earlier for strawberries and worked well in B.C."

Testing at the farm is being carried out to gauge the machine's effectiveness under conditions normally found in eastern Ontario.

A platform is built on the rear of the machine, similar to a tractor, but without the large rear tires. The platform holds boxes which are fed by a conveyor belt.

Behind the belt, six workers lay on benches, suspended approximately 18-feet above the ground. Workers, riding above the tomato plants, pick and deposit the tomatoes onto the belt.

With the picking aid, a seven-man team can pick four rows at once. Trials are being held today to determine whether workers using the machine are faster than those picking by hand.

An additional cost-saving factor explained to area tomato growers is the use of Ethrel, a chemical which ripens all vegetables on a plant at once, regardless of size.

Within two weeks of application, a crop can be harvested. The chemical is currently being used by some area growers, said Dr. Miller.

Students Honored

Jan Zuchlinski and Tom New were given honorable mention at the Canadian National Exhibition's Student Film Festival for a film they made last year. Quaker Oats Strike Settled, Union Accepts Two-year Pact

TRENTON — Workers at Quaker Oats Company ended a nine-week strike at the Peterborough Foods Division plant here today with an 87-percent vote in favor of a new company offer that provides for an estimated 36-percent wage increase over two years and an end to scheduled overtime.

The 85-member amalgamated Bakery Workers and Confectionery Workers and Meat Cutters union, Local P-1172, voted at 10 a.m. today in Trenton Legion hall. It is expected all workers will be back on the job within a week.

The settlement was hammered out during eight hours of negotiations Tuesday.

As across the board pay increase, retroactive to April 1 this year, provides for a 60-cent-an-hour boost to Oct. 1 when an additional five cents an hour will be added. In the second year, effective April 1, workers will receive another 60 cents an hour.

Local president Leo LeBlanc said, "we figure that we got a good contract with the voluntary overtime cleared up and a substantial wage increase.

Workers, without a contract since March, had earned an average of $3.46 an hour.

Union negotiators expressed satisfaction with the new contract which also provides for "substantial" improvements to pensions and vacation benefits.

Key issue during the talks was the company practice of scheduling overtime during the weekend. The revised settlement meets union demands for voluntary overtime Saturdays and Sundays.

Potter Sale Continues Despite Objections

Despite a recommendation for tabling, the bylaw to approve an agreement with the Moira River Conservation Authority for the purchase of the 362-acre Potter property on Belleville's western outskirts has been approved by city council.

The tabling motion was defeated by a 6-3 vote this week with Aldermen Arthur Keegan, George Zeppieri and Joe Cox supporting the delay.

Alderman Keegan said the extension of sewer services to allow more home construction should take priority over the purchase of recreational land.

Alderman Cox questioned the number of acres in the Potter property and asked what would happen if the survey showed fewer acres than that stated.

Mayor Robin Jeffrey said the River Authority, the actual purchaser of the property, is now obtaining a survey.

The province has agreed to pay a major share of the $770,000 cost of the property with Belleville, the Sidney township and the Authority paying the balance. Originally the Thurlow Township was expected to pay about $20,000 toward the purchase but its council later voted against participation.

Mayor Robin Jeffrey said there are still hopes that the Ontario Heritage Council will pay the share originally expected to be paid by Thurlow.

The city's share of the purchase cost will be between $142,380 and $161,852, depending on the amount of the provincial grant.

During the discussion, Mayor Jeffrey noted that the Moira Authority had purchased the Potter property as a recreational area. She said a plan of development would be obtained for approval by the Authority and the city before any work began.

Mayor Jeffrey denied rumors to the effect that the entire property would be used as a trailer park.

"Only about 37 acres (south of Highway 2) is intended for a trailer park," she said.

The balance of the property will be a recreational area for public use, she said.

The entire area south of the highway is planned for use as a quietist area while north of the highway, with the exception of the trailer park, will be open space with nature trails for all to enjoy, she said.

Taboo?

See any connection between exorcism, taboo, and sex?

Well, it might be said that the word "taboo" could be readily exorcised (perhaps "excised" is a better word) from the language — there being so little left nowadays that is taboo anymore.

Dr. Morton Shulman recommends collecting art as a means to a fortune. "Anyone Can Make a Million" he calls it in a book of that name. However, to judge by the number of very explicit books and magazines on sex that are around these days, it may be asked if writing a book on that subject is all one has to do.

One thing none of these books mentions, or barely touches, is the disadvantages of license. Nor are morals or conscience or things like respect ever mentioned.

You have to read Ann Landers to discover the darker side of sexual freedom: unwanted children, VD, broken lives.

Of course it remains a titillating subject. Xaviera Hollander has yet another book on her dubious exploits on the bookstands. There is no end to how sex all began — the terminology, folk history and all. A sort of poor man's version of Morton Hunt's scholarly work, The Natural History of Love.

And what is a dissertation on such a lively subject without mention of Dr. Alfred Kinsey. A few days ago marked the 31st anniversary of the day in 1953 when the news media disclosed what Dr. Kinsey and his associates at the University of Indiana had found out about the sexual behavior of the female. Earlier, in 1948, there had been his report on male conduct in this sphere.

Today, as Del Brinkman of the University of Omaha (who once did research on Kinsey and the Press) points out, books on sex and sexual behavior come and go from the bestseller lists without much controversy.

Like the report in recent days from not so staid London, Ontario, about doctors at a hospital there arranging a rendezvous between a mother of four who looks only 22 and is described as a high-class prostitute, and a man who is a homosexual.

The man paid his own way — no hospital insurance was involved — and it was all apparently in the heady realm of sex clinic treatment. London police, naturally sceptical, are calling it "procuring."

Well, a deep breath and a cold shower and maybe one can forget about such dire happenings in old Ont-ar-i-o.

In any event the sex magazines are turning the whole subject, fundamentally a thing apart, private and tinged with beauty, into a bore.

Strike Lesson

The transit workers of Toronto took their time before deciding to obey the Government's return-to-work order. So there is a residual element of defiance by the union which neither the Government nor the public can ignore.

Given the potential in Canada these days for inflation-sparked stoppages, the question is how can the community stand this trend? The transit men have been promised an interim 12 percent increase in wages, but such boosts merely reflect a continuing system of paper money and a dollar that buys less and less.

The continuing need is for the manufacturing side of the economy to produce more, to meet the increased demand. Whether it can keep up is another matter. The shadow of recession, meanwhile, hangs over all.

Stress Drug

Dr. Hans Selye's announcement of the possible introduction of a drug to neutralize the effects of stress holds high promise for people who are prone to heart attacks. Dr. Selye says a certain amount of stress is necessary to normal functioning, but for some, in excess, it can be fatal. Possibly the world's leading authority on the subject of stress, the Montreal physician is quoted as saying he believes approval for the drug's introduction in Canada will be forthcoming.

Ottawa's Inaction Compounds Problem

Public the Loser in These Strike-fed Inflationary Times

By VINCENT EGAN
Business and Consumer Affairs Analyst

Thomson News Service

Canada this month is witnessing the kind of social clash that has become commonplace and spread in Britain, France and other European countries.

In every case, its root has begun with the soaring cost of living and the failure of governments to do anything effective to control inflation.

Most people find themselves worrying about their future financial security. Recently established labor unions, where members probably have the least cause to worry, generally, being protected by dramatic cost-of-living adjustments, demand bigger and bigger pay increases and benefits.

To enforce these demands they strike. The widespread effects of these usually hits hard interest people with the lowest incomes, and social tensions inevitably increase.

This year's post office strike, for example, worked much greater hardship on the impoverished than on those with established savings and adequate financial resources to fall back on.

Illegal stoppages by transit workers in Canada's two biggest cities have proved an almost insuperable burden to the old, the infirm, those who can't afford alternate and more expensive means of transportation.

Such people can only feel themselves pitted against the well-paid strikers, already protected by cost-of-living guarantees, who (in Toronto) have scored more than 100 demands—which could almost be boiled down to a single demand for a blank cheque.

The recession on the West Coast and lake vessels in the early summer has forced shut down—halting Canada's most important export trade—and the demands for wage increases that have no relationship to productivity.

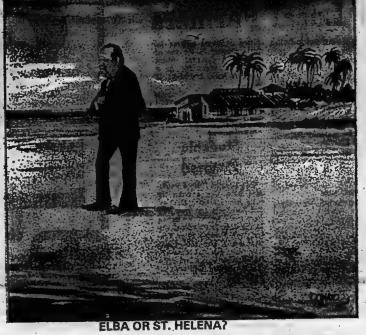
The resulting deterioration in Canada's trade balances won't show up in the official statistics for months yet. But already it has helped to cut the foreign exchange value of the Canadian dollar, and thus to increase the cost of everything we import—from vegetables to motor vehicles.

In the first six months of 1974, alone, $,205,000 man-days were lost in industrial disputes as 83 man-days per 10,000 worked.

That's 5½ times the first-half 1973 total of 1,040,000 man-days lost, or 21 per 10,000 man-days worked.

The trend has been worsening as the year progresses. In the month of June alone, strikes accounted for 127 man-days lost per 10,000 worked.

There are few indications of any improvement in the rest of this year. Indeed, says economist R. B. de Cotret, vice-president of the Conference Board in Canada, "Output lost due to labor disputes can be expected to be considerable and exert further drag on a sluggish economy."



And the president of the Canadian Labor Congress, Joseph Morrison, has predicted that economic stability created by inflation will lead to more political strikes and the breakdown of the collective bargaining system.

If today's super-inflation could be slowed down, it's just possible that Big Labor's demands for gigantic wage increases could be slowed down as well—and that today's growing social tensions could be relaxed.

But the federal government, having recently won an election campaign in which it made light of inflation, obviously doesn't intend to let any serious thought about anti-inflationary weapons intrude upon its long summer holiday.

Everything is good time. "In the year ahead," says Labor Minister John Munro, "we will invite labor and management to join with us in examining the state of industrial relations and putting them on "more productive, effective ways."

For the time being, Canadians can watch the value of their savings erode day by day, while they wait and wonder about their future in an economy that—for the first time in many years—has stopped growing.

Italy's Floundering Economy Gets $2 Billion Boost from W. Germany And Probable Extension from ECM

By KEVIN DOYLE

LONDON (CP) — The Italian economy, sinking into a worsening financial malaise, has received a desperately-needed injection of cash from affluent West Germany to sustain it through the last few months.

In addition to the current $2-billion loan, West Germany also favors a three-month extension of a European monetary agreement to tidy of roughly $1.9 billion due to expire Sept. 13, a measure now likely to be accepted.

As a further offer of aid, Rome also supports another Common Market medium-term loan of about $1.2 billion to Italy, a move which meets stiff resistance from Britain and several other member countries who fear Italy simply cannot support such huge indebtedness.

The question being asked in international circles is what happens when the loans run out? Answers vary from the stark but unlikely prediction of bankruptcy to more realistic less drastic forecasts of a major depression.

There seems little doubt the current $2-billion loan will see the Italians through the next three or four months, both by discouraging capital outflows and by helping to finance the country's huge trade gap, expected to reach $8 billion this year.

But it does little to solve underlying difficulties besetting the weak Italian economy, problems made worse by a chronic instability of government, torn between forces of the right and left and faced with a growing public distrust of all politicians.

Italy's economy has suffered badly this year from the increase in oil prices, particularly since it has no energy reserves of its own to soften the blow. Roughly half the trade deficit is estimated to be the result of the oil crisis.

But even without this, the country would still be in desperate trouble and in a frantic search for foreign loans.

Its credit rating has been slipping badly and it dropped even further recently when United States bank examiners were ordered to look on loans to Italy as "problematical."

The Italians, like the British, are suffering severely from a dash for growth which misfired badly. It has been followed by a payments crisis, stagnation and rampant inflation which reached an annual rate of 19.3 per cent in Italy in July.

While in Britain, the Italian boom broke records, producing between 1972 and 1973 a real annual growth rate of 5.5 per cent. Land prices soared and in the first six months of 1973, the average price of shares on the Milan stock exchange was up by 50 per cent.

In fact, everything was growing except the key elements of economic development, Italy's resources, which were thrown enough to see that the pace could not be sustained.

This proved an almost exact parallel to the British experience except that in Italy administrative chaos in government made the problem more difficult.

Wages now are falling behind prices, which are skyrocketing. But Italians are still remaining six per cent more than they produce and filling the gap with high-priced imports.

The need for a large-scale austerity program to cool the overheated economy was obvious a year ago but deliberate parliament and a series of political crises have meant it is only now being enacted.

The $4.16 billion to be taken from the Italian economy will be removed indirectly through sales taxes and higher taxes on gasoline and other fuels, making the program highly inflationary, at least in the short-term. This is how it is almost certain to set off another round of cyclically-high wage demands, fuelling the inflation cycle still more.

Nevertheless, the Italians appear to believe that in the long term the policy will have some deflationary effect and they are convinced that any more stringent action would force Italy's leading companies into bankruptcy.

Curbs on Hospital Smoking Are Introduced by Kingston General

The Kingston Whig-Standard

Visitors and staff at Kingston General Hospital will not be able to smoke in patients rooms.

The hospital, in conjunction with the Tuberculosis and Respiratory Diseases Association and the local chapter of the Canadian Cancer Soc'ty, is implementing a campaign to control smoking in the hospital.

It will not be banned altogether as it is in some of the province's hospitals, but will be restricted to specifically designated areas, such as patient and visitor lounges, cafeterias, staff rest rooms and some public waiting rooms.

Patients will not be forbidden to smoke, but it will be controlled and limited if necessary to protect a non-smoking patient in the same room. It will also be limited for patients if it might aggravate conditions or be detrimental to their recovery.

Signs are being put up now throughout the hospital. Posters and pamphlets will be put up to remind everyone coming into the hospital of the no-smoking policy. Anti-smoking pamphlets and crossword puzzles will be sent to patients on their meal trays and candystripper vol. will distribute literature to visitors.

Dr. F. Fish, medical health director, said the hospital board adopted the policy on the recommendation of the medical advisory committee.

"Smoking is generally recognized today as a hazard to health," he said. "The board has adopted a 'no' to provide some protection from its hazards to persons under our hospital's care."

Hotel Dieu Hospital has plans for a similar campaign.

The Conservatives Shadow Cabinet

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA (CP) — There has been some fookering for position in the Conservative leadership stakes as the race went officially start until next week but the front has held since second post-election caucus.

Robert Stanfield, Progressive Leader Stanfield is scheduled to announce the names of the members of his "Shadow Cabinet," selected from the field of the fourteen caucus.

These will be the chosen few MPs given the responsibility of shadowing the government's representation on the 26 or so Commons Parliamentary Committees.

With the responsibility goes the special designation of industrial prestige — a shadow minister knows he's a power in the cabinet had the Conservatives won the election.

But it gives the select few a certain one-up rank in the caucus, and this is the natural point for the party's ascendancy to begin to be felt in the leadership race for those in the running.

For there is more than status, which in itself is not important, in being a member of the Shadow Cabinet.

There is the advantage of the Opposition Parliamentary Leader's having the responsibility of taking the lead in picking the members of Cabinet being "shadowed."

So if you are the Conservative caucus member for Timbuktu and you want to make a specialty of labor problems, and there is a vacancy in the Labor Committee, you seek it to Labor Minister John Munro or the Commons, especially during the Daily Question Period.

It gives you a chance to show your stuff, and if you are successful you have a natural image of future party leadership. You have a natural place to catch the parliamentary and public eye.

So much for the name of the "Shadow Cabinet" will give the Conservative leader a clue to those of them in the race.

Those who are not named numbers will be given that advantage, for there are some members of caucus who are not of official favor and can not really expect to be considered for the Tory kind of a break.

There are even a few who openly questioning the quality of his leadership, have sometimes indicated a desire to run against him, but Stanfield which could have been a real opportunities for within the Conservative caucus.

So not all the candidates for the leadership will be in the Stanfield "Shadow Cabinet".

But all of them will, or not, declared or undeclared, will be concerned on the floor of the Commons and in its offices and corridors for headlines, all time, and public attention in the two years before Mr. Stanfield has said he will step down.

The caucus, although it may be by divided leadership loyalties and rivalries, is united in the determination to hurt its ranks will emerge the next election.

And the coming months in the Commons will give the parliamentarians ample opportunity for any "outsiders" — such as provincial premiers or party organizational dark horses — who may be thinking of running.

So who among the parliamentarians could be in the running?

Eleven Tory candidates stand out.

Two, Ontario's Allan Lawrence, a former provincial cabinet minister, and Alberta's Eldon Woolliams, a former backbench veteran, already have declared.

The other nine have said nothing so far, but observers in the caucus have indicated support.

From East to West the viable candidates are Newfoundland's James McGrath, Nova Scotia's Robert Coates, New Brunswick's Gordon Fairweather, PEI's David MacDonald, Quebec's Claude Wagner, Ontario's Walter Gordon, Manitoba's Sterling Lyon, Saskatchewan's Sidney Spivak, Alberta's Jack Horner, and B.C.'s John Fraser.

And why these?

Coming up next.

CLEANINGS FROM OUR FILES OF BYGONE YEARS

30 YEARS AGO

Sept. 5, 1944

Nearly one ton of scrap and a large quantity of brass was stolen from the property of a plant No.5 of the Canada Cement Company to Point Anne some time after midnight Sunday. The provincial police were notified of the incident early today and after investigating were of the opinion that the iron was transported away in a motor truck, although not pointed out before the material could have been taken away by boat.

40 YEARS AGO

Sept. 5, 1934

Mr. Harold Holton, Liberal organizer for this electoral district called attention today to the fact that electors of the city whose names have been inadvertently left off the voters' lists now have their last opportunity to correct the omission.

50 YEARS AGO

Sept. 5, 1924

E. Tufts of Madoc township has been commissioned a Justice of the Peace for Hastings County.

The circus is in town today. The big parade of horses and bands, chariots, clowns and the herd of elephants was the best seen in the city for many years, a big hole is dug in the landscape it stays there, a useless eyesore, nothing something is done about it. Land is not so cheap or so plentiful in Waterloo that we can afford to keep increasing the area of holes, and decreasing the area of useful land.

The need for an enforceable policy to control gravel operations in the Region is more urgent than ever. Since 1970 there are now about 125 shutdown pits.

In our own interests, Waterloo Region should have its own clear-cut policy — and soon.

Canada Popular with Immigrants

Brockville Recorder and Times

One of the unofficial indicators of a country's state of well-being, economic and otherwise, is its attractiveness to immigrants. Judging by the figures released by Statistics Canada this other day, Canada must rank among the world's more fortunate nations despite its current inflation. High interest rates and other problems.

Immigration to this country rose by an impress ve 72 per cent during the first three months of last year. Statistics Canada said. And, the agency's newcomers came from 1 ver the globe. Our traditional sources of immigrants 1 topped the list with 6,178 coming from the United States and 4,651 from England. But the figure were up for all parts of the world — Europe, Asia, Africa, Australia, South America and Central America. There were even 20 immigrants from Oceania countries such as Tahiti and Fiji.

Not all Canadians are happy about this spurt in immigration; they feel it's time to close the corner, for one, wants immigrants can look at Canada. But an influx of 45,000 immigrants over a three-month period in a country as vast as Canada can scarcely be considered a tidal wave, rising immigration can present problems when the economy goes sour. The, immigration department must constantly keep in mind a balance between stepped-up immigration and the difficulties it could aggravate in time of recession.

But the gloomy talk of illemployment and economic difficulties among Canadians can easily be over done. The United States department of commerce in its economic review recently declared that there is good ground for believing that the rate of rel growth in 1974 may exceed that of any other industrial country. It also said that American trade and investment opportunities in Canada remain especially good."

This country has its headaches, to be sure, but judging by the number of immigrants who choose Canada as their destination, we must be doing something right.

A 44-year-old woman remains in fair condition in Belleville General Hospital today following a two-car accident Tuesday morning.

Norma Mitchell was taken to hospital after a vehicle she was a passenger in collided with a second vehicle on Highway 401 just west of Belleville.

Mrs. Mitchell's daughter, Sylvia, 23, the driver of the vehicle was treated at the hospital and released. A second passenger in the car, Debbie Mitchell, 20, was discharged Wednesday.

The driver of the other car, Clifton Ward, 51, of Scarboro, was also treated and released from hospital.

The accident occurred shortly after 10 a.m.

Vandals Nabbed

PICTON — Two Prince Edward county youths convicted of wilful damage and mischief were ordered Wednesday by Provincial Court Judge T. Y. Wills to replace two flags removed from the Cenotaph Park in Picton.

Burton Mathews, Picton, and Kevin McMahon, RR 2, Milford, were arrested in June by Constable George Wright of the Picton police department.

Both were charged with wilful damage and mischief and Wednesday fined $25 each and costs.

Judge Wills ordered the young men to replace the flags under the direction of Constable Wright.

to make site provision for a hospital parking garage was temporarily derailed this week by city council.

Aldermen Sid Meeks opened the discussion by asking whether the hospital board is still considering a parking garage, if the garage was not going ahead he asked why the street should be closed.

Hospital board member Jim Corke said the hospital garage is "still in limbo" but said several of the hospital board members felt the garage no longer had first priority in hospital plans.

Mayor Robin Jeffrey said she endorsed the purchase of Bay Dr. properties by the hospital board to provide for future expansion but said for the present the property might be an open parking lot. She said the road allowance is no longer needed, but what the hospital board paid for the road allowance is another matter.

Aldermen Corke said the hospital should pay the "going rate" for the road property.

Passing of the road closing bylaw will be held up to allow time for the hospital board to submit a plan showing how the property is to be used.

Two Mishaps Result In Minor Damage

MADOC — Madoc provincial police investigated two accidents overnight that caused no personal injuries.

A dump truck owned by Sam Danford and Son of Madoc and driven by Brian Danford, 28, received $3,000 damage when the driver swerved to avoid an oncoming car and struck a hydro pole. The accident occurred at 8:35 p.m., Wednesday on a Huntingdon Township Road two miles west of Madoc. Cost of replacing the pole is $200.

A driver swerving to avoid a bear on the road, struck a rock early today and received $500 damage to his car, Stanley Pasin, 18, of Eldorado was east bound on a 6th Concession Madoc Township road, about six miles north of the town when the accident occurred.

Town Considers Using Provincial Police

NAPANEE — A provincial police take-over of Napanee is under considerable by council here.

Town council this week asked for an Ontario government study on the feasibility of provincial policing of the town. The decision resulted from discussion of the Napanee police taking over Bath and Amherstview and moving cars into those areas. The seven-member force would be overextending itself, councillors said.

A committee of council operates the force and has been reluctant to follow the recommendation of the Ontario Police Commission to form a police commission.

If the study shows that provincial policing of the town is necessary, council will make a formal request Sept. 9.

Kids' Lib Is Bull-feathers Taken Too Far, Says Ann

BY ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: I am writing to tell you about a new group that and trying to start. It is called Kid's Lib.

We want the right to express ourselves without being told we are too young to have an opinion. We also want the right to smoke and drink if we want to at age 13.

I'm sure on TV the other night who gave you this idea and a lot of my friends think it's neat. He said kids at age 13 should be able to handle their own money, choose their own friends and pick which parent they want to live with if there's a divorce.

Will you back me up?—A Kid Who Wants To Be Liberated

Dear Kid: No way. You are adding apples and oranges and getting half-baked ideas in the process. A 13-year-old should be able to express his opinions, pick his own friends and handle his own money (an allowance, to most of us) but the judge who would allow a 13-year-old to decide which parent he wants to live with after a divorce should be committed. I think those are reasonable, but that crock about 13-year-olds being allowed to smoke and drink is asinine and you know it. Now, then, let's forget it. Next.

Dear Ann Landers: A letter from my husband's lawyer suggested that my age could have been written by me—same number of years, and the same problems.

To outsiders we appeared to have the perfect marriage—and it was a very good one, except when it came to sex. I disliked intercourse, avoided it when I could and subsisted it when I had it.

The inevitable happened. Across this tranquil scene in his office there appeared at him. The day he told me I didn't have to be bothered with sex any longer because he had a good substitute. I nearly died.

I went to my doctor and asked for help. He referred me to a psychiatrist that I "psyche myself out" and suggested two books to read. I read them and they have been banned as pornography.

Well, Ann, his advice saved my marriage. I decided to be the aggressor, something I had never done before, then I utilized what I'd read in the books.

My husband was amazed. And so was I. For the first time I enjoyed sex. I have developed a marvelous sexual relationship and the tramp is nowhere in sight.

I now know I was frigid because I was ignorant (and Puritanical), but all that is over. I'm happier today than I've ever been, in my life. Please print this letter if you think it will help someone else.—An Enlightened Wife

Dear Wife: I do and I will. Here it is.

Dear Ann Landers: I'm having an argument with my husband about the violence on TV and what it is doing to the minds of our young children. I say it has added to buying guns for our grandchildren. He says I'm a crackpot, that the violence on TV is a good outlet for young children and guns are a part of the American heritage. He also claims play gun fighting is a healthy way for kids to express anger. Where do you stand?—Unnerved in Bayou Oak

Dear Un: I agree with you wholeheartedly on the toy gun issue, but I don't buy the theory that either toy guns or violence on TV will make killers out of normal, healthy children. The trouble goes back much further. I believe constructive and informative TV shows are much better for children—and adults—than a steady diet of bludgeoning, shooting and blood all over the place. Such exposure cannot help but make the steady, long-time viewer in any way a killing. Since the airwaves belong to everyone, we should insist that the TV and radio network people elevate the quality of the material offered to the public.

Successful Living

Mom 'Not Close Enough'

By DORIS CLARK

Dear Doris: My Mom is close to me—but not close enough. She's good and fair. After I got married I'd forget all about this boy I care about. We have lots in common, I guess, I think I'm giving up hope.

I haven't ever had a date with him but, though I know it's silly, every night I walk by his house hoping that I may see him or I've could talk.

Doris, I'm asking you because, I guess I feel safe; because you wouldn't, don't know me. I am a girl, you were, too, are, so am I. Well, to say, see me on street. Boy, would I ever be complimented with someone who knows what they're talking about.

Please tell me how to let Mom know some of the other boy lifestyles are going through the same thing as Diane.—More For Your Long Letter

Dear Con: Long he is right! Parents don't always can cross Ralph's path depends on what path he takes. Does he play tennis or golf, or go swimming? Does he belong to any organization that you do? Maybe he works in a store where you could shop.

Don't concentrate on Ralph as hard that you don't notice how nice some of the other boys are. Your mother has some good ideas, I believe it or not, and you need someone closer than me to talk to.

Dear Doris: I am a cross because of arthritis. Could I have it corrected to match my dress, to attend my daughter's wedding?—Bride

Could I use a stone to sit on in the morning line? I am tall —five-foot-nine— and the groom's mother is tiny.

Bride's Mother: Indeed you could have your cane covered to match your dress if this would make you feel happier. You might be able to manage a little effect, by tying a bow with ribbon, but don't make it too lacy or flowery! Just let it blend in — and then forget about it. It is your personality people will enjoy.

A stool in the receiving line might rescue your back from the hazards of long standing and help you to be your freshest and prettiest best, as hostess of the occasion.

If, on the other hand, it were only for the purpose of coming down to the level of the groom's mother, forget it!

Friendliness, putting other people at ease: these are the things that will make you and the groom's mother appear her gracious, warm personalities that you need to be.

Dear Doris: I would like the address of any English language universities in any part of Europe where it is warm and sunny year round.

It seems I always wind up depending on you!

Barney.

Dear Barney: I'm sending you the names and addresses of two private student services and cultural headquarters in The Netherlands, Italy, Spain and Switzerland.

Even northern Italy has hot summers, and The Netherlands "can get a bit chilly in winter, but these are both in more temperate zones than anything either more north or south. If there is any other country which intrigues you, you can probably write to its embassy in Ottawa. Ask your librarian about this.

That's not quite the switch thought it appears on first reading, but when it comes to new glasses from Trenton Optical. Sure, there are cosmetic considerations in wearing glasses and Trenton Optical has the best collection of frames around. But there is the health side too. When did you last have your eyes checked? In the last year? In the last decade? We have been discussing fulfilling the eye needs of your children. Now it's your turn, to get your eyes tested and then have the prescription to Trenton Optical, 54 Bridge St. E. They'll take care of the rest and you don't have to have an optometrist. Get the kids off to school and then go treat yourself . . . and your eyes.

The Trials of Me and My Car

It finally happened . . . the radiator in my car went dry. But I didn't just run out of water. Oh no! I had a hundred water pumps as well. I was momentarily pleased with myself and my car, for at least, it had a bit of consistency in common with each other. But when I came out of the Quinte Mall and saw the distinct evidence of a leak and overflow, and after I had recovered from a bit of investigative reasoning to determine that indeed no other car was in fire hazard was leaking water, and that there conveniently located at 161 North Front St, and in as controlled a manner as I could offer, stated the problem. He was prepared to buy my car for the price of bus fare to Picton. And they fixed it and a few other nagging car aches as well. If you've got car troubles, go see Vaders. They sell Datsuns but they'll fix anything.

Getting Back to Work

The last Maj summer holiday is over. There's no more daydreaming at your desk about what you'll be doing outside in the summer sun. It's time to get back and down to business. And the Hotel Belvedere, on Front St., is a real boon to business with their businessmen's lunch, which is a tasty and reasonably-priced way for one to have lunch. And what am I going to have lunch today? problem. There are daily specials which usually run around $1.50 and the thing you're interested too, of course. A good lunch means a good afternoon's work. Let the Hotel Belvedere help you get the business of hunk out of the way.

The Winds May Blow

. . . And they will, with their bounties of dead leaves, cold autumn rain and eventually snow. But with snug-fitting aluminum doors and windows from Bellevue Glass and Metalwerd, you can relax and, what will you care? The cold won't get in and the warmth won't get out, something we're all for, and the warmth from the recent increase in fuel prices. Phone the nice people at Bellevue Glass now, so that the next time there'll be rain that you'll be snug as the sun in their aluminum windows and doors can make you. That Belleview number is 968-3781.

Off-season Travel That's Right On

If you haven't had your holidays yet and you're not ready to say goodbye to the warmth of the summer sun, (and who is?), Bayshore Travel, 141 Dundas St. (Pepsi Bldg.) has a suggestion for you. Go south off-season. The main tourist season in the Caribbean and Florida doesn't start until Dec. 15. This means that the best rates are less, as is the fare to get you there so all that lovely warmth and sunshine is for a minimum. A seven to 10 day air fare to Nassau usually costs $180. During the off-season it costs only $135. That's quite a saving and indicative of the general saving on going this time of year. And the odds are that you can even get some of that white stuff on the ground so that you can send them maddening post cards, are still pretty good off-season too. Reserve your place in the sun by calling 962-3404.

Keeping Your Eyes Open

That's just what anyone in the market for a good sewing machine or vacuum cleaner should be doing if they want to save $30 on the price at the Quinte Sewing Centre in the Quinte Mall, in the Mall Flyer, you'll see a $30 coupon usable on the purchase of an Alda or White sewing machine. There is also a 15 per cent discount on all notions during this September sale. The coupon is worthy a $30 purchase and $20 of on a brand new sewing machine of the Quinte Sewing Centre quality, really is a house isn't it.

Still Time For Ice Cream

The kids may be back in school, but their appetite for good ice cream hasn't left them with the end of summer, I bet. And another sure bet is the delicious Silverwood's Ice Cream you'll get when you take the family out to the Bakery Inn, 160 Main St. W. I'm a great ice cream lover of such flavors as Rumanod and Pistachio. In case you've never tried Rumanod, it's, a combination of sourcrout, chocolate, strawberry and vanilla, even through with rolls and chunks of fruit and nuts. And no just any old ice cream establishment carries this princely flavor! The Silver Inn does though, and they'll serve you until 11 every night.

Dip, Then Strip at Lloyd's Place

From an interest came the hobby, from the hobby came the hotcross that keeps Lloyd George busy from morning to night.

At "Lloyd's Place" on Moneyfield's Main Street, Mr. George has a furniture refinishing shop one mile there then a year. And his success has "exceeded all my expectations", he says.

Retired from the Armed Forces, Mr. George and his wife Eleanor moved to the village three years ago.

His interest in woodwork is unassuming — he has built a boat, a recreation room, "the usual," he says.

"I've always loved wood of all kinds," says Mr. George, "but mahogany is my favorite."

His woodworking now includes repair as well as dipping and stripping old furniture, much of it mahogany as well as pine and maple.

Equipped with a degree in chemistry from Bishop's University, Mr. George has devised his own system of dipping, using a battery of chemicals, he also designed the dipping tanks, and the technique for cleaning them.

"I think my alkaline dip — the basic ingredient is a trisodium phosphate solution — is preferable to the petroleum-based strip" method for several reasons," he says.

"It does a good, fast job, there are fewer fumes and less evaporation, and it's more economical all round."

Explaining the process, Mr. George says the furniture to be stripped of its paint or varnish is immersed for 30 to 45 minutes at one of two types of solution, depending on what substances need removal.

Then he takes the piece of furniture out, and its another bath scrubs it by hand to remove every last bit of unwanted finish from the corners and crevices.

"I go through more pairs of rubber gloves than you'd believe," he says.

Then the furniture is washed thoroughly with clear water, which stops the chemical action and does the final cleaning.

In the summer the furniture is dried naturally outdoors, and in the winter the process is taken indoor to a temperature-controlled drying room.

The price that Mr. George charges depends largely on the size and type of piece to be stripped. It ranges from $5 for a plain chair, $8 for a table and as much as $75 for a very large, elaborately-carved piece.

Mr. George says that for those people who don't really enjoy the tedious process of removing old finish by hand, his system is cheaper in the long run.

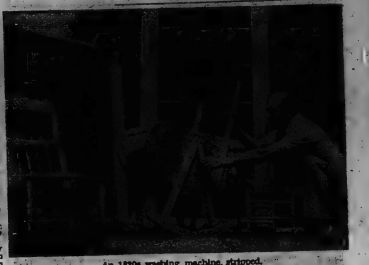
"When you add the cost of the paint remover to what your time is worth, you'll save by half if you have your piece stripped," he says.

Mr. George also does refinishing, using either penetrating oil or wax as the situation demands.

Mrs. George has learned the art of caning and rushing during the past year, and helps her husband restore chairs. She also assists in the sale of the antiques they've collected over the past months.

In the attic of the barn where the dipping tanks and woodworking shop are located, chairs are old chairs, tables, wash stands and bedsteads. Mr. George has plans for a display room where this furniture will be for sale.

The interest in wood has led him to research, so that now he has become quite knowledgeable about the furniture he fixes and sells.



"I'm collecting a good library of books about furniture antiques," says Mr. George.

When I get an especially old or unusual piece, I can usually trace its history in one book or another.

What's happened is that now I'm getting interested in local county history, by reading about old furniture."

EYES AT MY FEET

By Jessie Hickford

The author of this book on "seeing eye dogs" started to go blind at the age of fifty at 52 she was completely so, and despaired of ever living fully again.

Having been a school teacher for many years and socially active, enforced confinement to home deprived and frustrated her. Miss Hickford found she was able to do chores about her home but to go out alone was terrifying.

At first reluctant to consider a friend's suggestion of a guide dog, thinking it would attract undue attention to her blindness, when she did acquire one she found it was often the means of making friends.

Her experiences at the training centre, located in a country home near Exeter, are described from the heartbig of simple commands for her dog Prudence to the final her dog Prudence to the final responsibility of looking after her "guide".

She had to learn to go to the kennels and call her own dog without letting out all the other dogs; getting the leash on was a formidable task, since Prudence was young and excitable.

A basket was provided for Prudence beside Miss Hickfords bed so that they could be together at all times. She talked to the dog constantly so that her voice would become familiar.

Step by step, from learning to groom and feed the dog, Miss Hickford conquered each obstacle, progressing from the obedience training to pavement walking and finally to returning home to another kind of environment. With each experience came a small triumph shared with her dog.

Prudence is now eight years old and her story and that of her blind mistress is sensitively told. We "feel" rather than "see" her description of every day things in her surroundings as she becomes a more confident woman, despite her handicap.

This book is available at the Corby Library.

Home Selling On Your Own

A do-it-yourself homeseller can succeed if he chooses his asking price carefully and offers effectively, reports Consumers' Association of Canada. A homeowner can visit the local registry office to check on selling prices of similar homes. Advertisements should be chosen wisely and include basic information such as locality, proximity to schools and transportation, number of rooms, bedrooms, bath and down payment required.

Protein Economy

Ground beef labelled "lean" or "extra lean" may not be the best buy nutritionally, reports Consumers' Association of Canada. The additional price consumers pay is often so high that regular ground beef actually provides more lean, therefore more protein, for your money.

Learn to Parent Through Program

In researching for this column, I've been introduced to some intriguing ideas about child raising and family life.

One that has particularly stirred my interest was described to me this week by Mary Raddon, of Plainfield.

Mary's husband, Don, works for the Ministry of the Environment, but both are trained leaders of an educational program called Parent Effectiveness Training (P.E.T.).

Taking care of three children between the ages of two and seven, and Mary's teenage brother, the Raddons were ideally suited to become devotees of P.E.T. after reading the book of that name by Dr. Thomas Gordon, a licensed clinical psychologist from California.

Dr. Gordon's book (sub-titled "The No-Lose Program for Raising Responsible Children") has been the basis for P.E.T. courses throughout North America since its publication in 1970.

The Raddons became qualified to lead P.E.T. sessions after a she-week course in Toronto last year. What they learned, and want others to learn, is how to communicate clearly.

"Once you can define your needs, and express them, you're on your way to resolving a conflict with another family member; whose needs are different," Mrs. Raddon told me.

"The course doesn't promise solutions to specific problems. What it helps you find is a way to solve them yourself.

According to Mrs. Raddon, much of the course involves role-playing. This allows parents to experience different situations and different points of view.

"There are three methods of coping with child-raising," she said, "the first being authoritarian, where the parent holds the power and uses it.

"The child's responses to any power struggle will be fight, flight or submission. All are ineffective and none creates love or respect for the parent."

In the permissive method, the second of the three, the child has the power and the parent caters and yields. Often, the parents inevitably resent their dominating family while the children very often grow up insecure and unsure of their relationships.

The third method, according to Dr. Gordon, is his "no-lose" system, in which the family members learn to actively listen to each other in an attempt to end conflict. Ideally, either side will then lose and neither will have more power.

Problem-solving situations that P.E.T. is designed to help include: having to punish, yet feeling guilty over your child's resentment; generation gaps; strained relationships; hidden hate; children resisting your values; having over chores and rules; classroom battles; hugging and learn.

"P.E.T. has worked for us," said Mrs. Raddon. "My brother took the course with us and it's improved our relationship with him and his wife and the children."

Dr. Gordon's book is available at Corby Library, and at a local bookstore.

The Raddons' course begins September 12 at Victoria Avenue Baptist Church at 8 p.m. It runs eight weeks and costs $75 per couple or $50 single; this includes books and learning materials.

I'm intrigued. Especially by the "no-lose" aspect.

For me, as for many people, what's great about a good argument is winning it. I really do wonder if it's possible for both sides to walk away winners — and be happy about it?

I guess I won't know until I've tried it. ...

Mining Tax Policies Blamed For Cut in Mineral Reserves

OTTAWA (CP) — The mining-taxation policies of some provincial governments, British Columbia's in particular, are the cause of "the greatest erosion of mineral reserves in Canada," an international mining meeting was told Wednesday.

Ronald Fraser of Toronto, chairman of Hudson Bay Mining and Smelting Co. Ltd., told the 10th Commonwealth Mining and Metallurgical Congress that provincial governments are using the "powerful and dangerous weapon of taxation" indiscriminately.

The irony is that some provincial governments may lose millions of dollars in tax revenue in the long run by curtailing new exploration and prevent the industry from helping to keep the economy buoyant, said Mr. Fraser.

His criticism of shortsighted politicians was echoed by several other speakers as the congress's plenary session ended. About 800 delegates from more than 30 countries now break into groups for a four-week tour of mining operations across the country.

Government taxation policies were favorable to mining development in the last few decades, said Mr. Fraser. But ecologists, conservationists and politicians now had ganged up on the industry, saying it is reaping excessive profits and depleting natural resources.

While reserves of copper and other metals appear to be low in terms of current technology new ore bodies will be discovered with improved technology, he said.

"In exploration we have advanced very little beyond being able to discover what actually sticks up on of the ground. Now geophysical techniques enable us to grope a few hundred feet below the surface but the depths remain unplumbed."

Vast areas of forest and desert were effectively unexplored. The ocean bed offered great opportunities.

It is possible to envisage "all sorts of eventualities which will give the lie to the conservationists."

As for high profits, they are a symptom of smoothing out of balance in the economy, he said.

High profits indicated a shortage or uneven distribution of commodities, but these profits enabled companies to rectify the situation by channelling more money into exploration and technology, thereby producing more.

Moreover, high profits were needed to overcome inflation. In any case, the rate of return on mining investment in Canada was running about 30 to 35 per cent above the average of the last five years, but is lower than it was four or five years ago.

Insurance Doesn't Cover Loss of Power Capacity

TORONTO (CP) — Insurance on a 51-million generator destroyed by fire at Ontario Hydro's Nanticoke station July 31 will not make up for the loss of the station's 2,000-megawatt capacity since the fire, an official said Wednesday.

E. D. Holdup, Hydro's manager of thermal operations, said the station's closing for an indefinite period already has caused the public utility to use less-efficient generating stations.

"We have insurance against machinery breakdowns that covers the loss of the equipment, but it does not compensate us for the consequences of the lost generating capacity," Mr. Holdup said.

The Nanticoke station, 12 miles southeast of Simcoe, is Hydro's newest and largest fossil-fuel plant. It also has the highest efficiency rating, transforming nearly 40 per cent of the energy of the coal it consumes into electrical energy.

Wives Are Ruled Legitimate Expense

BARNIA (CP) — Beginning in January, Lambton County councillors may take their spouses to conventions and the county will pay their way.

Councillors approved a recommendation Wednesday that spouses be included with convention registration fees and hotel-room costs.

Each councillor is allowed to attend one convention a year and receives $25 a day to cover meals and costs other than registration and hotel fees.

Heifers Undervalued

BARRIE (CP) — Both cattle farmers and beef farmers would profit if retail grocery chains start treating male and female cattle equally, Charlie Gracey, chairman of the Canadian Cattlemen's Association, said Wednesday.

He said it is traditional for stores not to handle heifers. "There is no reason on earth for it," he said. "A heifer is just as good a product as a steer."

New Model Cars Use Less Fuel

DETROIT (AP) — Chrysler Corp. announced Wednesday that its 1975-model cars will use an average of five per cent less fuel than 1974 models.

Actual savings will range from three to 17 per cent, depending on models, the company said.

Chrysler President John Riccardo said at the company's preview of new models that the fuel savings have been accomplished through improved engine efficiency, lower axle ratios and expanded use of radial tires as standard equipment.

He said the figures came from the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA).

The EPA, which is expected to release figures for 1975 cars in a few weeks, has said 1975 models should average eight per cent in fuel economy under new current models with larger gas-guzzling cars expected to show the greatest improvements.

However, Chrysler officials said many of its small cars will have fuel economy gains as large as the largest models.

General Motors has said its new cars will average 15 per cent better fuel economy than 1974 models, based upon a GM city-suburban driving test.

GM officials and EPA figures show even greater gains.

Ford Motor Co. has said its cars will show seven or eight per cent economy gains.

Flood Damage Cheques Issued

CAMBRIDGE (CP) — The Ontario Government cheques to more than 500 homeowners and small business owners affected by the May 31 Grand River flood were to be sent out today.

The cheques cover 90 per cent of each claimant's appraised loss.

Each claimant will receive a subsequent payment that will bring compensation up to the 90 per cent set by the Ontario government in a policy change this week, Robert Kerr, chairman of the volunteer Grand River Relief Committee, said in an interview.

Probe Ordered

VATLAKE, Que. (CP) — Dr. G.E. Lauderdale of Fort Erie, Ont., has called a coroner's inquest for Sept. 12 into a three-car crash Saturday which killed two Quebec youths.

Dr. Lauderdale said Wednesday he called the inquest after a request from the provincial police to "clear the air" about a high-speed chase by police just before the accident.

Roland Bedard, 20, and Gilles St. Louis, 21, both of Ste. Brigitte des Saults, Que., died in the accident half a mile south of this city which is 19 miles east of St. Thomas.

Thieves Foiled

LONDON (Reuter) — Police foiled early today an apparent attempt by Scottish Nationalists to remove the ancient Scottish coronation chair, over which sovereigns are traditionally crowned, from Westminster Abbey.

One man was arrested inside the abbey and two others outside after an automatic burglar alarm sounded at Scotland Yard headquarters.

There were unconfirmed reports of slight damage to the coronation chair under which lies the 400-pound stone, also known as the Stone of Scone or Destiny.

Mountie Jailed

MONTREAL (CP) — RCMP Constable Robert Salmon, complaining of his "physical and mental condition," was sentenced to 60 days in jail Wednesday after refusing to testify before a fire commission's inquiry into a July 29 bomb blast.

Constable Salmon, a key witness at the inquiry into the bombing incident outside the home of Shaftsbury's Ltd. president Melvyn Dolgin, told Fire Commissioner Cyrille Delage he did not feel up to answering further questions.

In rendering his judgment, Mr. Delage said the constable has "abused my good faith. He promised to have new facts to add today."

The 28-year-old member of the RCMP's anti-terrorist squad lost the fingertips on his left hand and 44 per cent of his hearing in the explosion which caused about $1,000 damage to the Dolgin home.

Defence lawyer Franklin D. Shoofey said he will appeal the contempt citation.

"He's complained to me about having inventory found Mr. Shoofey said. "Besides, he's only a witness, not an accused.

"He was brought here in his city last week a few minutes after being released from hospital," the lawyer told Mr. Delage. "He answered all questions and gave his version last week, but you didn't believe him."

At Wednesday's hearing, Constable Salmon produced a medical certificate from Dr. [illegible] Montreal, stating he was unable because of [illegible] to give evidence. Dr. [illegible] added that under the [illegible] Act, he was obliged to [illegible]

Self-serve Gas Stations Are Growing in Popularity

VANCOUVER (CP) — Most service stations don't give you any service anymore, says Vancouver physician Dr. R. M. Christenson as he put the nozzle into his car's gas tank.

"So I don't see why I shouldn't serve myself. It isn't the money aspect so much as the fact that they're not giving the service."

Vancouver drivers are feeling the same way as Christenson. In December, 1973, British Columbia had 29 self-serve gas stations. This summer the number had risen to 82, most of them in the Lower Mainland.

Customers like them because the gas costs less and the service—their own—is fast, they present fewer management problems, aside from the occasional customer who drives off without paying.

Industry managers like them because a marginal operation can be revitalized almost overnight by converting to self-serve. Gas sales volume at least doubles.

The industry expects 30 per cent of by gas will be sold in self-serve by the end of the decade.

Self-serve prices per gallon are usually several cents below most standard stations charge. Competitive pressure among self - serve, often drives the price down another cent or two.

But there's more to self-serve operation than simply price. Price has a lot to do with it but we have Cadillacs, Oldsmobiles, even a Rolls-Royces," said Kevin Cooney, manager of one self-serve station. "The guy, doctors, lawyers, everybody comes in here."

Another factor is efficiency. Motorists don't want expensive car paint jobs marred by careless attendants.

The procedure is simple: Drive up, take the hose from the pump, turn the power switch to "on," put the nozzle in your tank and squeeze the handle until you have all the gas you want. Turn the pump off and replace the handle.

The amount registers on a control panel in the station office where you pay. The usual services are available—oil, air, water, window cleaner—only you provide them yourself.

John McIntyre, Shell Canada western retail sales manager said he thinks it can customers feel "that the so-called traditional free services in service stations are becoming fewer."

Are they becoming fewer?

"I wouldn't want to say," said Mr. McIntyre. "It's becoming more difficult for conventional operators to provide service, let's put it that way."

Some industry people still put price as the No. 1 reason self-serves have caught on.

"We could scrap or feel that the buying public was being sensitive to price in a lot of areas, not only in the price of steak, eggs and oranges but in the price of gas," said Walter Walmsley, retail manager for Chevron Standard.

Mr. McIntyre said the trend to self-service is a reflection of what is going on in the United States and Europe, especially Sweden, where 80 per cent of the stations are self-serve.

The industry is looking for other changes in strategy. Stations with low volume are being converted to self-serve or gas-and-carwash operation or closed.

In Alberta, Shell is operating convenience stores behind the gas pumps.

The completely automated self-serve station is already in existence. One is working in California, with a credit-card slot on the side of the pump. You pump your gas, slip in the card and the computer does the rest.

Consumer Affairs Minister Ouellet Backing Plumptre Against Whelan

OTTAWA (CP) — Consumer Affairs Minister Andre Ouellet sided with Beryl Plumptre Wednesday in her egg price battle with Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan.

The recently-appointed consumer affairs minister took the unusual step of publicly rebuking a fellow cabinet member after Mr. Whelan and Mrs. Plumptre, chairman of the food prices review board, clashed over federal egg pricing and marketing policies.

Mr. Ouellet, who took over the consumer portfolio about a month ago, issued a prepared statement endorsing demands by Mrs. Plumptre for consumer representation on egg marketing agencies.

He said he "regrets the tactics" of Mr. Whelan's attack on Mrs. Plumptre in a speech last week.

He then described Mr. Whelan as "my friend and colleague" and said he plans to meet him for discussions on the food board's latest report on egg prices.

Mrs. Plumptre and Mr. Whelan exchanged criticism in separate speeches during the last two weeks in Canadian National Exhibition director in Toronto.

Mrs. Plumptre described the egg marketing scheme as "a mess and accused Mr. Whelan of rescuing the federal marketing agency from a $10-million deficit. She charged that marketing practices have produced lower egg purchases and kept prices unjustifiably high.

Mr. Whelan said Mrs. Plumptre did not know what she was talking about. That price and the federal government has not subsidized the Canadian Egg Marketing Agency (CEMA).

Mrs. Plumptre's board issued its second report on eggs in Quebec last week accusing the federal and provincial governments of allowing quasi-monopoly agencies to mismanage the egg industry.

The review board recommended among other things that marketing agencies have some members who are not egg producers.

Mr. Ouellet said the Plumptre board was set up to analyse food price trends and make recommendations on ways to curb prices.

"They were set up to offer constructive criticism to government and to producer and industry groups," he said.

They were not intended to pull their punches and their latest report appears to be a good example of their thorough research and constructive criticism.

Mr. Ouellet said he intends to take the board recommendations seriously and I will urge my colleagues to do likewise.

British Tories Issue Call to Fight Chaos

LONDON (AP) — As the Conservative government of Conservatives warned today that industrial chaos stirred up by revolutionaries "knows no limits" and called for a force of volunteers to prevent a national collapse.

The Monday Club, composed of right-wing backbench politicians and some legislators, said in a pamphlet titled Steps to Safeguard Britain that the threat requires "widespread industrial training and possibly an auxiliary."

"We have to envisage situations where militant trade unions organize political strikes in essential industries," it said.

"Preparations should be made now for maintaining essential supplies as was done in the 1926 general strike."

The club's call came amid growing economic and political uncertainty in the United Kingdom.

With a minority Labor government apparently unable to curb the country's economic woes, vigilante organizations have sprung up locally to man the services in a nationwide shutdown. Some are led by ex-army officers, including a former NATO commander, and are believed to be financed by big business.

Labor has accused these organizations of "fascism," but some Conservative politicians have begun indicating sympathy for them, and one group last week proposed recruiting a citizen force to beef up police supporting Conservative views.

Transit Strike Avoided

KITCHENER, Ont. (CP) — Local 204, Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers, has obtained a last-minute contract offer to avert a strike by the city transit workers, eliminating the possibility of a strike.

The workers, members of Local 204, Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers, had planned to walk out on strike at midnight Wednesday in support of wage demands.

The offer accepted by the workers — a 12 per-cent increase over one year — was made by the city shortly before the strike deadline, sending the workers into a special meeting.

The workers earlier rejected a city offer of 10 per cent over two years — 11 per cent retroactive to June 1 and another nine per cent effective June 1, 1972.

Blast Wrecks Convent

HOBART, Tasmania (AP) — An explosion at a Roman Catholic convent killed at least 10 persons and injured at least 23 others, officials at the Royal Hobart Hospital reported.

Police said it was believed a new boiler blew up. It had been installed three weeks ago in the laundry of the convent, and a nearby neighbor said he heard repairmen were working on it.

The explosion took place in Sandy Bay four miles from the heart, in also a home for wayward girls, but the identities of the victims could not be learned immediately.

Hobart is the capital of Tasmania, an Australian island state about 150 miles south of the Australian mainland.

Martin Cove, who runs a school in his home near the convent, said the explosion was "like a tremendous bomb going off."

"It must have gone 300 or 400 feet up into the sky. . . . A complete building at least 50 feet square was completely demolished."

INCO Will Expand

JAKARTA (AFP) — The Canadian International Nickel Company (INCO) plans to expand its mining investments in Indonesia to a total of $420 million by 1977, Mining Minister Mohammad Sadli said today.

Sadli said INCO's current investment in the Sorowako nickel project in central Celebes was estimated at $140 million.

Sadli said the company plans to build a hydroelectric power plant near the mining site to power a smelter. Production is expected to start when this investment is the Sorowako nickel 1976 or early 1977, he added.

†Compact sizes—2 Nylon body plies plus 2 Glass Belts

ILLUSTRATED: 4+2 BELT-O-GLASS

4 + 2 construction means 6 instead of the usual 4 ply under the tread. That makes it stronger than all the others. 4 + 2 costs a lot more to make, and so is rarely available elsewhere. Even at twice Canadian Tire prices, 4 + 2 would still be good value. More miles, twice the safety! (See Nevada Test results posted in our stores)
5-Yr. Road Hazard Insured: 66-Month, 44% Pro-rated Wear-Out Disct'. Allowance.

Turnpike Wide-Track 2+2 Glass-Belted Polyester—A Glass-Belted tire that's extra wide, and deep-treaded like the 4 + 2 Belt-O-Glass above, but with 2 body plies of Polyester and 2 'Second Generation' improved Glass Belts, similar to tires installed on new cars now.

Errors in Returns Costs Taxpayer Plenty

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

Taxpayers are paying tax-payers more money than necessary these days.

The bill — totalling almost $8,000 at the Belleville district taxi office, results from errors in income tax returns filed earlier this year.

The deadline for returns — extended by last spring's mail strike — was May 31.

Now, more than three months later, the Belleville staff of the federal revenue ministry, is still at work correcting faulty returns. So far, they've spent an additional 2,-208 work hours on the task.

In fact, the exceptional has never been bigger, says Laura Gundesen, revenue public relations officer for the Belleville district.

"For people have been just messed under," says Mrs. Gundesen. "This has been one of our worst years."

To date, about 9,600 returns have either been rejected by the ministry's central computer in Ottawa or been recalled after taxpayers discovered they filled the wrong information.

"And this is just what's been processed to the end of last month. We still haven't got through all of it yet," says Mrs. Gundesen.

The Belleville office administers a district that produces about 200,000 returns a year — from Napanee in Hastings-ville and north to Peterborough.

The cost of making the necessary corrections is estimated mainly in other work programs and assignments that are neglected while the steady stream of inaccuracies demands attention.

"This is something the taxpayers don't realize — how many mistakes should have become, says the information officer.

Mistakes bringing computer rejection included incomplete details on personal exemptions of back 7-4 and 7-5 slips on income statements and mistakes in estimating Ontario tax credit allowances.

Taxpayers should contact the individual to collect the required details.

Individuals filling returns themselves they had "wrongly" estimated the provincial tax credit, failed to claim education deductions or mailed returns before all information slips were available.

But a basic cause of error is that many people file too hastily, thus making errors despite the — official tax guide mailed with each return, says Mrs. Gundesen.

"If people followed the tax guide with their returns it would have made a big difference," she says.

Statistics may support her view.

The ministry, in a recent news release, admits not all taxpayers grappling with their annual returns would suffer with the financial ex-pert who called the guide a miracle of lucidity.

But no more than 17 per cent of Canadian taxpayers have paid professional consultants to prepare their returns. This compares with almost 50 per cent in the United States.

Besides the guide, the ministry in recent years also has had local information offices like the Belleville one, public campaigns to assist the individual when returns are due.

Newspapers, radio and television have been used in all major centres in the Belleville district. Volunteer community groups were trained to assist the elderly and incapacitated.

"Still," says Mrs. Gundesen, indicating a pile-up of files awaiting processing, "this year we've run into one of the heaviest workloads after the filing deadline."

Head Count Begins For City Election

The head count is on again in Belleville and adjoining municipalities.

Commencing this week and continuing through until about September 20, municipal enumeration will be underway in Belleville and across the province.

Since the province took over the assessment task a few years ago, the municipal enumeration has been under the direction of regional assessment offices which in turn reports voter eligibility for December elections to local municipal clerks.

The regional assessment office, located in Trenton, looks after municipal enumeration for the counties of Hastings, Prince Edward and Northumberland.

Alan Smith, manager of assessment services for the Trenton office said 340 canvassers have been hired to do the enumeration in the three counties.

Training for the enumerators job was held in August.

In Belleville an enumerator's editing office has been set up at City hall where information is processed daily and passed on to the Trenton office.

The voting requirements in a municipal election differ from federal statutes, since they allow a non-resident who is at least 18 years old and a Canadian or British subject, even if that person owns or rents property in the municipality.

The spouse of such a non-resident is also entitled to vote in that municipality.

However, more than just a voter's eligibility is required. The enumerators must record names, ages, property status (either owner or tenant), public or separate school support and residency of all members of each household.

This information is required for five purposes:

1. — The preparation of voters' list for local elections to be held December 2.

2. — The division of the education portion of property taxes between the public and separate school boards.

3. — The distribution of provincial grants to local governments to help reduce local tax bills.

4. The preparation of jurors' lists.

5. The determination of local population statistics to assist in municipal and provincial planning.

Back to Classes

John Warren, 30-year-old Kingston man, is hoping to get back into the workforce after being stricken with blindness. With seeing-eye dog he's come to Belleville and registered Wednesday for job-preparation courses at Loyalist College.

Blind Youth Attempts Classes at Loyalist

At 20, John Warren is almost totally blind.

But he is intent on beginning a new career.

Departure point to the young Kingston man's new life is Loyalist College.

Wednesday, he took the first tentative step across that threshold when he enrolled in study in behavioral sciences.

For the next two years — accompanied by a seeing-eye dog — he will take courses in psychology and sociology.

He said he has come to Belleville because of the welcome Loyalist held out despite his handicap.

Constantly college officials in his native city gave little encouragement when earlier this year he discussed studying in Kingston.

"I came up to Loyalist and they were more than enthusiastic, he said "And, now, I'm really overjoyed with the situation."

But, the college also stands to benefit from the blind student's presence, says Paul Zakos, co-ordinator of the course who plans taping next week.

"It's going to be a real learning experience for us as a school," say Mr. Zakos. "We're going to have to tailor our responses, too, in order to meet his needs."

"Many colleges and universities weren't built for people with handicaps at all. It's going to get us looking at what were doing from all different aspects of education."

Mr. Zakos describes his new student as "highly motivated." It's a trait John reveals when he talks of realizing he was going blind and how he had to rehabilitate his lifestyle and ability to adapt.

"I sort of realized it was eventually going to happen. I made up my mind it wasn't going to get me down."

He was working in a heavy retail store when he received the first intimation about four years ago. What happened was a side effect of diabetes.

A year ago, his sight much deteriorated, he registered at the Canadian National Institute for the Blind.

When he was guaranteed admission to Loyalist, the CNIB decided he could have a seeing-eye dog. For 25 days he trained with the German shepherd selected as his walking sensor at Morristown, N.J.

Accommodation was solved after he spoke on radio to assist the problem of a man in his position finding rooms. Response ended up with the address of a vacant West Moira St. apartment.

At Loyalist, his texts and reference works will either be taped or in Braille. Most of the needed works already have been recorded — part of a standing service from various centres, provided through the CNIB.

City Council Approves Extension To Ben Bleecker Auditorium

A consultant will be hired to draw plans and specifications for a storage extension to the Ben Bleecker Auditorium.

The recommendation for the storage addition by the fair-grounds beautification committee from the city recreation-arena committee was approved this week by city council.

Mayor Robin Jeffrey said the storage facility at the Bleecker building is badly needed since there is no place to store chairs and tables when these were not in use.

Plans for the proposed extension are needed now to enable the city to make use of available grant works funds she noted.

Council also approved a report of parks management recommendation calling for the area immediately to the north of the Hastings-Prince Edward County Separate School Board property (Central) and the grounds of the Hastings County Board of Education school property on Tracey Street to be incorporated in the city's official plan as proposed parkland.

Alderman Paul Russell said there is an outlook area for parts in the north Belleville area which will see a sizeable residential development.

Council also approved a recreation committee recommendation to purchase a solid state time clock for the Dick Ellis Rink at a cost of $3,382 with the provision that the Belleville Minor Sports Association pay $2,000 toward the cost.

The sports association contribution will be covered by a donation from the Belleville Yardmen.

Council Hears Views On Proposed OHC Units

The proposed rezoning of property north of the Unemployment Insurance Commission building and east of the Belleville Place to allow construction of a 48-unit town house development by Ontario Housing Corporation has hit a snag.

An objection to the rezoning has been received at city hall from local builder Charles Lambert, who proposes construction of single-family units on the east side of Singleton Dr.

Mr. Lambert, in a letter to city hall, said he feels the town house development will have a reverse effect on the sale of his single-family houses across the street.

Another area resident said in a letter he feels the Ontario Housing Corp. development would become a slum area and result in depreciation in the value of her home.

In view of the objections to the townhouse development, Mayor Robin Jeffrey suggested that the OHC be asked to consider the possibility of a provincial integrated housing for the area.

Air Charter Refused

The Canadian Transport Commission (CTC) has denied an air charter licence to La Belle Air-Inc., a decision the company says it is disputing.

Paul LaBelle, the company's principal, said the Belleville-based firm decided there wasn't enough business.

"I think the denial may have been put built for not completely specifying the need for such a service."

Mr. LaBelle said he now is composing an appeal to be sent to the CTC review board that will include more information concerning potential business.

The company hopes to use the deserted air field at Descronto and provide an amphibians service.

"We would be equipped to handle sports from fishing businessmen to flying fishermen," said Mr. LaBelle.

Mr. LaBelle said he does not agree with the government stopping in and stopping a business in "a free enterprise system."

"In a free enterprise system we (businessmen) should be able to start up at our own risk" he said.

Richard Burst, a spokesman for the CTC's licensing division in Ottawa, said today the application from LaBelle Air had been denied "... based on economic points."

He said Descronto and the surrounding area is quite a bit smaller than Belleville, where a licence has been granted to Loyal-Air.

Mr. Burst said the applicant was turned down in June and that the 30-day appeal period had expired.

Mr. LaBelle said today, if the appeal period expired, he will submit an entirely new application.

Snow Tires A Problem

Winston Kreachbaum, manager of Belleville's Firestone outlet — sitting in empty snow tire racks, says supplies are short and motorists should buy now before supplies run out and prices run up. Strikes at Firestone and Goodyear plants have cut deliveries in local outlets.

Dealers Warn of Possible Tire Shortage This Winter

Snow tires may be scarce this winter and local dealers are advising motorists to do their shopping early.

Labor problems at Goodyear and Firestone have cut tire production in Ontario and the effect is beginning to be felt in the city.

Winston Kreachbaum, manager of Belleville's Firestone store says his supply of snow tires is already critically low.

"I have only the left-overs — not said last winter," he said.

The Goodyear store reports fewer problems, drawing on production from company plants in Quebec.

Doug Hunter, manager of Independent Tire which handles Goodyear, Uniroyal, and Michelin tires said he believes the only reason he has been so far is because his orders were made well in advance of the strikes. But he, too, only problems, he added, may be coming.

"They'd better buy them while they can get them," said Mr. Kreachbaum.

One dealer also said the longer strikes continue, the more expensive tires will be.

"Prices aren't going to skyrocket, but plant strikes will mean further increases," he said.

"This isn't a scare tactic," said Mr. Kreachbaum, commenting on the reported tire shortages.

Mr. Hunter added, however, "the business isn't as short as they'd like people to think."

"The real problems will come with cold out lines later, in the winter ... particularly smaller tires for imported cars."

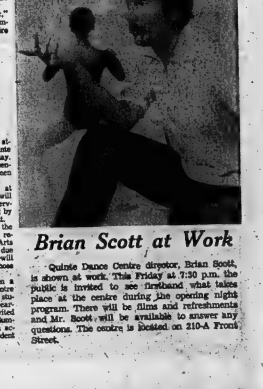
Max Colden, manager of Belleville's Canadian Tire outlet says "it's too early to tell how supplies will last."

"I haven't gotten any new stock ... just what I've got left from last year," he added.

Sugar Not Scarce, But Prices High

Although one supermarket ran out of sugar Wednesday, there is no shortage of sugar in the city. But price is something else.

The empty shelves were temporary and were filled later in the evening. Local wholesalers and store managers, however, have no idea what price sugar will be from day to day.



"The price changes about twice a week" one manager said "and the direction is generally up."

Based on a 10-lb. bag, Belleville prices range from about 4 cents to 30 cents a pound this week. But as one supermarket manager said, "I've heard we can expect 79 cents a pound before long."

School is In

This is the week when school children everywhere return to their classes armed with a load of books and hopefully a lot of pleasant summer memories. But in between classes there's still recess and lunch and plenty of sun to make playing outside fun. At St. Michael's Academy, these students were caught at play in the school's playground during their lunch hour.

Brian Scott at Work

Quinte Dance Centre director, Brian Scott, is shown at work. This Friday at 7:30 p.m. the public is invited to see firsthand what takes place at the centre during the opening night program. There will be films and refreshments and Mr. Scott will be available to answer any questions. The centre is located on 210-A Front Street.

Dance Centre Opens

The public is invited to attend the opening of the Quinte Dance Centre this Friday. This is the third year the centre at 210A Front St. has been operating.

The official opening is at 7:30 p.m. at which films will be shown, refreshments served and questions answered by dance director, Brian Scott.

For the coming year, the Quinte Dance Centre has received an Ontario Arts Council grant of $500. And due to popular demand, there will be a pre-ballet class for those four to seven-years-old.

The last year has been a successful one for the centre with approximately 100 students in attendance. Ten-year-old Andrew Pape was invited to the National Ballet Summer School and has been accepted as a full-time student this fall.

Wilson Loses One-hitter, Expos Lose Game and Hunt

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Preston Gomez is a man who makes his decisions and sticks to them, even three years later.

In 1996, Gomez fired Clay Kirby for a short-lived three-month Kirby had pitched eight straight of nine, but Gomez didn't again, this time to Don Wilson.

Wilson had a no-hitter after eight innings Thursday night (Cincinnati, Reds, but was trailing 3-1 because of a cooly throwing error by Roger Metzger. The game ended in the bottom of the eighth-by lucky hops from the Astrodome roof. Final: 4-3.

Owner of pinch-hitter Tommy Helms, who grounded out.

Manager John Goryl gave up a leadoff single to Tony Perez in the top of the ninth. The Padres failed to tie the score in the bottom half of the inning and Wilson added insult with the loss.

"There was no discussion on the bench about my decision," Gomez said.

"It makes my own decisions. The man didn't bother me. I got paid for winning 20 games, not the no-hitter."

Elsewhere in the National League, Los Angeles Dodgers beat San Francisco Giants 6-3, St. Louis Cardinals defeated Montreal Expos 5-4, Atlanta Braves beat San Diego Padres 4-3 and New York Mets defeated Chicago Cubs 4-3.

RON HUNT

Wilson was not available for comment after the game.

Cosgrove, who relieved Wilson, said he felt nothing special about coming into a no-hitter.

"There was no pressure," he said. "He (Gomez) just tried to keep them from winning. I'm sure flat he (Wilson) is disturbed about things."

Wilson, 20-11, lost the game when Metzger threw wildly past first on a routine grounder by Pete Rose in the fifth inning, allowing Cesar Geronimo and George Foster to score from second and third.

Jimmy Wynn's three-run homer in the 11th inning gave the Dodgers, the victory, maintaining their 7½-game lead over Cincinnati in the NL West. The Dodgers and Reds open a three-game set in Cincinnati tonight.

Jim Dwyer's run-scoring pinch-single in the eighth inning drove in the tie-breaking run and gave the Cubs their fourth victory in a row, moving St. Louis within 2½ games of the first-place Pittsburgh Pirates in the NL East.

With the score tied 4-4, Bake McBride singled to lead off the eighth, was sacrificed to second, took third on an infield out and scored on Dwyer's single to center.

St. Louis' Lou Brock did not steal a base in the game, leaving him at 89 after 137 games in his pursuit of Maury Wills' single-season record of 104.

After the game it was announced that the Cards had claimed infielder Ron Hunt on waivers from Montreal.

Run-scoring singles by Mike Lum, Dave Johnson and pitcher Max Leon in the seventh inning lifted the Braves to their fourth consecutive victory and saddled San Diego with its ninth straight loss.

The Mets stretched their winning streak to seven games by completing a three-game sweep over Chicago.

Sixth-inning singles by pitcher Ray Sadecki, Bud Harrelson, Felix Millan and John Milner produced two runs for the Mets. A bases-loaded walk by Harrelson in the seventh brought in the eighth and final run for the winner in the sixth produced the final run.

Grand Leads Wings

PHILADELPHIA (CP) — John Grant scored the tying goal with two seconds remaining and then got the winner in overtime to give Philadelphia Wings an 11-10 victory over Maryland Arrows in National Lacrosse League played Tuesday night.

A crowd of 7,615 saw the Wings take the opening game of the best-of-seven semi-final series which continues with the second game here tonight.

Grant, a regular left-winger on the Philadelphia team, shot three goals and assisted on two others.

Larry Lloyd scored three other Philadelphia goals. Terry Boyd, Brian Nadeau, Terry Rowland, Bob Cleaver and Doug Favell got the other Wings goals.

Paul Suggate, Bill Coghill and Pat Ryan scored two goals each for Maryland, Jean Vern, Ken Henderson, Wayne Thompson and John McKenna got one each.

Philadelphia outshot Maryland 53-51.

In the other semi-final, Montreal Quebecers meet Rochester Griffins in the first game tonight in Rochester.

Different Shades of Red For New York and Boston

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

New York Yankees are red. Texas Rangers beat Minnesota second inning.

Boston Red Sox are red-faced.

Their individual predicaments have given some color to the American League East Division baseball race.

The Yankees won thirty 18th game in their last 20 Wednesday with a 3-0 decision over Milwaukee Braves and climbed into a first-place tie with falling Boston in the East.

The embarrassed Red Sox made the tie possible by losing a 6-4 decision to Baltimore Orioles, their sixth straight loss and their ninth in the last 11 games.

Baltimore's victory, incidentally, also put the Orioles right in the picture. The Birds moved within three games of the top and manager Earl Weaver looked optimistically toward a September stretch run.

"I figured we had to beat the Red Sox two out of three to stay alive," Weaver said.

"If Boston left town four games ahead, we still had plenty of time. Winning all five makes it a lot easier."

Baltimore's suddenly revitalized pitching staff not only beat the Red Sox in their three-game series—they humiliated them with consecutive shutouts.

"We'll get straightened out," promised Boston manager Dan-ny Johnson, who must be wondering where all his firepower has gone to. "You can count on it."

In other American League games, Cleveland Indians beat Detroit Tigers 8-4, Chicago White Sox whipped Kansas City Royals 7-4, California Angels defeated Oakland A's 5-3 and Texas Rangers beat Minnesota Twins 1-0.

Jim Palmer and Earl Wilson exhibited to good form in Baltimore's victory over the stumbling Red Sox.

Palmer, back on the active roster less than a month after 54 days on the disabled list, hurled a three-hitter. The Red Sox not only failed to score in three games against the Orioles, but managed only eight singles.

Williams, who has hit eight of his 13 home runs since July 31, ten solo homers and drove in three runs as Baltimore won its seventh game in a row.

George (Doc) Medich pitched a five-hitter and struck out 13 straight batters at one point to pace New York's victory. Leo Cardenas doubled home the first of two runs in the first inning as the Yankees beat Kevin Collins.

Pinch-hitter Rico Carty's run-scoring single in the sixth inning off Detroit relief ace John Hiller gave Cleveland a win over Detroit. With the score tied at 4-4, John Ellis led off the eighth with a single off Hiller, 18-10.

After Jack Brohamer hit into a forceout, Buddy Bell hit a single to third, Brohamer taking third. Carty then looked for Tom McCraw and singled to left, bringing home Brohamer with the winning run.

Jim Kaat fired a four-hitter as Chicago gained credit for six runs and seven hits in the fifth inning to beat Kansas City.

Bob Oliver drove in two runs with a double and single to lead California over Oakland. Oliver doubled to drive in Bobby Valentine and scored himself on a single. Jenkins blanked Minnesota on seven hits for his 20th victory and 25th shutout of the season, pitching Texas over the Twins.

Smith In Quarter Finals

FOREST HILLS, N.Y. (AP) — Stan Smith prevented his way into the men's quarter-finals Wednesday and threw down the gauntlet to top-seeded Jimmy Connors in the United States open tennis championships.

"We have some lasses in scrie..." the six-foot-four-inch Californian, formerly the world's No. 1 player, said after beating Sydney Ball of Australia 6-3, 6-3, 6-1.

Smith and Connors, co-ranked No. 1 in the U.S. ratings, are on a collision course that crosses in the semi-finals. Smith must play the winner of the match between Roscoe Tanner of the U.S. and Ismael El Shafei of Egypt.

Connors won a scrambling fourth-round match over tough Jan Kodes of Czechoslovakia, 7-5, 6-3, 7-6, 6-4. Connors meets the Soviet Union's Alex Metreveli next.

The Russian scored a surprisingly easy 6-1, 6-3, 7-6 victory over sixth-seeded Tom Okker of the Netherlands.

Jimmy's fiancee, Chris Evert, fought off four set points in the tie break of the opening set for a 7-6, 6-3 triumph over Lesley Hunt of Australia and advanced into the women's semi-finals.

She was joined by Ronnie Goolagong of Australia who eliminated fourth-seeded Kerry Melville, also of Australia, 6-4, 7-6.

They will meet in Friday's semi-finals.

Stafford Buys Roan

TORONTO (CP) — Jack Stafford, who usually breeds his own horses, made the biggest purchase of the Canadian Thoroughbred Society's yearling sale Wednesday night.

The Toronto businessman, owner of the last two Queen's Plate winners—Amber Hanover and Royal Gunner—paid $15,000 for a roan colt by Al Hattab out of Happy Kiss.

Wednesday's sale showed a decrease in business with 69 yearlings being sold for $622,760, an average of $11,522. Last year, 70 horses were sold on the second night for an average of $14,996.

No Shortage Of Recruits In Cat Camp

By MIKE BRADSHAW
Sports Staff

TRENTON — If numbers mean anything this should be the best year ever for the Belleville Bobcats in the Metro Junior B Hockey League.

At their first open practice of the season, Tuesday in the Community Gardens, there were more than 110 players trying to secure spots on the team.

"I've never had this many," said General Manager Jim Mathews, "and I think this is the largest turnout ever."

After Tuesday's outing, the number had been cut down to about 80. After the session Wednesday night Mathews,

Olympics Win In Exhibition

Belleville Olympics, of the Premier Soccer League, travelled to Cobourg Wednesday night for an exhibition game against the Bay of Quinte Soccer Association pennant winners, Cobourg Tony's.

The Belleville club was shortstaffed as far as their regular roster goes since they only had five of their starters with them.

Nevertheless Belleville got two goals in the first half to deny Tony's 3-1. Nick Dinelle and John O'Neil were the scorers for the winners.

Cobourg scored in the second half with a marker from Alex Essert.

Woodland Cleaners BMLA Peewee Champ

The championship team in the peewee division of the Belleville Minor Lacrosse Association produced quite a success story on the way to league and playoff titles.

According to a team spokesman, the club began the season with no team or sponsor. But once those two important vacancies were filled, it was full speed ahead.

Richard and Francine Hounslow and Ted Soule volunteered to coach the team and Woodland Cleaners came through with the sponsorship.

After dropping its first league start, the squad rallied to reel off nine straight victories to finish in top spot and gain a bye to the playoff final.

Daisy Queen won the High Ball, with Woodland Cleaners the crown by getting past a team Police Association team in the second-fastest pouring a pair of 5-4 wins).

In the final it was Woodland in straight games, 16-4 and 5-3.

The champs got solid goaltending all the way through from Brian Slaughter.

Providing most of the scoring punch in the playoff were Jim Hamilton, Jamie Forster, Paul Hounslow and Rob Soule but team officials state it was a solid team effort current the squad all the way.

On the regular season, goalie Slaughter compiled a solid goals against average of 1.83. He chalked up one shutout.

Trevor Foster, with games played, goals and assists to his credit, Ed Boyce (18-14-32) Des Donnelly (19-9-2), Jamie Forster (9-15-9), Dan Hounslow (18-9-4), Paul Hounslow (16-12-7), Chris Lowe (9-8-1), Peter Pelis (13-12-2), Bill Reid (9-3-4), Steve Slaughter (9-7-5), Scott Smith (8-1-0), and Rob Soule (19-4-6).

FLEMING RELEASED

CHICAGO (AP) — Left winger Reggie Fleming was released Wednesday by Chicago Cougars of the World Hockey Association. Fleming, 36, who played with 1960-61 Stanley Cup champion Chicago Black Hawks in his first full National Hockey League season, wound up with 1,068 penalty minutes in 13 NHL seasons. In two WHA seasons, Fleming had 164 penalty minutes, while getting 82 points on 35 goals and 57 assists.

Comparing Notes

While prospects for the Belleville Bobcats Junior B hockey team show their stuff on the ice, manager Ross Soule (left), coach, Tim Williams, (centre) and general manager, Jim 'Snipe' Mathews, compare notes on the talent. The threesome have met all the last two night cutting down a turn-out list of over 100.

Bay of Quinte Soccer

3 Games — 3 Shutouts

Three shutouts were recorded in Bay of Quinte Soccer Association play, Wednesday, but one went into the record book without a shot being fired.

At Trenton's Centennial Park, Belleville Parsons gained credit for a 3-0 win when Cooney's Hacklags could muster only six players for the league fixture.

The evening wasn't a total loss for the two teams however, since Parsons loaned Cooney's enough players to field a team and the two squads hooked up in what is termed in soccer circles as a "friendly".

Highlight of the other two matches was the play of the father-son goaltending team of Ray and Terry Hore.

At the Ontario School for the Deaf pitch, Ray, the elder, turned back the best efforts of Belleville Golden Mile Olympics as CFB, Trenton chalked up a 14 win.

Cole Porter was the game's lone marksman.

And at Bain Memorial Park in Trenton, Terry Hore turned in his ninth shutout of the season as Whitley Insurance blanked Spartacus 3-0.

Two goals by Whitley's Henry Sonneveld and one by Jim McDonald got the win for Sonneveld's pair shot him into a tie with Cobourg's John Van Balen for the league lead in scoring. Each has 27 goals.

Van Balen gets a chance to add to his total tonight when the Cobourg squad completes its regular schedule in a match with Belleville United.

Old Radio Shows

Friends Collect Old Tapes as Hobby

EDMONTON (CP) — Carmen Madu and Al Girard are a couple of nostalgia nuts trying to recapture the golden days of radio—the days when the fast-talking Kingfish was always trying to con slow-thinking Andy in the famous Amos 'n' Andy series; when the question as "Who knows what evil lurks in the minds of men?" was always answered with "The Shadow."

"Our main concern is to save as many of these old programs as we can from being destroyed, as well as adding to our collection," said Mr. Girard.

Mr. Girard and Mr. Madu collect tapes of old radio shows. They add to their collection by taping shows broadcast by local radio stations that cater to nostalgia fans and by buying tapes from other collectors.

Some of the old favorites are lost forever.

Back in the days when radio was the chief entertainment medium, programs were sent from station to station on discs which resembled modern-day records. After the discs acquired a scratchy sound from constant use, the stations threw them out, thinking the distributor had made a master copy.

Sometimes the master disc was destroyed.

The two Edmonton collectors have about 250 hours of the old classics on tape. Some collectors in the United States have as many as 1,000 hours.

Wildlife Workshop Brings Two Opposing Sides Closer

Two groups that are often at each other's throats will get together later this month to learn more about hunting ethics and wildlife management.

A two-session experimental workshop Sept. 19 and 22 at the Gananoque Provincial Wildlife Area will bring together hunters and so-called "bird watchers."

Although the province is the official host, most of the instruction will be given by experts from the 200-member Kingston Field Naturalists, the Ontario Federation of Anglers and Hunters and other local groups.

"I think the extremists in both groups have exaggerated things," said Jack O'Dette, a Kingston hunter. "Essentially we have the same interests. We both want to see wildlife species around — for different reasons."

"Naturalists have a lot to teach hunters about appreciating all aspects of a trip into the field. They are also very aware of environmental damage and what can be done about it," said Mr. O'Dette.

Bob Stewart, Kingston Field Naturalist, said the workshop is a chance for a lot of naturalists to come out of the "shell of complaints" and start actively working with hunters.

"Naturalists may know a lot about species and life histories, but we have a lot to learn from hunters about habitat and management," he said.

Del Benson, a natural resources ministry biologist, said the idea of hunters and naturalists getting together on common projects is one of the most exciting things to happen in the field for years.

Highlights of the workshop sessions will include a retriever dog display, practical lessons in tracks and animal communities work together in not only wetland, farmland and forest land sites, but in transition zones between habitats.

"If we can get participants out in the field and have them out their hand on a 30-year-old aspen and show them how this makes a difference in the life of a ruffed grouse, they'll enjoy outings just that much more," said Mr. Benson.

See the colorful display of 10,000 exhibits, Picton is a 'different' kind of Fair, COME. Enjoy the FUN on the Happy Land Midway.

Day For Night At Mall
The Quinte Mall changes half of its lot Friday when "Day For Night" opens in Cinema 1.
French director Francois Truffaut offers a sophisticated-night look at his own art of film-making.
A polished cast headed by Jacqueline Bisset and Jean-Pierre Aumont help Truffaut show his audience how a diverse collection of eccentrics can be moulded into the tightly-knit unit needed to produce movies. It's something like the newsroom staff on the Mary Tyler Moore Show individually colorful but, together, capable of interweaving in a remarkable form of cooperation.
The film is adult entertainment, with Friday showings at 7 and 9.10 p.m.

SHAWANO'S TOPS FOR INVESTMENT

In today's skyrocketing prices, Shawano is an outstanding investment.

Many lot owners have seen the value of their land increase by 200% or more.

Buying a lot at Shawano is an even better investment than most others. Three reasons why:

One — the province is running out of recreational land.

Two — sale of crown land for cottages is halted.

Three — residential planning regulations have restricted private development.

You can still buy 2 big, ½ acre lakefront lot at Shawano from $2,500.00 to $24,900.00 with 10% down and excellent financing.

Shawano is the beautiful 1 mile acre waterfront recreational area in the historic Highlands of Hastings, 30 minutes north of Madoc via highway 62. Marvelous swimming, boating and fishing.

"Rauch Unable to Adjust to Canadian Game", Said Barrow

TORONTO (CP) — Toronto Argonauts are trying to find a replacement for John Rauch, fired Wednesday as head coach of the Canadian Football League club.

General manager John Barrow has asked defensive backfield coach Joe Moss if he wants the job.

Barrow, who said he fired Rauch because he "has not been able to adjust to the Canadian game," appointed Moss, 46, as interim coach.

Moss has not yet told Barrow whether he wanted the job. "I'll think about it overnight, gather my thoughts and tell Barrow in the morning."

Moss, former Rochester coach with Philadelphia Eagles in the National Football League, has been with Toronto two years.

Rauch, brought here last year by Barrow to replace Leo Cahill, was disclaimed after the 1972 season, had 1½ years to go on a three-year contract.

Moss came here from an assistant coaching position with Oakland Raiders, which is head coach with Oakland Raiders and Buffalo Bills.

But Barrow said Rauch had failed to take advantage of CFL rules changes as a ball-control passing attack.

The Argos have lost four of their seven games this season and are tied for second spot with Ottawa and Hamilton, four points behind Montreal Alouettes who beat the Argos 13-11 Tuesday night.

Rauch took much of the blame for Tuesday's loss after he sent in a "gadget" play late in the third quarter which resulted in an Ala Isaacyo safety touch when the snapping ball was disclaimed after the quarterback Mike Rae agreed that Rauch had made a bad call when he sent in the halfback option late in the third quarter of Wednesday's game.

"I was amazed and I told him (Rauch)," said Rae. "I didn't think it was a good play. I wouldn't have called it. I don't like losing that way."

Defensive back Dave Ralmey said some of the older players on the team were surprised at the decisions Rauch made which resulted in his firing.

"Therefore his departure can only help. This team should be a winner."

Meanwhile, Moss, who played with Ottawa Rough Riders in 1953, has the task of preparing the Argos to face the Alouettes again Sunday in Montreal and British Columbia Lions here next Thursday.

"We'll be ready by Sunday," said Moss. "There won't be any startling changes—by them or by us."

Barrow said Rauch will be paid for the balance of his contract.

In his first season in the CFL last year, Rauch coached the Argos to a second-place finish in the EFC with seven wins, five losses and a tie.

His best showing as a head coach was in 1967 when he took Oakland to the Super Bowl, losing the championship game 33-14 to Green Bay Packers.

JOHN BARROW ... "I'll think about it overnight, gather my thoughts and tell Barrow in the morning."

Australians Sneak Aboard Courageous

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — Conservancy Herod Wednesday over the upcoming America's Cup competition when two members of the Australian entry sneaked aboard United States defender Courageous and found irregularities on the craft.

The Australians, reserve skipper John Cuneo of the challenging Southern Cross and an unidentified crew member, sneaked aboard Courageous Monday night and questioned the ability of the boat to pass the stiff construction rules which govern the International 12-metre class to which both boats belong.

The discussion is over the positioning of two main winch drums, which control the jibs.

The 12-metre rules say that the boat's deck must be flat except for certain "small" depressions, but the Courageous winch drums are set into a depressed area approximately four feet by four feet.

If the International Yachts Racing Union rules the drums must be set in a deck. Courageous will have to undergo extensive revisions before the races begin Tuesday.

Were the Americans to sail illegal craft, the Australians would protest and likely would win, giving the challengers the Cup for the first time since the series began in 1851.

The Australians were discovered on the American defender by Joe Bertrant, co-manager of the Courageous syndicate. Bertrant asked them to leave three times before Cuneo and his crew member conceded.

Officials discussed but did not resolve the issue Wednesday. It was not known when their decision would be announced.

One official, A. E. Tony Watts, noted there could be considerable discomfort if the situation because the rule's wording is ungeneric.

"The wording of the rule says 'small'," Watts said. "The IYRU has never defined small. That's our problem."

Paula's Peanut Sets Track Record

OWEN SOUND (CP) — A three-year-old pacer that was bottle-fed by his nine-year-old owner established a track record of 2:06 1-5 Wednesday night at owen Sound Raceway.

Paula's Peanut, owned by Paula Wellwood, daughter of harness racing driver-owner Bill Wellwood of Mississauga, Ont., won the $3,-300 Ontario Sires Stakes second division, raising the horse's earnings this year to $25,252.

Chicopee Gene was second and the odds-on favorite Terry Parker was third.

Paula's Peanut was such a small yearling that Wellwood gave it to his daughter who bottle-fed the horse until it was old enough to get on by itself.

The previous mile record was 2:07 1-5 set last July by Darby's Gent.

Winner of the second division was Ky Roscie, owned by Roger Ile of Cobourg, Ont. Ryo Hanbo covered the mile in 2:08 3-5.

Ti-Cats Trade Gantt

HAMILTON (CP) — Hamilton Tiger-Cats have traded offensive guard Jerome Gantt to Saskatchewan Roughriders for future considerations.

Gantt said he leaves today for Regina where he expects to be employed as a defensive end for the Canadian Football League club.

Gantt, 25, was in his third season with the Ticats and was a close friend of quarterback Chuck Ealey who was traded Monday to Winnipeg Blue Bombers and of lineman Bruce Smith who was traded in July to Edmonton Eskimos.

Gantt, Ealey and Smith were all involved in a dispute with Ticat management when they insisted on additional pay for two extra games added to the Eastern Conference schedule this year.

Mahovlich Feels 74's Team Canada Better Shooters Than 72's

KINGSTON (CP) — The big shooters on Team Canada '74 took control of a scrimmage Wednesday afternoon, helping steer out a contention by Frank Mahovlich that this year's club was not as strong on the wings than was Team Canada '72.

"We've got better shooters," Mahovlich said in an interview.

"Team Canada '72 didn't have Bobby Hull or Gordie Howe, just to name two.

"I like Hull. I have a protective Mahovlich.

"Beset by injuries, Mahovlich was excused from part of the 1972 series. He has a cozy relationship during training camp host, despite a her fever attack that leaves him gasping.

"I expect Frank to have a good year," said Hovik.

"There is a different attitude here than in 1972."

Besides Hull, Howe and a relaxed Mahovlich, Team Canada '74 also has Paul Henderson, the man who scored the winning goal in each of Canada's three victories in Russia.

Hull freely admits he has fought to prove, He makes no secret he felt the National Hockey League treated him badly in 1972 when he was not permitted to join Team Canada.

Also flying in Johnny McKenzie, although he didn't score a goal in a 7-7 deadlock between the Reds and the Blues in the Wednesday scrimmage, watched by about 3,500 fans.

Hull and Gordie Howe scored one goal each for the Reds. Mark Howe scored a pair. The two Howes were playing with Andre Lacroix, the former Chicago Black Hawk centre who was the most productive player in scrimmage for the second day in a row.

Teamed with McKenzie and Hull the previous day, Lacroix helped set up five goals.

"I wish he had a twin brother," Harris told a news conference. "It would solve a lot of problems."

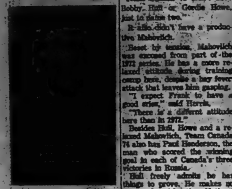
Other marksmen for the Reds were J. C. Tremblay, Rejean Houle and Rick Ley.

Alternates—designated to practice but not to play in the series against Russia which begins Sept. 17 at Quebec City—were outstanding for the Blues.

Wayne Dillon, a young Toronto Toro, worked with Ron Chipperfield and Dennis Sobchuk and scored two goals. So did Chipperfield. Gavin Kirk scored once.

Among the Blues designated to meet Russia, only Marty Howe and Ralph Backstrom scored: Marty notched the tying goal late in the scrimmage, which errors were glaring and the attitude was testy.

"Such a game is to be expected," said Hayle, one of the outstanding players on the ice despite a nagging groin injury.



"Everybody relaxed a little bit, but we will be fine when it is time. The attitude is wonderful. Everybody is smiling everybody, cles for help—and everybody is willing to give it."

Houle was teamed with Marc Tardif and Serge Bernier in another outstanding performance by the line.

"Maybe it is because I played with Tardif before," said Houle of his long-time friend. "Sometimes it gives you a bit of an edge to play with somebody who understands your game, who knows your moves."

Bruce MacGregor missed the scrimmage because of a hyperextension of his elbow. He showed earlier in camp, however, that he's already set to go. Teamed with Paul Henderson and Backstrom, he contributed three goals in the first two scrimmages.

Millions More Eggs Are Rotten

Nancy Bledsoe

OTTAWA (CP) — Already reeling under heavy public, government and industry criticism, the Canadian Egg Marketing Agency (CEMA) took another solid blow Thursday.

An agency official confirmed that at least three million more surplus eggs held by the agency had been found to be unsuitable for use.

Late last month CEMA acknowledged that nine million eggs in Quebec warehouses had become contaminated and had been destroyed.

The agency, middle-man between farmers and egg processors, buys marketable eggs that farmers have offered for table use but that have not been purchased.

The eggs it buys, CEMA officials say, are to be processed or stored for future sales, but it has been buying more eggs than it can sell to the extent that normal warehouse facilities have been exhausted. The eggs found to be rotten had been stored in facilities without temperature and humidity control.

James Fisher, a spokesman for CEMA, acknowledged Thursday in an interview that an estimated three million Ontario eggs had been found bad in a regrading process.

He said he had no knowledge of published reports that two million "additional" eggs had been discovered contaminated after purchase by freezing and drying processors in Ontario.

The original revelation that nine millions eggs had rotted in Quebec warehouses came Aug. 27 during off a strong protest by the public and a freewheeling debate between federal Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan and Beryl Plumptre, chairman of the food prices review board, with Consumer Affairs Minister Andre Ouellet making a late entry into the fists.

Mrs. Plumptre charged that the egg agency was poorly administered and was responsible for high consumer egg prices while Mr. Whelan acknowledged some administrative problems within the agency but denied the need to stabilize the price paid farmers for their eggs.

Mr. Ouellet sided with Mrs. Plumptre and urged his fellow minister to make the marketing agency more efficient.

Mr. Whelan said "a complete review", of CEMA operations was underway and provincial supply programs were being overhauled.

Under the provincial supply system, farmers are allotted egg production quotas intended to keep a balance between supply and demand. But, with a strong price offered by CEMA, farmers have been exceeding their quotas with CEMA buying the eggs even though there was slight demand for them.

Thursday, Mr. Whelan announced a $1.3 million purchase of 40 million surplus eggs for the World Food Plan, at the same time reiterated his defence against charges last week by Mrs. Plumptre that the government was bailing the egg industry out, with 10 million taxpayer dollars.

He said the $1.3 million came from normal World Food Plan funds, but "only after it was determined that the WFPP had a use for the product."

Mr. Whelan also said Thursday that it was a misconception to think that egg prices were too high for consumers. He said egg prices had dropped six per cent since January. He did not mention the 37 per cent jump in egg prices between January, 1973 and January, 1974.

Meanwhile, the brawling between federal officials involved in the food industry spread Thursday to the provinces with accusations that the rules at CEMA were being violated.

In British Columbia, the executive secretary of the provincial egg marketing agency said inquiries are being made into the sale of Manitoba eggs on B.C. market at prices 12 cents a dozen below B.C. prices.

Eric Morgan said his agency has asked CEMA for assurances that the eggs coming in from Manitoba are not in excess of the quota set for Manitoba by CEMA.

In Quebec, an official of the Agricultural Producers Union blamed Ontario egg producers for undercutting prices set by the Canadian Egg Marketing Agency and said that was the reason nine million eggs rotted in warehouses in Quebec last week.

Jack Kironac said that in 1974 Ontario didn't respect its quotas level and add eggs 17 cents under the 60-cent level.

"Because of federal-provincial agreement, Quebec has a limited quota to produce, which is 53 per cent of the provincial needs. It happens that other provinces don't respect this quota and get rid of their surplus illegally elsewhere and in Quebec particularly."

They Mean Business

These three brothers have started the first all-Indian Industry on Tyendinaga reserve. They mean the business to supply jobs to Quinte Mohawks. Already 25 are taking on-the-job training in production of shoe parts — like this woman being observed by company principals (from left) Dan, Arnold and Carl Brant. The three look to future expansion. For details, see first page, second section.

End Tight Money, Ford Is Advised

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford has launched his public search for a way out of the economic ills of the United States and has received assurances from the Democratic Congress that it will stay in session as long as he has proposals for it to consider.

The word from Capitol Hill came as Ford met Thursday with about 20 economists who offered a wide range of suggestions, including an apparent majority view that the money supply should be expanded to bring interest rates down.

There was less agreement on how to modernize the wage-price law.

Ford made no commitments on he suggestion that the Federal Reserve Board be urged to ease its tight-money policy or on any other specifics.

These included suggestions from individual economists for reversal of mandatory wage-price controls, for avoiding even the suggestion of such controls, and for intermediate steps such as giving the new Council on Wage Price Stability authority to roll back powers or concentrating on big industries and big unions whose policies were relatively immune from competition.

But Ford dropped a hint that he will avoid extreme measures.

But the sources said July is a likely date for full independence, and the provisional government will probably be installed Sept. 25.

The date marks the 10th anniversary of Frelilco's armed struggle for independence.

Portugal and Mozambique Reach Independence Accord

LUSAKA (Reuter) — Portugal and the Mozambique Liberation Front (Frelimo) are expected to sign a document today formally granting the territory independence after a bloody 10-year guerrilla war and 468 years of Portuguese domination.

The signing will climax three months of tough bargaining between Portuguese Foreign Minister Mario Soares and Frelimo chief Samora Machel.

Thursday night, Soares described the opening 24 hours of talks as having gone "very well."

His cheerful comment reflected the cordial atmosphere surrounding this second round of talks. The first ended in Canada Offers Greeks Refuge

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government will speed up the flow of Greek Cypriots who want to join friends and relatives in Canada, Immigration Minister Robert Andras said Thursday.

Mr. Andras said an immigration officer will leave for Cyprus soon to accept immigration applications which are normally processed through Canadian consular offices in Tel Aviv or Athens.

Cypriots displaced by the Greek-Turkish war on the Mediterranean Island may also receive special medical examinations by immigration department doctors or Canadian military doctors stationed on Cyprus with the United Nations peacekeeping force, he said.

Riggs Bets With Knievel

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Bobby Riggs, equipped with a newly acquired driver's license, left Las Vegas Thursday for Twin Falls, Idaho.

Riggs, 57, made a $25,000 bet with Evel Knievel that he could ride a 175-cc motorcycle 646 miles to Twin Falls by the time Knievel attempts his jump Sunday across the Snake River Canyon in a steam-powered Sky-Cycle.

Mileage Tax Is Advocated

TORONTO (CP) — A University of Toronto professor says that the only way to cut down traffic volume in cities is a direct charge for drivers using the roads, not promotion of public transportation.

Donald Dewees, associate professor of political economy, has just done a study for the federal government and concludes that providing public transit is the wrong way to reduce automobile congestion.

He said a charge of five or 10 cents a mile for the road a driver uses, the air he dirties and the noise he imposes on the community is the only way to cut automobile traffic.

He said a mileage tax would be more effective than a gasoline tax which would just encourage drivers to switch to economy vehicles.

Phone Rate Increases Approved

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government has upheld the series of rate increases granted to Bell Canada by the Canadian Transport Commission.

Communications Minister Gerard Pelletier said today the rate increases granted by the commission about three weeks ago "would not appear unreasonable" under inflationary conditions in the country.

However, the government rejected a Bell proposal for a rate-adjustment formula which would have allowed some future increases in company rates without the need for a hearing before the commission.

"It is essential that the views of all interested parties be heard" before any rate increases are granted, Mr. Pelletier said in a prepared statement.

The decision, made by cabinet Thursday, means that Bell can go ahead with a series of rate increases for its 4.3 million subscribers throughout Ontario and Quebec and in parts of Newfoundland and the Northwest Territories.

Guns Blaze Across Truce Line

NICOSIA (AP) — Machine-guns and mortars blazed across the ceasefire line in Nicosia Thursday night, but there was no indication the shooting would block Greek-and Turkish-Cypriot talks scheduled for today.

The Greek-Cypriot government reported an "intense exchange of fire" for an hour and a half at three points along the so-called Green Line dividing the Greek and Turkish-Cypriot sectors of the capital.

It was the heaviest firing in Nicosia since the ceasefire Aug. 15. The government said the shooting stopped after United Nations peace forces arranged a truce.

Thousands of Greek-Cypriots fled from the city in panic, filling the roads to the south with cars and tractors piled high with luggage.

Earlier Thursday, Vice-President Rauf Denktash, the leader of the Turkish-Cypriots, announced that he and President Glafcos Clerides, head of the Greek-Cypriots, would meet today to discuss ways to alleviate the plight of the estimated 224,000 refugees driven from their homes by the fighting on the island.

The Turks, meanwhile, expanded their territory. Denktash reported that Turkish forces seized control of the northwest coast between Lefka and Kokkina, a Turkish enclave 13 miles to the west. The push gave the Turks control of the entire coast of Morphou Bay, from which the island's copper is exported.

Labor Will Seek 'Unity' Mandate

LONDON (Reuter) — Prime Minister Wilson effectively set Britain's next general election campaign in motion when he pledged Friday that election day will be within a few weeks.

Addressing the annual conference of the Trades Union Congress (TUC) in the town of Brighton, Wilson did not explicitly but announce the election date—widely predicted to be Oct. 3 or 10.

The prime minister is expected to announce the date after paying a scheduled weekend visit to the Queen at the Balmoral Castle in Scotland. Political observers believe he will ask the Queen to dissolve Parliament so the official election campaign can get under way.

Wilson received a standing ovation at Friday's conference after his appeal for national unity under a Labor government to overcome Britain's economic woes.

His 45-minute speech—including such election-flavored phrases as "progress in partnership"—warned that difficult years lay ahead for Britain but he said that the gloom should not be exaggerated.

The prime minister said his government wants to see a prosperous industry and this means a strong and confident stock market. He promised that the balance-of-payments deficit on current trade will be eliminated without import restrictions or deflation.

On securing wage restraint, Wilson said the only credible method is the so-called social contract—the voluntary wage restraint issue which had threatened to split the TUC delegates before it appeared close to agreement in the interests of unity.

Rescue Stressed At Fire Seminar

TRENTON — With the increase in rescue work by firefighters, the day is coming when fire departments will have their own paramedic teams, Norman Aitken, an Ontario Fire Marshall's office advisor said here Thursday.

The fire services advisor spoke during a rescue work seminar at Trenton's first regional fire training school here since 1957. The town fire department is sponsor for the five - day course which has drawn 46 men from small departments within a 35-mile radius of Trenton.

Mr. Aitken said: "I can see in the bigger cities we will have paramedic firefighters ... giving needles, taking blood pressure ... with direct contact with doctors."

His prediction came after increasing the increasing frequency and importance of rescue work in the line of a firefighter's duties.

Until the day of the paramedics arrives, however, the fighters will remain as the first ones to offer simple first aid to fire victims.

To that end, Mr. Aitken outlined Thursday's first aid procedures in situations firemen may find themselves in during the course of rescue work.

Downed aircraft represent a particular problem, he said.

"You can't lift a modern fuselage with an axe. The metal is so strong, it also could bounce back and part your hair."

Only marked areas on the aircraft's fuselage can be breached without fear of striking electrical wiring or oxygen lines, thereby causing a fire, Entry through a plane's door remains the best method, he said.

The majority of deaths in fires occur during the sleeping hours, from midnight to 6 a.m., Mr. Aitken said. Hotels and private homes present different problems.

"Very few people check into a hotel or motel and check out of it. The emergency fire exits are located," he said.

If fire strikes, panic can set in quickly, making ordinary rescue work by firemen difficult, he said.

"Rescue work is a private realization of joy" laughed because people may say that everyone is out — feeling that Harry went out the back door," Mr. Aitken said, telling firefighters to check with bystanders for information.

The advisor, one of four from the fire marshall's office here for the course, is completing the five - day instruction and practical demonstration in both fire prevention techniques and firefighting practices.

Men who complete the course which ranges from ladder and pumping work to salvage and actual fire extinguishing, will receive an Ontario Fire College certificate after an oral examination.

Corby Lays Off Employees

CORBYVILLE — About 60 Corby Distilleries employees were with up to 18 years seniority — are being laid off this week.

Ron Mann, personnel manager for the plant which employs about 270 union workers, described the lay off a "normal" situation which occurs every year.

"We have it every year, though we laid off 10 more than usual this year," he said. The lay offs, he said, coincide with a manufacturing shutdown at the plant.

The men were laid off earlier this week but subsequently re-called to fill some orders the company spokesman said. "The men will be laid off again Friday night," he added.

How long they are off the job depends on orders for shipments, said Mr. Mann.

He speculated the layoffs might last until next weekend but said: " It might be longer ... we don't know."

The layoffs only affects "general help" staff, the personnel manager said. This group is made up of unskilled workers, he said.

Inquest Blames Death On Inadequate Brakes

PETTOIT — A coroner's jury has ruled that a Picton public works employee, killed on the job this summer, was operating a machine with faulty brakes.

David Andrew Jarvis died July 8, 1974, when the front end loader he was operating plunged over an embankment in Delhi Park, overturned and crushed him beneath it.

After hearing 18 witnesses and more than two hours of testimony in an inquest here Thursday, jurors returned that in future qualified mechanics should be the only persons permitted to make adjustments to equipment.

They also recommended that such machines be weighed with roll bars and all operators be fully qualified.

A fitness inspection every six months also was suggested.

Ernest Bruton, technical services co-ordinator for Crothers of Toronto, testified he inspected the front-end loader at the accident scene, applied the brakes and found air pressure still in the system.

The machine was then taken to Toronto for a detailed inspection. Although the brakes were operational when tried on a ramp it was discovered one of the right brake pedal would not completely halt the loader. When the left brake pedal was applied, the loader was capable of stopping in a distance of 11 to 13 feet.

A fitness inspection every brakes were not adequate for stopping the machine under normal working conditions.

Mr. Bruton said he has seen this type of control used for the work in progress when the fatal accident occurred. He did not feel it was the most appropriate use for the equipment.

He testified that, if not worked on an incline, the machine could have been used with its brakes as they were as they would not have been applied frequently.

Mr. Bruton said he thought the machine, about a 1966 model, was inspected four times annually, the last inspection being in March, 1974.

He testified the right brake pedal would give a stopping power of about 20 to 25 feet on flat surface, but on an incline or low idle, could not stop it completely.

He said that roll bars are not included on older models of front-end loaders such as the one operated by Mr. Jarvis. Although nearly all new machines are equipped with canopies that can carry the machine's full weight there is no regulation in Ontario making them mandatory.

When asked if the brakes of the loader were inadequate for normal working conditions, Mr. Bruton replied he did not think the machine was capable of an emergency stop.

C. E. Simpson of Hamilton, a supervisor for Crothers and co-ordinator of inspections of the equipment said if there had been a brake problem with the loader in March it would have been noted in a report.

He described the brakes as a progressive warning. Slow and safe deterioration can occur.

Mrs. Pat Jarvis, wife of the deceased public works employee testified that her husband had complained of brake trouble with the machine about three weeks before the fatal accident. She said he mentioned that an inspection probably would be necessary and said he intended to speak to town foreman Carl McCoy-nell.

Carl Scott, father-in-law of the dead man also testified that about three weeks before the accident David Jarvis complained of problems with the brakes of his machine and said that he had told the town foreman.

Mr. Scott said his son-in-law told him he was using the gears to stop the machine. He had operated the loader for more than a year.

Town foreman Carl McConnell testified that no brake problems were reported to him by Mr. Jarvis although his brother had noted difficulty with the machine about a year before. Adjustments were made at that time.

William Dunkley of Napanee, construction safety officer for the ministry of labor, said he made a complete investigation of the loader on the day of the accident although it was later decided it was not a construction accident.

Jurors were foreman William Henley, Walter Demille, Paul Vidito, Ray Cutler and Joseph Bond, all of Picton. They deliberated for about 45 minutes before reaching their verdict.

Veterans Re-unite

This weekend about 120 surviving members of the 21st Canadian Battalion, Eastern Ontario Regiment, will celebrate the 50th anniversary of their mobilization in Kingston in 1914, at the beginning of the First World War.

After training in Canada and England, the unit, a thousand strong, crossed to France and immediately marched to the front lines to remain until the Armistice in November, 1918.

The 21st Battalion has the record of never having failed to reach its battle objective. Its battle honors include St. Eloi, the Somme, 1916, Vimy, Amiens, Cambrai Vimy Passchendaele, Arras and the pursuit to Mons at the end of the war.

Of its original strength of a thousand officers and other ranks, more than 250 died in the fighting and most of those who survived were wounded. The unit, individual officers and men have received hundreds of medals and honors.

Every September since 1919 surviving members of the unit have gathered to renew friendship and reminisce.

This year, they will be joined by members of their families and friends at the Belleville Armouries.

Weekend events centre on Branch 99, Royal Canadian Legion.

A service at the Cenotaph in Memorial Park on Station St., will be conducted at 3 p.m., Saturday followed by a banquet at the Legion at 6 p.m.

Sunday, at 11 a.m., a service will be conducted on the Armoury lawn. Battalion padre Canon K.E. Taylor, a veteran of both world wars, will conduct the service. A band will be in attendance and the public is invited to both the Cenotaph and Armoury services.

Next Commons Sitting Should Be Lively

PCs See Rebirth of Party Hopes in Leadership Battle

BY RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — Before the election Prime Minister Trudeau warned his council of campaign strategists that if the conservatives should win, they could hold power "for a hundred years.

While an exaggeration that surely was, it spoke of Conservative Leader Stanfield's durability.

Once in power, he had the potential of holding it indefinitely as he did when he was peaceful premier of Nova Scotia.

But he did not win, did not even come close, and the Liberals, looking at the other side of the power coin, now felt confidently of remaining in office a minimum of two Parliaments — eight years — or even longer.

Sounds reasonable, too, considering that the Liberals have had more than their fill of internal dissension.

In the last 15 years — and remembering the deceit on their own political faith of the divine right to rule.

Their new and powerful majority, the sixth Liberal triumph in the last eight federal campaigns, has done nothing to shake that belief.

But if they are smart — and nobody ever accused the Liberals of being dumb — they must be having careful second thoughts about the willingness fillers to them of what really went on at the Conservative caucus.

For the Tory council was not the disruptive and damaging deed as has been reported by Liberal-inspired sources, but more an unusually frank airing of divided ranks.

It was a rallying and lacing point, and the perspectives are feeling as good about it, they have even cause being "secret", and calling all that.

They rallied — the right and the left — the supporters and detractors of Robert Stanfield — even the right or moderate-left leadership candidates — on the firm ground that the coming Parliament is the time and the place to win the next election.

They will tell you that they came away from their caucus convinced that the next four years in the Commons are going to be pretty exciting and politically profitable times for them.

They are about to say Parliament — when the government rules with a majority. It functions as a steamroller, flattening things in a dull routine.

But this time the steamroller should be finding it a bit bumpy.

The Opposition parties are posting the prizes of leadership and the potential candidates will be off and running right there on the floor of the Commons.

But only the conservatives count, for they alone have the Opposition potential for power.

And they will have the enormous stimulus of the leadership race to give them momentum going into the election stakes.

So there will be six — or, even more able-and-ambitious Conservatives trying frantically, it functions as a to establish themselves right, working like mad to make their mark.

They can only do it by not thinking — not necessarily calculating — but above all, not heeding the Liberals.

They are convinced the drive for power — by the candidates fighting for the leadership and by the party itself with a fix on the next election — will be catching, firing them all up.

They assume, that after winning six successive elections and holding on to power for what will be 18 years, the Liberals may be getting too fat.

So the Conservatives will be going for the trim image, the soft underbelly of Liberal complacency, the new drive and determination, and, above all, new and seemingly appealing solutions to old problems.

It has to be an exciting Parliament with all these candidates for the Conservative and New Democratic leadership competing for headlines and the public eye — and a new Speaker struggling for control.

"My world, and welcome to it".

Anti-strike Clamor Rising Although Action is Lacking

By DON O'KEARN
Thomson News Service

TORONTO — Probably never before in Canada has there been so much anti-strike feeling as there is at present.

In the first half of this year the amount of time lost in strikes doubled.

There have been transit shutdowns in Toronto and Montreal, grain handling loss on the west coast has been costing the country millions every week, there is the threat of still another postal stand-down.

The consequence is the greatest clamor I have ever seen for government action to legislate to end strikes, at least in essential services.

But will it mean anything?

I have just returned after I week 12 years ago when the province for the first time imposed compulsory arbitration and ordered Hydro employees back to work.

At that time there also was public concern about strikes, and significantly, as the phrase noted, this was very much shared by enlightened management and even labor leadership was starting to show sanity.

And in the light of this looking back to that time it would appear very definitely that we have been falling back in labor relations.

In those particular days sensible management and industry were publicly calling for new approaches to settlement of industrial disputes.

And on the other side, if recollection is right, even David Lewis, the then new but now personal president of the Canadian Federation of Labor, was saying pretty well the same thing.

Today we don't hear these things. The protest is coming from the public and the press, not the parties themselves.

So one can't be optimistic about changes, though there are two hopes.

One is that government, at both senior levels, will be forced into action.

It has been progressively looking worse, the public is blaming it, and this could be perhaps enough to force it to give some leadership.

The second is that though the old guard is still in control in labor, and to some extent in industry, it is aging and there are signs that the groups which will replace it may be broader in outlook, more realistic and more responsible.

To Perform Here

A return of the Quebec-inspired and Charlottetown-based Les Feux Follets in October is good news for Belleville theatregoers.

It is some years now since the company last performed here and a recent Globe and Mail account of their performance in Ottawa is indicative of how their artistic work has evolved in the interim.

The company opened their tour in the capital with two new numbers danced to music by Toronto pop composer Cliff Jones. According to Alan Lund, artistic director, they have been asked to show the arduous role that women played in Canada's early years.

In past performances the company showed their competence with the whole range of Canada's ethnic dance media, as well as paying tribute to pioneer days with choreography to suit that era.

Feux Follets started as an amateur ethnic dance group, and at the peak of its popularity it had more than 40 dancers. Travel and costume expense, however, forced a cut-back to more moderate proportions when the company went professional.

Ironically, while Lund insists on authenticity in the native and colonial eras, he has had to modify some costuming. For instance the North American Plains Indians had garishly-colored finery, but audiences thought them unreal. Lund toned down the colors to more muted, earthy tones and this seems to have won acceptance.

Which goes to show that pragmatism and an eye to public taste go hand in hand on the stage as well as in many another realm of activity.

Hard Winter Could Mean Oil Cuts for Some

By VINCENT EGAN
Business and Consumer Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

The days are getting shorter, and the nights cooler. Soon, the energy crisis may be making headlines again.

If the winter is severe, oil-consuming countries may face a shortage within a matter of months, according to the top man in the worldwide Royal Dutch/Shell group of companies.

Frank S. McFadzean warned a Commonwealth mines and metallurgical congress in Ottawa early this month that some of the major oil-producing governments—members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries—preferred to reduce supply rather than prices.

The result: Still greater insecurity for oil-importing countries, both for volumes and prices of oil.

For the time being, Canada is more or less self-sufficient in crude oil, with Western Canada and the United States roughly balancing Eastern Canada's imports from OPEC.

But Eastern Canada's supplies could be cut back by the cartel—our government has done little to ensure continuity of OPEC shipments—while Energy Minister Donald Macdonald's brave two-paper plan for a pipeline to link Western Canadian crude east of the Ottawa Valley appears to be lagging badly.

But even if the worst came to the worst, Canada's economy might well be able to squeeze through an OPEC slowdown or embargo. The Canadian government demonstrated last winter that it could buy oil at exorbitant prices on an international spot market, and Western Canadian crude from Vancouver to Halifax via the Panama Canal.

What of the longer-term future? Canada's hydrocarbon deposits in the conventional producing areas—chiefly Alberta—have been pretty well picked over, and we must look to the far frontiers and to the tar sands of the Athabasca and Peace River regions.

Results so far in these areas have not been altogether reassuring. Drilling in the Mackenzie Delta of the Canadian Arctic began in 1965, and so far has yielded only 11 gas discoveries, four oil discoveries, and one dual oil and gas discovery—not enough yet to justify construction of a pipeline from the region.

While the tar sands are a much larger and much more accessible source of crude oil, the technology of extraction has yet to be proved satisfactorily. Mr. McFadzean put the capital cost required to develop the tar sands at $10,000 to $12,000 per daily barrel of production—or more than $1-billion per project.

The only conclusion to be drawn from the intransigence of the Middle East producers and from the high cost of developing new domestic sources is that high oil prices are here to stay.

Consumers may find the accompanying price rises in certain areas, when local supplies of petroleum products are temporarily excessive.

But the total picture leaves a continuation of heavy demand, high and possibly rising international prices, and a lamentably slow growth of domestic supplies.

The best hope for relief—and it's a faint one—is that the major oil-consuming countries will act together to exert some moderating influence on the producers' cartel.

In the final analysis, a world recession—already afoot, by scarcity of oil and the resulting huge trade deficits—would be more damaging to the oil-rich exporting countries as well.

Ulster Seat for Enoch Powell?

LONDON (CP) — Northern Ireland may not prove a promising political base from which to launch a leadership bid in Britain but Enoch Powell may consider things differently if conservative Leader Edward Heath in the expected British general election.

The two right-wingers have been at daggers point since 1968 when Powell, as Tory shadow-cabinet, spoke out fiercely against colored immigrants and Heath swept him from the party hierarchy. But Powell kept biting at Heath despite pleas from party leaders and the cops attacks from his maverick may have been part of the reason Heath flopped at the Feb. 28 general election.

Now, Powell, a major political figure in the British Midlands, has accented the Unionist-Nationalist in the Northern Ireland constituency of South Down which, in effect, assures him of a Commons seat and perhaps another chance to attract Heath's leadership.

In former days the Conservatives of British Ulster were always a solid support from Ulster Unionists. But since Heath, as prime minister after the Feb. 28 downfall, sought to end the conflagration with the Irish Catholics, the Ulster Protestants withdrew their support from the party.

With Powell now likely to be the Unionist front, that split between the Unionists and the Conservatives may widen, increasing Heath's difficulties in trying to wrest power from Prime Minister Harold Wilson.

But there is more at stake than the future of Heath and the Conservative party. Powell is an effective speaker, very sold to the Irish problem if he decides to rouse Ulster Protestants to take stronger action against the Irish Republican Army.

Whatever his Ulster tactics, Powell's main goal may still be at the heart of British politics. He would be a slow foe for Heath if the Conservatives win the coming election by a narrow margin and have to seek Unionist support to maintain a minority government in power.

Nevertheless, at 61, Powell faces a rough ride if he still hopes to rise to national prominence from the rather isolated South Down riding.

Mainland Britons tend to look on Northern Ireland with disfavor, no matter which side a particular spokesman is on. The bombings and bloodshed have led to much suffering in Britain. The Ulster extremists have carried their wars to mainland shores and Ulster politicians have not resolved the struggle and to many mainlanders, these politicians are viewed with deep suspicion.

Cyprus Ordeal

While the United Nations forces were in Cyprus in two years has there been a feeling that their presence had helped keep order for a considerable period of time, peace and stability might be maintained.

Now, events have ordered otherwise. The UN has been virtually brushed aside by the Turks while the posture of the Greeks, predictably, has been emotional. Latterly the situation has taken an ugly turn with the Greeks blaming it all on the Americans — a U.S. plot to give the Turks a permanent slice of the island — and now in addition, the evidence of atrocities by both Greeks and Turks. Two ethnic groups occupying the same homeland, but divided by bitter partisan hatreds.

Cyprus itself has largely in ruin, spiritual and material — a pawn of big power politics, a land torn asunder, its people victims of yet another stupid, unnecessary, and barbaric war.

U.S. Recognizes E. Germany

By JOHN D. HARRISON
Foreign Affairs Analyst

About 24 years ago, this columnist phoned the department of external affairs in Ottawa to obtain the names of cabinet ministers of the government of East Germany, or more properly the German Democratic Republic, and those below.

The peremptory reply from an official in the European Division was that officially there was no such country and that Canada did not recognize the Communist regime in East Germany and therefore he could not give me the required information.

This kind of utter nonsense has fortunately ended and I am sure that in Washington where the announcement has come as a surprise, there will be moves to recognize the GDR. The United States of U.S.-inspired rejection of "non-persons" because they were in or serving a Communist government we did not recognize, has been long dead.

But in 1952 my efforts to obtain the names of those in charge of the building of shipbuilding who I hoped to visit and a shipbuilding friend in Ottawa then exceeded ours, were rebuffed because of Canada's policies about the East Germans.

Although we never quite knew the full extent to which the Americans where Communist China was concerned, their diplomatic language here did include the now long-dead phrase Mainland China), we were just as sticky about the GDR.

In fact, the prospect of recognition of the East German Communists looked further off in Washington than it'd ever been in the two decades which former Chancellor Willy Brandt has been in power.

As a result the East Germans are, as they say in German "ostenhalb", acceptable.

Ontario Redistribution Plans Said Gerrymander

SUDBURY (CP) — Electoral redistribution proposals for Ontario were called, by a cynical Thursday night at a meeting of the provincial council of the NDP's Young Socialists.

The council, sitting in preparation for today's opening of the NDP's provincial convention, passed a short, sharp attack on the preliminary report of the province's boundary commission from Al Gillett, a council member from Ottawa-Centre.

He said the commission's chief Rodney Smith will establish constituencies for the next provincial election if they are finally adopted—are weighted in favor of Progressive Conservative-dominated rural ridings and "perpetuate" those gross inequities.

Earlier in the day, the legislature's 18-member NDP group met to work on a submission on electoral changes in the boundary lines drawn up by the before-court commission, headed by Mr. Justice Campbell Grant of the Ontario Supreme Court.

Stephen Renwick, member of the legislature for Toronto Riverdale and chairman of the caucus, later said the commission has refused the party's request that the submission be delivered at a public hearing.

As a result, it would be made public at a Toronto news conference next week after being given to the commission.

Mr. Renwick said the caucus feels that the proposals of the commission do not take into account the way population is shifting to the cities from rural areas.

"We think they are open to the criticism that there is political gerrymandering going on," he said in an interview. "We don't think they have been worked out on the basis of rational demographic principles."

The provincial council's action Thursday night was confined to advising local riding associations how to proceed after the legislature has finally fixed the boundaries.

The commission's deadline for receiving suggested changes is Sept. 13 and the hours it expected to act on its report at the next session.

The fall convention may hear more of the redistribution in the next three days.

Provincial Leader Stephen Lewis said earlier this week it is a priority question for the party since several constituencies now held by the NDP would be adversely affected if the commission's current proposals were ratified.

Alberta Welcomes Ontario Oil Help

EDMONTON (CP) — Bill Dickie, Alberta minister of mines, Thursday reports of the formation of a $100-million Ontario Energy Corp.

He said the proposal reflects a recognition by Ontario that it must prepare now to assure itself of future energy supplies and might mean investment in Alberta gas reserves and the Athabasca oil sands.

Alberta has a standing invitation to other provinces, primarily Ontario and Quebec, to invest in the development of energy reserves.

Formation of the Ontario Energy Corp. must be an indication, Mr. Dickie said, that Ontario wants "to invest on a government - to - government basis rather than on an industry-government level."

Quebec, too, is currently evaluating the best possible approach, he said.

However, Mr. Dickie said that at first glance he is not happy with Ontario's continued insistence that it obtain natural gas at low prices.

Ontario believes it should obtain Alberta gas at prices rates—cost of production plus return on investment, he said.

Alberta, on the other hand, argues that the price of natural gas be related to the price of comparable heating fuels such as No. 2 and No. 6 fuel oils, Mr. Dickie said.

Ontario has to realize that its future natural gas supplies will not be available, if it fails to pay realistic prices today, the minister added.

Economic Education Foundation Is Formed

TORONTO (CP) — A newly-formed national organization says most Canadians have trouble understanding public issues because they do not know enough about economics.

The Canadian Foundation for Economic Education wants to do something about it.

Dr. Freeman Stewart, the group's first president, said Thursday that some of the issues people have difficulty understanding include inflation, unemployment, regional disparities and foreign investment.

He said this lack of understanding can be particularly acute because of poor decisions by individuals.

The foundation has launched a national program to improve public understanding of such issues.

Dr. Stewart, said the program initially will be aimed at the schools with information provided in both official languages.

At a news conference here, he said the foundation will produce educational material and provide programs to make teaching of economics easier.

The Toronto-based group was formed after more than a year of discussion between business, labor and agricultural leaders, economists and educationists.

Developers Balk at Switch

SUDBURY (CP) — The president of the Housing and Development Association of Canada (HUDAC) said Thursday that builders must continue to supply housing for middle-income groups rather than switch exclusively to building for low-income market.

E. W. Assaly told the Sudbury Home Builders Association that HUDAC supports the federal government's desire to cut spiralling housing costs and it assures the fullest possible allocation of mortgage funds to lower-cost housing."

But he said the association has told the government that "only a certain part of the industry can be switched suddenly into the low-income market exclusively.

"Many builders, particularly the smaller ones, cannot be at competitive in this field and they will be forced to diminish their production and in many cases cease operations under these conditions."

Quebec Unions Want Wages Tied to Prices

MONTREAL (CP) — Solidarity was the theme Thursday night as the 175,000-member Confederation of National Trade Unions (CNTU) kicked off a concerted campaign to have wages tied to the cost of living.

Police estimated 1,500 people participated in a 50-minute march through the downtown area before gathering behind city hall to hear speeches by Michel Charland, president of the CNTU's Montreal central council, and other labor leaders.

Leading the march were members of the Montreal Transport Union whose 1,500 garage and maintenance workers have been on strike since Aug. 7 against the Montreal Urban Community Transit Commission. The strike has paralyzed the city's system and curtailed bus service.

Druggists Back Plan

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario Drug Benefit Program, criticized for omitting some combination drugs among the 1,300 prescription drugs it covers, received support Thursday from the Ontario Pharmacies Association.

In a statement, the association said the plan "ensures delivery by pharmacists of necessary medication for many residents whose drug requirements present financial difficulties for them."

The program, which went into effect Sept. 1, offers free drugs to eligible citizens—persons on the province's guaranteed annual income plan and those receiving family benefits.

Volunteer Tutors Plentiful, These Classes Need Students

The Volunteer Bureau's English for new Canadians program is in the happy position of having more teachers than students. The classes held at St. Andrew's Church, are but one of a series of Volunteer Bureau programs restarting after a summer recess.

It's the only one, however, looking for people needing help instead of helpers.

The classes for new Canadians, which begin September 12, teach all levels of English as a second language. There's a nursery provided for young children.

The Volunteer Bureau, agency which brings together volunteers and people and institutions needing help, is looking for a volunteer to run a weekly craft program at a small nursing home. Supplies will be provided for the volunteer who would be willing to teach and supervise simple craft work for 20 elderly persons.

The soup and sandwich program, which provides extra nourishment for elderly persons living alone, is in need of a key volunteer for work and organization. Supplies are provided by the Volunteer Bureau.

A volunteer is also required for the bureau to assist in the social welfare field each Saturday.

Father Slanders Daughter

Dear Doris: My mother said I could go to another town for the weekend, where my brother and my fiance were playing basketball. It was all right with my mother as long as I stayed in a separate hotel room, where the girl friend of another boy was staying.

We found that a game had been planned for Sunday night too, so I phoned home and told my father I would get home late Monday night, which he said was all right. But on Tuesday morning all hell broke loose.

My father denied that he knew I went away and called me down so low that I ended up telling him I lated him for accusing me of being something I'm not — a slut.

My grandmother said he told her things that would make you sick. My father said I took off with a boy for the weekend and only came home when the fun was over. He denied even hearing my grandmother.

My father denies. He tells everyone something different and dirty about me even when he is sober. Every time he talks to me I end up in tears and my nose starts to bleed.

Can't Think Straight.

Dear Can't : It is up to your mother, your bother and your fiance to tell it like it is. Your father is the one who is sick. The alcoholism is an escape — but an escape from what? He's got problems.

If you are doing your best and your conscience is clear, hold your head high and keep your cool. The nose bleeds would suggest just how violently and how heatedly your whole system is reacting to a father's unreasonable ire.

Confidential to Puzzled Mother: Down through the ages mothers have been asking themselves, "What did I do wrong? But it just isn't true that a child's short-comings are a parents' fault. Some do respond to love better than others, does isn't understanding.

Your present husband is right in suggesting you ignore your grown children's thoughtless neglect. It is true that these young people haven't walked in father's shoes. Nurture your present marriage. Chalk up those misunderstandings in the disastrous home life (which by-the first husband of yours.

You have been given a glorious second chance!

CHANCE ENCOUNTERS

Recollection is the only parachute from which we cannot be barred." — Dan McCauley.

Chance encounters are many, varied and interesting.

Such as experienced when finding a book unexpectedly by Dan H. McCauley entitled "Thoughts Through the Years", in which she speaks of September:

Sunshine sparkling on the water,
Summers end and birches white,
Crimson oak leaves, scarlet maples,
Shining in the morning light!

Miss McCauley lived in Belleville, and many may have known her as a friend.

On the same book shelf we happened to find Mr. W.S. Herrington's little volume, entitled, "Some Life Among Loyalists in Upper Canada," in which he discloses a lot of delightful information about schools of that time.

For example, he tells us usually a housewife shared her kitchen with the teacher. One side, of which the teacher held a claim, while on the other side, the housewife would carry on with her baking and so forth.

However it was a short ordeal. The teacher would remain with a family for perhaps two weeks, and his teaching would include board and washing for a few dollars, (about three a week). When the circuit of his subscribers of five or six families was completed, he'd begin all over again.

A contract as late as 1818, entered into between the teacher and a few of the farmers in one of the first townships, discloses the following words:

"That the party of the first part engages to keep a good school according to his ability, and to teach reading, writing and arithmetic.

The teacher's hours were from eight o'clock in the morning until four in the afternoon, with an hour and a half for lunch. He was to teach every other Saturday.

But what joy! It came. A school of her own! Code you may say, but well, at least there was privacy. It was made of logs, not more than fifteen by twenty feet. A door at one end, with a window on each side. Pegs were driven in holes bored in the logs, about two and half feet from the floor. On these planks were laid. Behold! Here was the pupil's desk. This meant that he sat facing the wall as he worked. As for seats — rude benches.

A chance encounter, of a different nature came to mind when I met recently of the passing of Iona Massey, the Hungarian-born singer and Hollywood actress.

In Montreal one morning I sat beside a young pretty girl, in the street-car, who during the course of our spontaneous conversation said, when in New York, she worked as an usherette girl in one of "the grand" hotels.

"I met many interesting people at my job. But one I shall remember with much pleasure, is a woman who entered my elevator one day, unknown. I greatly admired. I couldn't refrain from saying to her, 'But — you are more beautiful than in your movies.' I was so overwhelmed by her loveliness and her presence. What is more I spoke out of turn. An usherette girl doesn't speak like that to hotel guests.

But did she chide me? No — she conjured a corsage of roses she was wearing and gave them to me as she left my elevator, a beautiful smile on her face.

I shall always remember — Iona Massey" she said, "for that's who she was."

Chance encounters often have a way of becoming formative, charming memories, be they with books or people.

We've talked before about the community schedules of the people at Richard Ellis Printing, 19 Fahey St. And here's another example. The young people in the company, which is very close to the heart of the Reid family (Doreen Reid is the fine lady you call for help with your printing needs) have a special service. For this service the Ellis company printed a leaflet called the 10 Commandments for Youth, and the young people handed it out. Your church group can hand it out too. Drop a line or call atmosphere of our homes. Colonial furniture from Scott's, On the Market Square is one of the ways your home can exude warmth . . . and welcome. Start with one piece. Start with many. The kind of furniture is always in stock and always in style. And it will grace any living room, dining room, bedroom or den. Its antique maple finish is marvelous. My hats to a very pleasant lifestyle the colonial way and the Scott way.

You'll Be Sorry

. . . Yes, you will, when you find out that the membership in the Four Seasons all-year-round Pool Party is full and you didn't call in time. This is a marvelous way to stay healthy this fall, winter and spring, for your membership permits you to use the pool, sauna and gym facilities of the Four Seasons starting right now and lasting until next June. That's a lot of staying healthy . . . or getting healthy. And the price is very low indeed — only $105 a couple. Call manager Mike Broadbent today and start becoming and enjoying the new you. The Four Seasons number is 968-3411.

A-hunting You Will Go

Bob Riddell of Bob's Sports and Repair, 42 South Front St., knows you love going hunting and he's already to help you get there, well-equipped and confident that your cabin will stay warm, your shells will fire your jacket and boots will keep you warm and dry. Of course, the exercise is pretty hopeless if you don't get the ducks in the first place. And Bob can even help you there. He has had a great selection of Victor and Italian plastic decoys which are guaranteed to fool Mother Nature herself. And just as you count down the hours, he has clay pidgeons you can use to get ready. The duck hunting season opens September 28. Be ready. Go see Bob.

Relief for Fall Cleaning

It's fall cleaning time again and there's no use saying it isn't. (First thing you know, it'll be Christmas!) And this isn't the usual vacuuming and dusting the floor and curtains sort of you do at fall. There are those walls and ceilings imprinted with the unmistakable signs of summer, such as sticky finger marks and the evidence of the passage of many a fly and mosquito. And don't forget the storm windows. But, thank heaven, there's one ServiceMaster. They can do it all for you. Just call them and you can either work from the backyard with a satisfied smile on your face, or go shopping and come back when it's all over. Just call 887-1677. And let ServiceMaster do it.

The Art of Assessorizing

You've got your new coat from Woodley's, or at least you've picked out your fabric and had the main store is the Coach House, where you can show off your new coat with complimentary accessories, scarves, handbags, jewellery. And you'll also see a selection of lovely sweaters including those by Pringle. You can't put your look together with-out without thinking accessorizing. Woodley's think that way too and they'll help you get you and your particular look together.

A Network of Branches

The head office of the W. Frank Real Estate Ltd., is in Bowmanville, but this company seems to cover the area east of Toronto with a complete real estate service. And it does! There are branch offices in Pickering, Oshawa, Port Hope-Cobourg, Brighton, Picton, Port Perry, Lindsay, Claremont, Sydenham and even Belleville. This Ameliasburgh office of the Golden Horseshoe is the heart of county surrounded by the lakes and rivers and is good to know that if Canada's total buying power is slumping, either if you're buying or selling it. And the number if you're buying or selling it. And the number if you're to know for dealing with this fine realty company locally is 962-6566.

Track-stopping Fashion

I went up to Jean Smith's West Wind Boutique in Actinolite last weekend to see what was new. There are so many new, smart things for fall there, one's mind is boggled when it comes to making decisions as to which you like best. A couple of knockouts which caught my eyes and me in a couple of double-takes were walking past and stopping traffic. A corduroy walker skirt; Hagh and Hawtch sweaters galore; an Italian knit wrap coat in stunning colors from Scotland; an Italian fall wrap coat in stunning colors; a black and silver knitted-twisted long dress for day; a black and silver knitted-twisted long dress for day; a black and silver knitted-twisted long dress for day

Lobleys Limited, recipient of the 1974 National Design Council Chairman's Award for Design Management, reflects effective design through a typical store interior, showing their logo, packaging, contract and clothing styles, and their new corporate design program.

Supermarket Gets Award

OTTAWA — The pioneer of self-service grocery merchandising in Canada, Loblaws Limited received the 1974 National Design Council Chairman's Award of Excellence for Design Management.

The Award citation presented to the company by Sonja Bata, NCD Chairman, during the "Food Day" festivities at the Canadian National Exhibition in Toronto.

The citation of supermarket stores was chosen for its outstanding achievement in design management program which is reflected in retail stores through graphics, printed material, signs, uniforms, trucks, interior store design and brand packaging.

The Loblaws corporate design program and promotion for its 178 retail stores located in Ontario and Western Canada was undertaken in 1972 by Bristol Patti and Watt, a Toronto based firm of planners and consultants in corporate communications.

The success of the design program was so great that in 1973, EP and W was asked to extend the design management program to two of Loblaws smaller American subsidiaries: Loblaws Inc., In Buffalo, N.Y. with 168 stores; the National Tea Co., in Chicago, Ill. and in the American Mid-West with a total of 530 stores.

The Loblaw story goes back to the 19th Century when T.P. Loblaw was born in 1872 on a farm in Simcoe County, Ontario. He was orphaned at 15 and moved to Toronto where he became a grocery clerk.

A few years later he owned a grocery store and in 1919 he and his partner J. Milton Cowan founded Loblaw Groceterias Ltd. In 1924 Mr. Loblaw incorporated an American company in New York State under the name of Loblaw Groceterias Inc. with Buffalo as headquarters. Four years later the American chain expanded to the Chicago Metropolitan market. At the time of his death in 1939 he was head of 107 supermarkets in Ontario and 90 in the USA.

The Council hopes these awards will encourage companies across Canada to expand and elevate their design management standards.

The Chairman's Award for Design Management was inaugurated by the NDC in 1970 and is [illegible] of the Office of Design of the Department of Industry, Trade and Commerce.

Previous recipients were: - 1970 Standard Desk; 1971 Bell Northern Research; 1972 Manitoba Design Institute, Carter Tanzo Ltd. and J.W. Bodner Company Ltd.; 1973 Bowring Brothers Ltd., C and C Yachts Ltd. and Deatwood Industries Ltd.

The next Chairman's Award will be in 1976.

Ann Landers

Legal - Medical Problems Need More Public Attention

Dear Ann Landers: You've done a good job of educating the public in regard to medical problems. And now will you say something about legal problems in connection with medical treatment?

I work in an emergency room. Very often a minor will present himself for treatment, and a parent or legal guardian must be available to give permission to treat the child.

In Illinois, physicians cannot perform even routine tests on a guardian before they can solicit treatment. (This does not apply in a life-or-death situation).

Please, parents, leave written permission with your babysitter if the child is left with one. Or note with the child, if he is too old for a sitter. Include the name of the child's physician, list any allergies, chronic illnesses and the date of the last tetanus shot. Thank you. — Grateful R.N.

Dear R.: The simplest way for parents to make sure their child will receive immediate treatment if he is brought to a hospital emergency room is for him to X that the child or the sitter knows where at least one parent can be reached at all times. The hospital can then contact the parent and receive verbal permission to do whatever needs to be done.

The law in all states requires parental permission before a physician can treat a minor, except in cases where a life is at stake.

Dear Ann Landers: My friend was killed yesterday and now that she's dead and gone, I'm feeling me, is sorry for the way we treated her. Why do people always have to wait until a person gets very sick or dies before they let him know they liked him and thought he was important?

Is it human nature, something that can't be changed? Please answer, Ann. I think this one's for — Wondering Al D.

Dear Wondering: In a way it is human nature, because most of us don't expect our young friends to die. But it can be changed. What is needed is to make thoughtfulness and consideration for others a part of your daily life.

It might help to clip this column and put it in a place where you can read it from time to time. Let it serve as a reminder that life is uncertain and you should never pass up a chance to be kind to a friend or relative, because it might be the last.

Dear Ann Landers: I just read the letter from that conceited disgusting who signed herself, Pestered in Passaic. The writer calls herself "a gourmet cook who strives for perfection." Yet she has the gall to refer to women who ask for her recipes as "brazy dames."

Doesn't she realize that they, too, are striving for perfection and she should feel honored that they want her recipes? Such frustration is still the most sincere form of flattery.

I really must cook is not afraid to give a friend a recipe. She knows that it takes more than "ingredients" to make an extraordinary dish. It's the way you blend, sauce, or stir the batter or whip the cream. It's knowing exactly when to take something off the stove or out of the oven.

I hope Nervous Nellie specifies in her will that when she is cremated to her final resting place, Bible.—Know The Type they will put her recipe box at Dear Knew: So do I—and I hope side instead of the family couldn't agree more.

Native Women Object To News Media Bias

THUNDER BAY (CP) — Sylva Gelber, director of the women's bureau of the Canada department of labor told a conference of the Native Women's Association of Canada Friday that native women have won the moral support of all Canadian women.

She said native women share with other Canadian women the problem of being deprived of a part in Canada's economic, social and cultural life.

Mrs. Gelber, of Ottawa, told about 100 people at the annual meeting that it is good to know that at long last, steps are beginning to be taken don in no part yet to the enfranchisement of the native peoples themselves any longer to tolerate the situation.

Miss Gelber quoted from the report of an anthropologist who found Indian women were more independent in North America than those of the white man.

One piece of evidence cited for the conclusion was the number of women's signatures affixed to deeds of land transfer between the Iriquois and colonial governments.

Sam Sanagan-Mahn of Ottawa, a legal adviser in the federal department of justice, outlined to the conference on the department's plans for a law information program related to native people.

Mr. Sanagan-Mahn said legal offenders are usually fined for five to seven per cent of the federal prison population in the Maritime provinces, and between 50 to 60 per cent in some parts of the packages.

A pilot program for the information scheme has been launched in New Brunswick. The aim is to reduce the native prison population and create a better understanding of the legal system.

Several women at the conference criticized newspapers for discriminating against native people in reporting minor legal offences.

Miss Gelber said the native women should use the media as a tool in publishing incidents of exploitation. Some delegates however, said they hate the media, particularly the press, were racist.

Agnes Dick of Port Alberni, B.C., a community aid worker and member of the B.C. Homemakers' Association, read a statement on behalf of the Disputed band council of Port Alberni:

"We cannot understand the purpose behind the news media drawing attention to people's ethnic origin when a criminal act is reported.

"If such racism continues in the media, we would insist that all non-Indians be referred to by ethnic origin, i.e. Irish, English, Canadians, German, etc.

"We, like anyone, enjoy publicity for our achievements but feel we, unlike those of other backgrounds, have been in the open and honest with our problems."

Mrs. Dick said in the past Indians have been subjected to repetitious investigations by researchers who wanted to know how many Indians were on welfare, how many were unwed mothers, how many were in jail and how many were alcoholics.

The Experts Say:

Big Can Be Beautiful

LONDON (CP) — From the fashion capital that presented the world with Twiggy and a host of other models shaped like bargains comes the comforting news Big Can Be Beautiful.

The sources, not entirely unprejudiced, is Edward Brandon, a director of Evans (Outsizes), a firm that specializes in clothing the generously proportioned female.

Some of the world's most glamorous film stars are fine if fat, he said. Diplomatically, he named no contemporary names but hastened back in a beauty of another era.

"The Venus de Milo was a size 16. Outsize manufacturers used to say she bit off her arms right up to the elbows out of frustration because she couldn't find anything to wear."

The twilight of the Twiggy era was confirmed by Marks and Spencer, Britain's best-known chain-store group, which recently did a survey of women's sizings.

It found the best-selling bra measures 36 inches, two more than five years ago. In the same period, the most popular panty-girdle had expanded two inches to the 37-inch model.

Furthermore, industry spokesmen said, women with a lifeline of 40 inches or more are becoming more fashion-conscious.

Brandon says big girls look at a photo of a fashionable garment and still think, "that's what I would like to wear."

Said Sylvia Lerner, financial director of Philip Kummick (Outsizes).

Mrs. Lerner, who has 42-inch hips, said firms entering for the bigger woman now concentrate on fashion rather than scrambling just to cover the body.

To get the styles right, manufacturers take about 3 per cent of the merchandise in smaller size ranges and scale the items up.

The "outside" world is no keen to attract young ideas that Evans (Outsizes) has just held a competition for art students.

The winning design was a draped Grecian dress which will be retailed for summer wear.

Eastern styles are popular for their floaty, loose-fitting lines and enormous sleeves. Because these styles are so full across the chest they add balance to the hip-heavy woman.

Forget the maxim that dark colors are best for big women. Now in-fit coffee, emerald green, daffodil yellow and orange are all high fashion.

Paul Anka Special Due Sept. 25

Paul Anka, Harry Belafonte and Wayne and Shuster will star in individual CBC-TV specials this month when the network launches its new fall season of programming, Sam Bronfman, director of TV entertainment programs, has announced.

Sole occupier of the three 60-minute music-variety specials — to be aired the evenings of Sept. 25, 27 and 29 — is General Motors of Canada Ltd. GM will be using the commercial air-time to unveil its 1975 line of automobiles.

The Paul Anka program, scheduled Sept. 25 at 8 p.m., is to be taped live before a studio audience in the singer's old hometown of Ottawa. Rehearsals commence at CBC facilities there on Sept. 16 and will be followed next day by a cautious performance to be recorded by producer Paddy Sampson. The special is a co-production of CBC and Yonge Street Productions Inc. of Los Angeles, Calif.

Belafonte Canada is the name of the show slated for Friday, Sept. 27 at 9 p.m., so called because producer Sampson's cameras captured Belafonte and his company of 15 musicians and singers in six Canadian cities this summer during the ensemble's cross-country tour. The famous entertainer occasionally shares the spotlight with two other remarkable talents on the CBC-Harry Belafonte Enterprises Inc. co-production, singer Letta Mbulu of South Africa and a Brazilian — multi-instrumentalist named Sivuca.

The Wayne and Shuster special, Sept. 29 at 8 p.m., is a spoof of all the Viennese operettas ever written. In the musical comedy, titled The Gypsy Drop-Out, Johnny plays an incognito student prince summoned from college to become king of "Schnitzelvania". Frank is the Grand Chancellor of the Imperial Court whose job is to groom the young prince for his new crown. The show's original music is written by the two stars and David-Mayerovich.

Prior to telecast of the three specials, on Sept. 23 at 9 p.m. CBC - TV will air yet another mayor music-variety program: Guterspaces, With Robert Charlebois, an unusual hour-long show starring the Quebec pop-singing dynamo. Written produced and directed by David Acomba, the production marks Charlebois' first English-language TV special.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Taping of the television show 'All in the Family has been halted for about three weeks because Carroll O'Connor refuses to cross a picket line of striking electricians to portray Archie Bunker on strike.

"How could I pass guys on strike and go in and play a guy on strike and be funny?" O'Connor asked.

It was the second time in two months that O'Connor has stayed away from the CBS comedy show.

He missed the first two episodes for the new season, which were taped without him, when he refused to work because of a contract dispute with Tandem Productions, owners of the show. He returned to work July 30 after an agreement was reached.

O'Connor is honoring a strike by Local 45 of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, which involves 17 air conditioning and electrical maintenance men.

NEW YORK (AP) — CBS and the Public Broadcasting Service won top news honors Wednesday night in a nationally televised Emmy awards show for TV news, documentaries, religious and children's programs.

NBC received two Emmys and ABC three, while another Emmy went to The World at War, a British-made syndicated documentary series.

ABC anchorman Harry Reasoner and Public TV's Bill Moyers won the National Academy of Television Arts and Sciences' outstanding television news broadcaster award.

In the religious program category, an Emmy was given for two syndicated programs, Gift of Tears, and This is the Life, directed by Ken Lamkin.

Lakes Accord Hoped Near

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government hopes for a settlement of the Great Lakes shipping strike by the time the Welland canal reopens late next week, Labor Minister John Munro said Thursday.

The government is at least as concerned about the Great Lakes tie-up as it is about the West Coast grain handlers' strike because both dispute are interfering with grain shipments, Mr. Munro told reporters, following the weekly cabinet meeting.

He said there is no reason why both strikes could not be settled quickly but reaffirmed that the government is determined not to call Parliament into emergency session to end the grain handlers' dispute.

The two strikes have halted grain shipments from West coast and Thunder Bay. About 300 Vancouver grain handlers accepted a conciliation report but grain companies, including farmer-owned co-operatives, have rejected it as grossly inadequate.

About 1,000 deck officers and ships' engineers, members of the Canadian Merchant Service Guild and the Canadian Marine Officers' Union went on strike Aug. 1 over contract disputes with the Canadian Lake Carriers' Association. The strike has tied up Great Lakes and St. Lawrence Seaway shipping.

Adding to the shipping problems was the collapse Aug. 25 of a bridge over the Welland canal which was struck by a vessel. The canal will not be open to shipping until about Sept. 12.

Mr. Munro said he hopes the strike will be settled by then. He conferred with both sides in the dispute in Montreal Wednesday night. He said federal conciliators are assisting in the talks "and things are moving along constructively at the moment."

He was responding to criticism that the government was placing too much emphasis on the West Coast dispute at the expense of the seaway strike.

Rate Freeze Likely To End

OTTAWA (CP) — Extension of the rail freight rate freeze into 1975 appears doubtful, government sources indicate.

A transport department spokesman said cautiously Thursday that no decision has yet been made whether to extend the freeze beyond the original expiry date at the end of this year.

But other government sources say they would like to see the limited as quickly as possible as they feel it creates distortions in freight rates.

"There are real difficulties if you don't allow some adjustment eventually in the rates," said one.

"The experience in the past was that the longer you held it off the bigger the adjustment would have to be."

The decision eventually lies with cabinet following talks with provincial governments. Transport Minister Jean Marchand is to meet western provincial colleagues sometime this fall.

A federal-provincial committee has been meeting periodically since the rate freeze was set to review freight rate anomalies.

The freeze was proposed by Mr. Marchand as the western economic opportunities conference in Calgary in July, 1973, and the railways were essentially forced to comply. Western provincial premiers had previously charged that freight rates discriminated against industry in the West.

Mr. Marchand later indicated the freeze did not apply to Canadian National Railways' increased rates to offset losses in the Canadian Pacific Railway's recent strike.

One federal source said that continuing the freeze much longer would create imbalances in the freight rate system. Increased charges could then while other rates were kept down.

Earlier this year the government moved to give 541 million in subsidies to railways in compensation for the rate freeze.

Some observers questioned the usefulness of subsidizing for a long period the rail freight service which operates profitably. Subsidies were undoubtedly needed for unprofitable passenger service.

Many businesses were benefitting needlessly from the tariff limits. Even overseas buyers were being helped by the domestic freeze.

The government intended that freight rates should pay for the cost of producing the service. It was trying to remove inequities in the current method which was generally based on charging what the market would bear.

New Policy Sets up Reserve Of Uranium for Canada's Use

'Big Deals Cooking'

OTTAWA (CP) — A new uranium policy to ensure that domestic markets are protected before export commitments are made was announced Thursday by Energy Minister Donald Macdonald.

He told a news conference the new regulations, in effect immediately, establish a reserve formula to guarantee supplies for domestic use.

The reserve formula requires that enough uranium remains in the country "to enable each nuclear power reactor operating, committed for construction or planned for operation 10 years into the future, to operate at an average annual capacity factor of 80 per cent for 30 years from the start of the period."

Mr. Macdonald said the period for reactors not in operation will be 30 years from their in-service dates.

Domestic utilities using uranium and producers would share the responsibility for ensuring adequate and continuous domestic uranium supplies.

Utilities are required by the new regulations to demonstrate to the Atomic Energy Control Board that they are maintaining connected forward supplies of nuclear fuel; and each mining company will have a reserve margin for domestic supply allocated to it by a uranium resource appraisal group within the energy department.

The manager of a company's uncommitted reserves to meet its reserve margin will be considered by the regulatory agencies before issuing that company an export licence, the minister said.

However, the new regulations will not result in a cutback of current exports.

In addition to the reserve margin, the policy requires that uranium be exported in the most advanced form possible by Canadian processing; and export contract approvals are to be limited to a maximum of 10 years from the date of the contract signed with contingent approval possible for additional five years.

Export contingent approvals will be subject to domestic utilities having a right to recall through the Atomic Energy Control Board on a portion of this material," he said.

Mr. Macdonald said the portion subject to recall in any year will be governed by the ratio of expected domestic demand that year to total Canadian uranium capacity scheduled during the year. Contracts mining companies hold with domestic utilities will be credited as part of the companies' reserve margin and not be subject to recall.

The minister and members of his staff said the new policy is necessary to protect domestic customers at a time when international demand for uranium is soaring, with Canada the only nation capable of meeting a large portion of this demand.

It is estimated that yearly demand in the western world for uranium will increase from about 25,000 tons this year to 80,000 tons in 1980 and to between 200,000 and 225,000 tons in 1990.

With uranium prices at about $13 a pound, Canada produced 4,800 tons of the mineral in 1973 and has a current production capacity estimated at about 6,000 tons annually.

In addition, the government has stockpiled about 7,500 tons in recent years since it began purchasing uranium to keep Canadian mines in operation after the American demand fallen off.

Current domestic consumption is between 400 and 500 tons a year and any short-term shortage resulting from drastic increases in both domestic and export demand could be met by supplementing domestic supplies from the stockpile.

Mr. Macdonald said the government already has the right to terminate uranium exports if it finds Canadian demands cannot be met and also ensures that sales are made at an advantageous price.

He said the policy was unveiled now "because we expect some additional announcements of export contracts soon."

"We wanted to get this in the open fast because we have reason to believe there are some big deals cooking now."

In addition to the reserve margin requirements, exports will be governed by the regulation that uranium cannot be exported at a more favorable price than that at which it is sold in Canada.

Although the regulations contain no specific incentives to increase the production of uranium, Mr. Macdonald said he believes the productive capacity of Canadian mines is on the rise.

Rio Algom Sells to U.S.

TORONTO (CP) — Rio Algom Mines Ltd. of Toronto has concluded an agreement to sell 37 million pounds of uranium oxide to two United States electric utilities for at least $740 million.

Under the terms announced by Rio Algom, Duke Power Co. of Charlotte, N.C., would take 20 million pounds of uranium oxide at a rate of two million pounds a year from 1981 to 1990. The Tennessee Valley Authority of Chattanooga, Tenn., would receive 6,506,514 kilograms of uranium hexafluoride (equivalent to 17 million pounds of uranium oxide) between 1979 and 1990.

The Tennessee Valley Authority's supplies of uranium oxide will be converted to uranium hexafluoride under a separate agreement between the mining company and Eldorado Nuclear, Ltd. of Port Hope, Ont. The conversion of Duke Power's supplies is being negotiated between that company and Eldorado.

The Tennessee Valley Authority is one of the largest electric utilities in North America and is owned by the U.S. government.

Duke is one of the largest investor-owned electric utilities in the U.S. and has one of the country's largest nuclear power expansion programs.

The contracts, subject to federal government approval, are part of a planned expansion of Rio Algom's production capacity at Elliot Lake, the company says.

U.S. Doing Fair Share In Cleanup

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada is satisfied that the United States is doing its fair share to clean up pollution in the Great Lakes, Environment Minister Jeanne Sauve said Thursday.

She said in an interview that recent progress reports on Canada-U.S. water quality programs shows that the cleanup is progressing satisfactorily.

She said she had not yet received a protest from the Ontario government that the U.S. was failing behind on its commitment under a Great Lakes water quality agreement signed in 1972 by Prime Minister Trudeau and then-president Richard Nixon.

William Newman, Ontario environment minister, said Wednesday he would ask Ottawa to carry such a protest to U.S. authorities.

Police Study Indian Ways

TORONTO (CP) — A group of 27 provincial police officers has completed a special two-week course on Indian culture, Commissioner H. H. Graham said Thursday.

He said in a statement that the officers took the course at Lakehead University to prepare them for a policing project planned this winter on 12 Indian reserves in northwestern Ontario, including several accessible only by air.

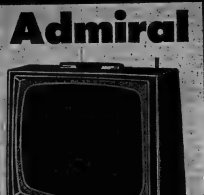
Cabins are to be built to allow the police to stay on the reserves full-time.

Briefs Ask Petroleum Exports Be Processed

OTTAWA (CP) — More processed petroleum products should be exported instead of raw supplies of natural gas, the National Energy Board was told Thursday.

Briefs filed by the Committee for an Independent Canada, the Saskatchewan government and DuPont of Canada Ltd. urged the board to end the practice of allowing huge exports of natural gas to the United States.

The committee said that export of natural gas is, in effect, an export of jobs since the gas is processed into plastics and other petroleum products outside the country. There was no justification for this and existing export licences should be eliminated during the next 25 years.



It said the country will face increasingly tough competition from foreign manufacturers which have the advantage of a large, protected home market. But Canada has one potential advantage — economic development of more secondary industries like power exports.

"If we squander our energy resources by exports, we will destroy that opportunity," the brief said.

Many submissions are being filed in preparation for hearings sometime this fall on the supply and demand for natural gas between now and 1985.

Silver Supply Dries Up

WASHINGTON (CP) — Customs officials say smugglers engaged in a multi-million-dollar racket may be running short of their lucrative product: Canadian coins with a high silver content.

The coins, minted prior to 1968 when Canada lowered the silver content, are worth up to three times their face value at smelters in the U.S.

"This kind of operation is slowing down," says a spokesman for the U.S. Customs Service, a division of the treasury department.

"It has been done to the point where there can't be many of the older coins left."

Commissioner Vernon Acree, head of the service, says U.S. customs officers made more than 20 major seizures of Canadian silver coins, and more than 24 arrests, last year.

"In one case, $25,000 worth of Canadian silver coins was discovered in a car crossing the border at Champlain, N.Y.," Acree said.

The occupants were charged with smuggling and currency violations.

Leonard Chagnon, agent-in-charge at Overton Corners, N.Y., said in a telephone interview that an estimated $1 million in Canadian coins—at face value—was smuggled through the 135 miles of border under his jurisdiction last year.

"Most of the smugglers have been Canadians," he said.

In the largest recent case, Chagnon said, 25 bags of coins—with a value of about $60,000 when delivered at the smelter—were found in the car of a Canadian salesman.

"We know that $250,000 came in in 1968-69 from one Canadian source alone," the agent said. "The boss of the operation was a hoodlum who was killed by a bomb in his car before we could take action."

Beef Coming

WASHINGTON (AP) — Export of United States cattle and beef to Canada, banned since last April because of possible chemical contamination, can resume on Sept. 9, the U.S. agriculture department said Thursday.

Car Sales Up

TORONTO (CP) — Sales of cars and trucks by Canadian manufacturers continued at record levels in August.

The manufacturers, General Motors of Canada Ltd., Ford Motor Co. of Canada Ltd., Chrysler Canada Ltd. and American Motors (Canada) Ltd., reported Thursday August sales unmatched by any previous August in their history. All have had record sales so far in the 1974-75 model year.

Outlook Good

WINNIPEG (CP) — The president of Chrysler Canada Ltd. predicted Thursday that Canada's automobile market will continue to be buoyant in 1975.

Ronald W. Tolghan told a news conference at the national unveiling of the company's 1975 line of cars and trucks that he anticipates personal disposal income of Canadians will increase at a record rate next year.

Gum Inflated

TORONTO (CP) — Inflation has hit the bubble-gum set where it hurts most—in the chomping department. Frito-Lay Ltd. of Toronto, which manufactures Double Bubble brand gum, announced Thursday it will soon be doubling the price of its bubble gum half-a-dozen cents from one cent.

Plans Visit

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau will make his first official visit to France Oct. 21-25, his office announced Thursday.

Won't Pay

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Law Enforcement Assistance Administration has refused to finance a Baltimore, Md., program to pay city residents for relinquishing their guns voluntarily, saying the project would only encourage the manufacture and sale of guns instead of discouraging gun possession. Baltimore was seeking $645,500 in federal funds for the project which would pay a $50 bounty for any operable gun surrendered to the police department.

Old Folks in Tears As Home Help Strikes

HEARST, Ont. (CP) — Mayor Rene Fontaine says that elderly patients stood crying in the doorway of the Hearst Nursing Home on Wednesday morning asking to be fed after about 20 registered nursing assistants and aides walked off the job.

"Old people were standing in the door of the home crying and weeping and saying: 'Feed me, please feed me'," he said Thursday.

The workers, members of a newly-accredited local of the Canadian Union of Public Employees (CUPE), walked out Wednesday, when they learned that a contract meeting scheduled for that day had been post-

Peterborough Teachers Reject College Offer

PETERBOROUGH, Ont. (CP) — Faculty members at Sir Sandford Fleming College voted unanimously Thursday to reject the latest contract offer from the Council of Regents.

An official of the Civil Service Association of Ontario, organized by members at the meeting, said the vote was held to test the mood of instructors prior to a province-wide referendum, beginning today, on whether to accept the offer.

posed. The 41 patients were left with two registered nurses.

"The strikers hoped that, by keeping the aged alone and unattended, their demands would be met," Mayor Fontaine said. "It is appalling and disgusting."

All the old people were later moved to hospitals, nursing homes or private residences.

Orval Turcotte, CUPE north-ern director, told the workers Wednesday to return to work because the strike is unauthorized and illegal.

The nursing home owner and administrator were both out of town at the time of the walkout.

The workers now earn $2.85 an hour and want a $1.80-an-hour increase over two years.

Low Rental Rules Broken

KITCHENER (CP) — The Record says Waterloo-region students and welfare families are being denied cheap housing because developers who borrowed money from the federal government to build low-cost apartments have increased rents or ignored rules that they house only poor people.

The newspaper says that in a survey it found that three of five apartment buildings constructed under the federal low-rent housing plan in Kitchener and Cambridge rent subsidized apartments for $173 a month. Similar apartments can be rented on the open market here for $150 from owners who do not enjoy preferred government loans, it says.

TORONTO (CP) — Thomson Newspapers Inc. has purchased the Key West (Fla.) Citizen for an undisclosed amount from the Scripps-Howard Newspaper Corp. of Savannah, Ga., St. Clair McCabe, a Thomson, executive vice-president, said here Thursday.

Boy Killed On Bike

A nine-year-old Corbyville boy was killed Thursday when he was hit by a car while riding his bicycle.

Allan Merritt of RR 1, in Corbyville, was pronounced dead on arrival at Belleville General Hospital.

The accident occurred in the lane way returning from Seymour's Confectionary Store on Highway 37 after picking up a newspaper.

Provincial Police said the accident occurred about 7 p.m. on Highway 37 north of Roseneath Corners. The driver of the vehicle was Garnet Smith, 47, of RR2, Marlbank.

The boy is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ron Merritt.

Study Urges Controls On Rural Farm Sales

By COLIN BRUCE
Staff Reporter

A planner's recommendation to freeze prime agricultural land against any other use met guaranteed opposition Thursday from farmers of Sidney and Thurlow Townships said at a Quinte Planning Board meeting in Belleville.

In a 30-page report, planning board staff recommended that — use bylaws be passed to stop the sale of agricultural property for any purpose other than farming be incorporated into the townships' official plans. The report was compiled from interviews with the 150 farmers in the two townships.

Thurlow's Reeve Horace Casey told The Intelligencer following the meeting: "I honestly think the farmer has every right to handle his land the way he pleases."

The report was received by the planning board and referred to the townships for their inspection.

"I don't think the people will go for it," said Reeve Casey.

Belleville Alderman Ben Corke questioned whether it is within the power of the board to legislate in the proposed fashion.

"How can we say this," the alderman asked in connection with the land use recommendation.

He summarized the plight o the farmer faced with economic hardships and inadequate return on capital outlay and added: "I can visualize some farmers saying you put in the money and you run the bloody thing."

Bert Kenny, Quinte planning director told the board, "there is a responsibility of this board to make some comment on the preservation of prime farm land."

He told reporters following the meeting "land freeze or agricultural property would tend to lessen the speculation on land prices and ease the strain on the farmer who wants to expand his operation."

Official Voices Concern Over Number of Parks

Belleville Alderman Ben Corke told the Quinte Planning Board Thursday, "we have a shortage of parks and recreation".

Mr. Corke made the remark during a rebuttal to planner's urgings for more green space.

Commenting on the housing land shortages and the cost of maintaining parks, the alderman said: "We're going overboard on parks and I'm gravely concerned about it."

"I don't know whether this country can afford parks," he said.

His comments were raised when planners unveiled a land-use study for rural areas which suggested the need for more recreational and park space in township areas.

"We've got to be careful about how much park we get," he said. "Are we going to be able to afford the cost of cutting the grass?"

Asked whether anything could be done to reduce park allotments, the alderman said "I don't know if it is the province that's pushing parks."

"Planners are always talking out of books like who wrote the books" he said.

Opposition Coming On Farm Policy

Sidney Reeve Gord Wikman (sealed) and Thurlow Reeve Horace Casey warned the Quinte Planning Board there will be strong opposition to the recommendation of a farm land use study completed Thursday night. The study recommends prime farm land in the townships be preserved as farm land and freeze it from any other use. Mayor Robin Jeffrey voiced support to the study saying urban dwellers have faced land use restrictions for years.

Finnish Student Begins Year Of Study in City School

A 16-year-old Finnish girl is the latest student to study in Belleville under the Rotary International exchange plan.

Taina Boman of Salmi, Finland, arrived two weeks ago to spend the school year studying at BCI. She now is living with Mr. and Mrs. D.C. Stirling and tentative plans call for her to spend succeeding months with Rotarians Mr. and Mrs. Steward Cooke of RR 4 Stirling, Mr. and Mrs. George Thompson and Mr. and Mrs. Rob Graham.

Taina, who has travelled extensively in Europe and professed fairly English during a three-week trip to Britain last year, chose to come to Canada "because everyone goes to the United States and I wanted to go somewhere different."

Her chief purpose in joining the exchange is to improve her English. Like others in Finland, she began studying English in school when she was nine years old. Swedish is also a compulsory subject in Finland, because Swedish is Finland's second language "like French in Canada". says Taina. German is also begun at an early age in Finnish schools.

Taina's father is a judge in Finland, a city of 24,000 residents about 300 miles north of Helsinki.

Taina destroyed a few stereotype about Finland. Her country doesn't have the extremes of temperatures of Canada, being cooler in summer and slightly milder in winter. The stores are bigger and not all Finns spend their lives on skis Taina said she isn't fond of the sport and prefers skating.

School in Finland begins at 8 a.m. and the students, who have started the day with a meal of tea and bread, go home about 11 a.m. for a breakfast of eggs and porridge. They return about half an hour later and leave for the day at 2 or 3 p.m.

Taina met a district family this summer before she left Finland. Richard Madl, a Campbellford school teacher was visiting Finland, his homeland, read about the projected exchange and called on the Boman family. She expects to meet one or two other Finnish people, now living in Belleville, in the near future.

Taina, like most other exchange students coming here, has one "must" on her list. Before she returns next springs, she wants to see Niagara Falls.

Mohawk Industry Begins Production Despite Fears by Reserve Residents

TYENDINAGA — The first major all-Indian industry on the Quinte Mohawk reserve will be in full production within three weeks

Tyendinaga Mohawk Ltd. opened its doors Monday.

The 25 women — all from this reserve — now are in training as machinists. By Sept. 23, the machines will be turning out the real thing — shoe uppers for sale to Bata Footwear, says Carl Brant.

Mr. Brant is president of Tyendinaga Mohawk Ltd. which brought controversy to the reserve.

Mohawk opponents of the venture say the company — in its incorporated — is outdoors procedural and municipal laws to the reserve subject only to federal law.

Mr. Brant and the company's two other principles — his brothers, Dan, vice-president, and Arnold, secretary-treasurer — refuse to join the dispute.

The main concern is to provide jobs on the reserve, says Carl Brant, who is also a reserve councillor.

"We're interested in getting our own people a better standard of living right here on the reserve — where they don't have to travel long distances to work," he says.

The 25 women, now under training by Bata instructors, are paid $2.30 an hour.

Plans call for growth for which immediate profits will be designated. In about two years, Tyendinaga Mohawk Ltd. hopes to be producing complete shoes for delivery to Bata warehouses at Batawa, says Mr. Brant.

The operation — in converted hangar space on the former Mohawk airfield — is a breakthrough for the Quinte Mohawks. It is the first full-scale work project owned by Indians on the reserve.

The company received 49 per cent of its financing through a federal industrial development grant. The remaining 49 per cent was loaned by a loan. The company has leased the hangar space from the reserve council for five years.

The three brothers decided to form the corporation after it was rejected as a council-owned enterprise by a referendum.

Tyendinaga Mohawk Ltd. may not be the only operation on the old airfield in future, indicates Mr. Brant.

Already, he told, there's a small industry which leases space to produce laminates. Paper and chemical companies also rent storage space.

But, says Mr. Brant, the reserve council has been approached by other industries viewing the airport buildings as possible operation sites.

College Orders Study For Cultural Centre

The next six months will decide the immediate future of a community arts centre for the Quinte district.

Prospects for such a project — long a hopeful dream of community cultural groups — now rests with a move made Thursday night by the Loyalist College board of governors.

The board authorized production of a study by consultants of specialists in community cultural projects.

It will be the task of Dinnu and Marani Associates of Toronto, to figure if such a facility is feasible.

To that end, as much public response as possible — from all involved individuals and groups in the Quinte district — is basic, Governors were told G. D. Walmsley, the board's building and finance committee chairman.

Loyalist has had an interest in surveying the local cultural ground for such a centre. The finance committee — with the support of the Quinte Arts Council — began pursuing the possibility of such a centre some time ago.

The first tangible response came early last month when the ministry of universities and colleges made a $10,000 grant to "fund a feasibility study."

Mr. Walmsley proposed the study be in two phases: (1) The consultants will make a preliminary investigation, reporting by Dec. 20 if an arts centre is a valid project. If so, (2) the survey will begin in detail with a final report ready by March 15, 1975.

Contract Talks Begin

Negotiations between ambulance attendants and LaSalle and City Ambulance Service management, now are underway, spokesmen for both companies said Thursday.

City Ambulance, with a 25-man force, began talks Thursday and will be joined at the negotiation table today by the eight employees of LaSalle.

A spokesman for City Ambulance detailed comment on the first day's talks, saying, "We got to the locomotive and the bit and saw the proposed contract for the first time."

The new proposal was drafted by the Civil Servants Association of Ontario (CSAO) and provides the basic contract framework for both company shops.

Bob Young said in addition to the CSAO contract, his LaSalle local would also be "ironing out some local issues".

OSD Renamed After Provincial Premier

The Ontario School for the Deaf has been renamed.

Known as OSD for 89 years, the school now has become The Sir James Whitney School, with a surrounding "regional centre for the hearing handicapped".

The renaming, said the province's legislature, "will, in its own procedural and municipal laws to the reserve subject only to federal law.

Local Cadets Return Home After Western Tour

Last weekend 21 members of Belleville's Royal Canadian Sea Cadet Corps Quinte returned from summer training in British Columbia.

Sixteen members of the Quinte band returned here from Spokane, Wash., direct from performing as part of a 350-cadet guard and band at the 1974 World's Fair. The length of training for the local cadets in B.C. ranged up to two and a half months.

Cadets on duty other than band have been returning singly this week as their summer duties end, while two cadet officers, Sub Lt. Dale Jones and SLT John Stephenson have another week of administrative duties

SLT Peter Rollinson-Lorner returned Aug. 30 from duties as Band Officer at the Cadet Drum and Bugle Corps. School at Esquimault, B.C., while cadet POs Terry Crossen and Bob Sinclair completed staff instructor duties at Quadra and Esquimault, respectively.

Every Quinte applicant for the staff band at RMCS Quadra was accepted with SLT Jones serving as associate director of music and three senior Quinte cadets appointed as Acting Corporal reserve call-out instructors.

Among the band's major activities during their travels throughout western Canada and northwestern U.S. were three days of parades and concerts in Edmonton, Alta., as part of that city's week-long Klondike Days celebrations.

Their grand performance was the Canadian Tattoo at the World's Fair in Spokane, Wash., Performances were also given en route, at Victoria and Nanaimo.

"The Guys Do the Job" Claims N.Y. Manager

NEW YORK (AP) — Can a man go from being fired in the National League one season to Manager of the Year in the American League the next, with a brief stopover in the American Association?

"I don't like to take credit for any of this," Bill Virdon said Thursday as he contemplated a torrid 16-4 record over the last three weeks that has earned New York Yankees a share of first place in the American League's East Division.

"I don't think a manager can take credit for the way the players play or for what happens on the field. You might put the guys out there, but they've got to do the job."

After pitching Pittsburgh Pirates to a first-place finish in the National League East in 1972—they lost the pennant on a wild pitch in the ninth inning of the final playoff game—Virdon was fired last September with the Pirates in second place. They finished third.

He was hired by Houston Astros to manage their Denver farm club in the American Association, but the Yankees beckoned when Jim Crotin, then president of the American League, voiced their signing of Dick Williams.

Virdon was well aware that Williams had managed Oakland A's to three division titles and two world championships in three years.

"I'm sure some people will always compare the job I do with what Williams might have done," he said, "but I can't let that worry me.

"In the way, Virdon managed to ruffle a few feelings. It's no secret that Yankees haven't been a happy club much of the season.

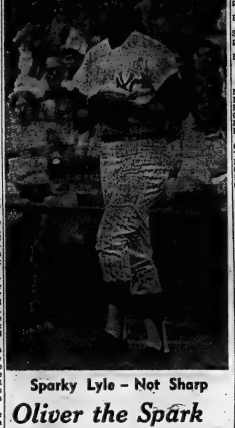
It surfaced in April with the trade of pitchers Steve Kline, Fritz Peterson, Fred Beene and Tom Buskey to Cleveland Indians for first baseman Chris Chambliss and pitchers Dick Tidrow and Cecil Upshaw.

It continued in May when Virdon shifted Bobby Murcer, the team's top hitter and five-year centre fielder, to right field and Elliott Maddox to centre field. The move has strengthened the Yankees defence and Maddox leads the regulars with a .308 batting average.

Virdon raised a few eyebrows when he criticized the defensive delay of second baseman Horace Clarke—since traded—and the weak throwing of Left fielder Roy White, criticisms which had been aired for years by reporters covering the team.

He spoke his mind when he thought someone misplayed a ball where Houk might have blamed the field conditions.

He benched Graig Nettles for a week after Nettles balled off a routine throw from a record home runs in April.



He bypassed one of Pat Dobson's starts and once lifted him in the fifth inning of a 2-1 game and the pitcher sounded off several times. He played Ron Blomberg at designated hitter, while but it's rarely set him down, even against left-handers, when he lost his batting stroke and then heard Blomberg beef about it.

He heard hoots and jeers when he benched Bobby Murcer, a favorite son of Yankee fans, when he lost his batting stroke and then heard Blomberg beef about it.

Bill Sudakis may be headed for the first baseman because Chambliss wasn't hitting. He has heard Gene Michael outspoken about his third baseman Sandy Alomar among the regulars have had outstanding years—and Maddox didn't become an overnight success former until late May while Alomar has only been a Yankee since mid-season. Murcer and catcher Thurman Munson have had off years and Mel Stottlemyre, the club's long-time pitching star, has won one game since April and has been sidelined.

On the field, only Maddox, left fielder Lou Piniella and second baseman Sandy Alomar have been consistent performers all season.

Oliver the Spark

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Reggie Oliver threw a pair of touchdown passes and set up another scored on Jackson-ville Sharks defeated Philadelphia Bell 34-30 before a crowd of 17,835 in Thursday's only World Football League game.

With the victory, the Sharks tied the Bell for third place in the Eastern Division, both teams have 4-4 records.

Oliver, a rookie, passed to Edgar Scott for a 45-yard touchdown on the first play from scrimmage and found Drew Buie open with a 13-yard touchdown pass in the fourth quarter.

In between, Tommy Durrance regained the touch that had him leading the WFL in scoring for the first five weeks, and twice darted eight yards for touchdowns.

Oliver completed 14 of 34 passes for 321 yards as he outdueled Jacksonville Quarterback Kim Hammond. Philadelphia quarterback

Corcoran wheeled the Bell G yards to a touchdown the first drive it had the ball and drove the club 59 yards to another score late in the game. He rushed third two other threats in the second quarter, only to have a muffed snap from centre and a fumble kill scoring opportunities.

Philadelphia's special teams produced two touchdowns by blocking Jacksonville field goal regained the touch that had him attempts. Bernard Chapman ran 59 yards for one and George Charles went 77 for the other.

Brewers Edge Red Sox; Yanks Take Over Lead

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

German Thomas took up where he left off in the minor leagues when he joined Milwaukee Brewers for an American League baseball game in Boston Thursday night.

The outfielder, who hit homers for Sacramento of the Pacific Coast League this season, hit another against the surging Red Sox to give the Brewers a 4-3 win.

Thomas failed to get the ball out of the infield in his first three times at bat, but hit one out with a man on base and one out in the ninth to break a 2-2 tie.

The defeat dropped the Red Sox a half game behind New York Yankees in the American League East, knocking them out of the lead for the first time since July 14.

The Yankees and Baltimore Orioles, who remained two games behind New York, both were idle Thursday.

In Thursday's other American League games, Minnesota Twins trounced Kansas City Royals 4-1, Oakland A's blanked Texas Rangers 2-0, and Chicago White Sox nipped California Angels 1-0.

Philadelphia Phillies edged Chicago Cubs 4-3 in 11 innings in Thursday's only National League game.

Thomas' home-run production at Sacramento was helped by a 333-foot fence in left field but at Boston his homer cleared the screen also the 37-foot wall near the left-field foul pole, 315 feet away.

Mike Hegan and Pedro Garcia had his solo homers for Milwaukee in the seventh to tie the score against the Red Sox, who lost their seventh in a row.

Steve Busby failed in his third bid for his 20th win for the Royals when he threw the ball away on a pickoff attempt with the bases loaded in the sixth inning.

The Twins scored twice on the play, breaking a 1-1 tie, and the Royals lost their eighth in a row.

Jim (Catfish) Hunter knotted the Rangers to four hits as he picked up his 22nd win for Oakland.

Ken Henderson's double in the sixth inning drove in Jorge Orta with the only run of their game against California.

Bob Boone drove in two runs with a bases-loaded single in the top of the 11th for the Phils after the Cubs forced the game into overtime with a run in the eighth.

Steelers Crush Cowboys

The Message for Thomas: You Work Your Way Back

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Duane Thomas, the controversial running back, begins his latest comeback with Washington Redskins tonight in a National Football League exhibition game.

Thomas was being counted on as a starter until recently, when he became involved in a disagreement with assistant coach Charley Waller and was put on waivers.

Thomas later apologized to head coach George Allen, was recalled from waivers a week ago and was reinstated earlier this week.

But Allen says Thomas will have to work his way back up to regain his starting job, beginning tonight the Redskins' May Baltimore-Colts at Washington.

The final weekend of exhibitions began Thursday night, with Pittsburgh Steelers romping over Dallas Cowboys 41-16. Joe Gilliam threw two touchdown passes to lead the victory.

In other games tonight, New York Giants visit Buffalo Bills, Los Angeles Rams at Kansas City Chiefs, and Cincinnati Bengals play Green Bay Packers at Milwaukee.

On Saturday, New York Jets play Oakland Raiders at Berkeley, Calif., Cleveland Browns are at Detroit Lions, New Orleans Saints at Houston Oilers, Miami Dolphins at Chicago Bears and San Diego Chargers at Minnesota Vikings.

The NFL exhibition season concludes Sunday, with Los Angeles Rams at San Francisco 49ers, Philadelphia Eagles at New England Patriots, and Atlanta Falcons at Denver Broncos. The regular season begins Sept. 15.

Gilliam's touchdown passes were to Ron Shanklin on the fifth play of the game and to rookie John Stallworth with 22 seconds to play in the first half as the Steelers completed a 54 exhibition season.

The touchdown passes gave Gilliam 8 for the exhibition season.

Courageous Cleared

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — Courageous, the United States defender in next week's America's Cup yacht race, was cleared Thursday of suggestions that her deck structure did not comply with cup rules.

Although no official protest had been lodged, representatives of the Australian challenger, Southern Cross, had intimated that recesses in the deck of the Courageous were too large and gave the defender an advantage.

Rules for the 12-metre yachts stipulate that the deck must be flat except for small recesses or items of equipment such as winches and pedestals.

The controversy, small but important since it came only six days before the start of the best-of-seven series next Tuesday, hinged on whether the Courageous's winch drums and sidelight are large enough to be considered in the hull.

Hill, Holloway Team Up

Devolin Wins Opener

Devolin Motors took a 1-0 lead in their Ontario Amateur Softball Association Senior B playoff series with Kingston Thursday night with a 3-1 victory.

Ron Hill earned the win with relief help from Don Holloway. Hill fanned six batters, walked none and gave up seven hits. Holloway pitched the final two innings for Devolin striking out three and walking one. He did not allow one hit.

Phil Litchfield was the losing pitcher. He struck out 13, walked one and gave up eight hits.

Both sides played strong defensive games with no errors.

Devolin came up with a big fourth inning when they scored all three of their runs. Rick Rosebeck started the rally off with a single and advanced to third on John Burtenshaw's double. Dave Maher then drove both men in with a triple. Maher scored on a single by Bruce Sickle, to put the locals on top 3-0.

Kingston scored once in the sixth inning, but that's all they could muster off starter Tom Hill.

Burnside was the top hitter for the locals with a double and a single. Other hits went to Gary Goyer with a single and Ray Lamadeo with a single.

Paul Hannah had three singles for the visitors and Dave Chestnut, Wayne Burns, Steve Barclay and Doug Abrams each singled once.

The second game of the series is Saturday night in Kingston.

28th Goal in Final Game Gives Cobourg Ace Title

Cobourg Terry's tied Belleville United 1-1 and Warkworth whipped Brighton 6-3 as the Bay of Quinte Soccer Association wound up its regular season schedule Thursday.

Tony's, with first place wrapped up, had to win to prove hot striker John Van Balen had gotten his mind.

Van Balen went into the game tied for the lead in the league's scoring derby with Trenton Whitley's Henry Sopanen, Dave Reid of Brighton and Cobourg's Ace Title.

For a while Thursday, it looked as if the two would share the scoring title. But Van Balen scored his 28th goal of the season in the second half to put it away and earn his club a split in the points.

Cobourg's George Smith had opened the scoring in the game with the only counter of the first half.

At Warkroth, the Institution team climbed to the .500 mark with its defeat of Brighton.

After a slow start, Warkworth moved up the ladder in the standings and made the playoffs with a solid fifth place finish, on an 8-8-2 record for 18 points.

Minor Baseball Teams Complete '74 Season

All that remains for the Belleville Minor Baseball Association is to hold its annual closing day ceremonies and official activity for the 1974 season is complete ... on the playing fields that is.

House league champion ships have been decided and Ontario Baseball Association representatives have come to the end of the playoff trail.

J. J. Trudeau, coached by Barry Patterson, is the champion of the Tadpole division of the baseball league. Howard and Robert are at it again Saturday night against Etobicoke. The game is scheduled for 8 p.m. at the Alemite.

Balazs, Bowerman Team Up for Win

BURLINGTON (Special) — A club pro from Belleville and a Toronto-based golfer who used to call Belleville home and is now on the pro circuit, teamed up here Thursday to capture two honors in a new tournament.

A 12 ... birdie putt by George Balazs, Bell of Quinte Country Club pro, decided the first annual Senior Pro — Junior Pro best ball championship of Ontario tournament.

Balazs, partnered with Garry Bowerman, sank his birdie on the fourth extra hole.

Bowerman, a real Dave Clayton of the host Burlington Springs Country Club, forced Balazs and Bowerman to the sudden death extra-hole playoff.

Veteran Players Leaders In Team Canada's Romp

MEDICINE HAT, Alta. (CP) — The "old men" of Team Canada '74 opened their exhibition hockey series Thursday night with a 7-3 victory over a team of junior all-stars, but the margin surprised nobody.

What was more important to coach Billy Harris and general manager Bill Hunter was the way the Wayne Hicdey Association veterans matched the Western Canada Hockey League players in speed and stamina.

By the end of the three-game contest, watched by a record Medicine Hat crowd of 5,115, the pros—preparing for the Sept. 17 opener of their eight-game series with Russia—were fresher and busier than their young rivals.

"They used their muscle," said Ernie (Punch) McLean of the New Westminster, B.C. Bruins, one of those working with the junior squad. "They picked their spots and they did almost what they wanted to do."

Bobby Hull missed the spot twice, but his goal just each time, but still managed three goals against junior netminder Larry Hendrick.

"He usually firing the puck," said Hull's linemate Johnny McKenzie. "I was standing in front of the net once and the puck whistled past my head. When the play stopped the goaltender checked me for bleeding in front of him."

Ralph Backstrom, who played with two different sets of wingers at times in the first period, scored twice for the pros. Gavin Kirk and Pat Stapleton served once each.

Pat Price, a defenceman signed after last season by Vancouver Blazers, drilled a high shot past Gerry Cheevers in the second period for one junior goal. Don Ashby of Calgary Centennials put a shot between Don McLeod's legs in the third period for the other.

Price, a Team Canada member, joined the juniors to add strength.

Centres Backstrom and Andre Lacroix contested to play well and Serge Bernier had his best outing of the camp. However, Jim Harrison and Mike Walton—conflicially designated the fourth and fifth centres—were among those who sat out the game.

Hunter said there was no significance in the fact they didn't play, Gordie Howe, Kirk and Frank Mahovlich played only in the first period.

"We knew we would dress 20. That's all we can dress in Russia. We'll dress a different lineup in the next game," said Hunter.

Hendrick blocked 49 shots and looked sharp on only one goal. That was a 50-foot wrist shot by Hull, who caught the young Kitchener-Waterloo Dogs goaltender on his heels.

Cheevers faced 13 shots in his two periods, and McLeod was tested eight times.

The clubs play in Brandon tonight in the second game of the three-game exhibition swing that ends Sept. 12 in Edmonton.

Juniors Play Two

The Ellis Juniors will have their work cut out for them this weekend when they start their provincial quarter final Ontario Amateur Softball Association "A" series with Scarborough.

Saturday, the locals travel to Thompson Park in Scarborough for the first game at 8 p.m. and Sunday the two teams meet at Alemite Park at 3 p.m. for the second game in the best-of-three series.

The Ellis Juniors have had to walk almost three weeks for this series to begin and many of their players have gone back to university. As a result, the locals will be going with only nine players in their bid for the provincial title.

Saturday, a novelty shoot is included with regular competitions set for Sunday.

NEW WESTMINSTER, B.C. (CP) — New Westminster Salmonbellies outclassed Windsor Wheelers in with the Minto Cup and the Canadian senior lacrosse championship with an 18-8 victory in a sudden-death final Thursday night.

The Salmonbellies took a 5-3 lead after the first period, went up 8-3 after 40 minutes, then put it away with four goals early in the third.

Ken Wyzenbeek — known in the Western Lacrosse Association as Chal's New Brother — was all offence against the Warlocks.

New Westminster fired 66 shots at two Windsor goalies.

Jim Grady of the Salmonbellies scored three goals, all in the first period. John Hannah also got three. New Westminster got the third.

By THE CANDIAN PRESS

Philadelphia Wings scored their second one-goal win in as many nights Thursday to take a 2-0 lead against Maryland Arrows in their best-of-seven National Lacrosse League championship series.

The Wings, who came from behind to win 7-6 in overtime Wednesday, won 12-11 Thursday after falling behind 10-4 at the end of the second period.

Rochester Griffins downed Montreal Quebecois 14-11 Thursday in the opening game of the two other best-of-seven semi-final.

A Spectrum crowd of 8,317 saw Larry Lloyd, an 82-goal scorer during the regular season, score four times for the Wings. Terry Lloyd and Terry Rowland added two goals each for the Wings while Jerry McKenna scored three times for Maryland.

Only 998 were on hand at Rochester to see Bill Smaldi, Kevin Persons, Jan Magee and Al Gerdemeier score for the Griffins. John Davis scored three times and Dave Linseberger, Dale McKenzie and Jim Lorie twice each for Montreal.

The Rochester-Montreal series continues tonight in Rochester while the next Philadelphia-Maryland game is scheduled for Monday night in Landover, Md.

Neufeld is Too Much For Burlington Squad

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. (CP) — Niagara Falls McHaes advanced to the semi-finals of the Ontario Football League Tuesday when they edged Burlington Provincials 14 to 13 on the basis of a sudden-death game to decide second place in the East Division.

Jake Neufeld extended his string of scoreless innings to 19 over two consecutive nights as he hurled a three-hit shutout.

Bill Drennan took the loss for Burlington also allowing three hits.

Neufeld also figured in the game's only run when he struggled to open the bottom of the 8th inning. Pinch runner Norm Shannon scored on a single by Ron Sinclair.

Neufeld, who pitched a 3-0 decision Wednesday as the McHaes gained a share of second place, struck out 12 Burlington batters Thursday over the 18-innings.

Niagara Falls now meets Newmarket in a best-of-three series starting Saturday in Newmarket.

Oshawa Troy's lead Toronto 14 to the other game's score with the next game scheduled for Saturday in Oshawa.

Nicklaus is Missing

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — For the first time in five years, Jack Nicklaus is missing from the four-man group of the world's major titleholders who make up the field for the World Series of Golf.

The two-day, 36-hole tournament begins Saturday with South African Gary Player, the Masters and British Open champion, United States Open winner Hale Irwin, PGA champion Lee Trevino and Canadian Open winner Bobby Nichols closing a $50,000 first prize.

Only the winners of golf's top four North American tournaments—the British and U.S. Opens, the Masters and PGA—have automatic entry into this weekend's tournament.

Nicklaus never competed two of the qualifying tournaments, Nichols became eligible as the first alternate as winner of the Canadian Open.

Stan Smith Out of Running

Tanner and Rosewall Advance

FOREST HILLS, N.Y. (AP) — Unseeded Roscoe Tanner cut down Stan Smith 7-6, 6-3, 3-6, 6-1 Thursday and followed veteran Ken Rosewall into the men's semi-finals of the United States open tennis championship.

The 20-year-old Rosewall, who made his first appearance here 22 years ago, shattered the upset streak of India's Vijay Amritraj 2-6, 6-3, 6-3, 6-2.

In Saturday's semi-final, Tanner will play countryman Manny Orantes, the No. 1 seed, who beat Alex Metreveli of the Soviet Union 2-6, 6-3, 6-4, 6-1. Rosewall will play John Newcombe, the No. 2 seed, in an all-Australian match.

Tanner, who defeated defending champion Arthur Ashe of the U.S. 4-6, 6-3, 6-4, 3-6, 7-6, 6-4, in the quarter-finals, was the tournament's biggest surprise.

The man are idle today while the women, three of them from the U.S., play for finalist berths. Top-seeded Chris Evert, the Wimbledon queen, will play Australia's Evonne Goolagong and second-seeded Billie Jean King, will face unseeded Julie Heldman, who knocked her out of the tournament a year ago.

Rosewall, who won the first of his U.S. titles in 1953 and his second in 1970, was a distinct underdog against the 28-year-old American, who had upset Bjorn Borg, the 18-year-old wonder boy of Sweden, who was seeded fourth, in the quarterfinals.

In another Mary Hassan, seeded 11th.

Playing almost flawlessly, the Indian raced through the opening set against Rosewall in 17 minutes. He then assumed a 3-1 lead in the second set by breaking Rosewall in the fourth game.

It was at this point that the Australian reached back and found the shocking magic that made him No. 1 in pro ranks in the late 1950s and early 1960s.

With a series of slashing back-hand returns, he broke Amritraj for the first time and before the Indian realized what had happened, he had spun off eight straight games, winning the second set and taking a 3-0 lead in the third.

Tanner, who had never beaten Smith before, broke his opponent's powerful service four times while losing his service only once.

COLUMBUS, Ga. (AP) — Veteran Jim Ferrell went back to his old swing while rookie Lyon Lott got into the swing for the first time and the two found themselves locked in a tie for the lead entering today's second round of the $150,000 Southern open golf tournament.

"I've gone back to my old swing of last year," said Ferrell Thursday after shooting a five-under-par 66 which included six birdies and three bogeys.

The 33-year-old Louisville, Ky., native, a Kentucky pro in 1968, has earned just $12,209 this year. He has been unable to qualify in 17 of his last 21 starts.

Lott, 24, is a graduate of last year's PGA qualifying school. The pro golfer also fanned the par 70 course in a steady rain for their tie to lead a group of 12 golfers six shots behind, including J.C. Snead.

Last year's runner-up, Forrest Fezler, was at 76 along with Bruce Devlin, Tommy Aaron and Gardner Dickinson.

Joe Moss Undecided

TORONTO (CP) — Toronto Argonauts are confining their search for a new head coach as Joe Moss, who quit the club, decided Thursday he isn't sure he wants the job.

Moss was appointed to the position after Bill Rodgers, owner of the Eastern Football Conference team, fired John Rauch following a 13-11 loss Tuesday to Montreal Alouettes.

Moss, who joined the Argonauts for the 1973 season along with Rauch, has been responsible for the club's defensive secondary.

Moss met Thursday with managing director John Barrow to discuss the future.

"I don't know what I should do," said Moss, who is accepting the interim coaching position.

Circus Skills Taught

NEW YORK (Ginter) — Henry Burgess' classroom at New York University is unlike any in the room of Bunsen burners, Indian clubs, and balance balls.

Burgess, 35, has found an answer to the problem of how to inform performers on when circuses are unfolding from the handicapped by television, movies and professional parks.

Burgess — probably the only "master teacher in circus" at a college level in the world — explains:

"A stocky, bald-ed figure of a gymnast and the dwelling ground of a professional he teaches in the university's school of the arts. His pupils are middle-to acrobats, and would be clowns and trapeze artists.

How then, do circus arts help them?

Well I really teach is how to approach and tackle a problem," he explained. "It's like what they used to try to tell you about Latin in school. You may never use it, but the discipline will help you."

Most of Burgess' students are city kids and "often not athletic." Others must be overcome their basic fear of anything that involves performers as the flying trapeze.

"I basically take what you see in the circus back to the work where they came from. To walk a tightrope you must first learn to walk.

He instructs in the basics of tumbling, high-wire walking, the trapeze, balancing stunts, unicycling and of juggling.

Burgess himself has students who have become successful actors were usually the ones who excelled in his class.

Also, many have come back with accounts of how things learned in his class have saved their lives—actually, not professionally. They were able to jump out of the way of a car kick a would-be mugger or dangle by their heels from the railing of a bridge over which they had plunged.

Burgess was not born in the bosoms of a circus family. His father was a "respectable" executive for the General Foods Corp.

But his father had a friend who did magic tricks and Burgess picked up the art. Then in a magicians' magazine he read a column on "jokes for jugglers," and was hooked.

He spent one year of a rambling college education at Florida State University, where he spent more time in its famous student circus than in classrooms.

Not sure exactly what his academic discipline was, he settled for a bachelor of arts in theatre. Asked if, as a teacher, he plans to continue academic pursuits, he answers, "Well, yes, but I don't know of a PhD in circus. And if I went for it, who would examine me?"

While finishing off his first degree at Columbia University, he served as assistant curator of a small drama museum. One day, he walked Carlo Blanco Memorial, who had just taken the job of "master teacher in movement and voice" at NYU.

The two got to talking circus. Then Manuel gave Burgess the old circus band-clap signal. Surprised by Manuel's shoulders, "the head curator was told," and Burgess was on his way to NYU.

Card Cheat Helps Police

EDMONTON (CP) — Martin Nash of Vancouver couldn't hold a job, so he decided cheating at cards.

He, Nash, a professional card cheat who gives demonstrations of his craft at various gatherings, began working with cards when he was six.

After drifting in and out of jobs for several years, he decided to pursue the line of work he enjoys most.

He spends as many as 3,000 hours perfecting a single trick.

Recognized as an expert in his field, Mr. Nash works with the RCMP in spotting card sharks and occasionally lecturing police departments in Canada and the United States.

Coal-burning Vessel Kept as Showpiece

HALIFAX (CP) — The Acadia, Canadian government research vessel for many years, will be kept as a historical showpiece.

The narrow-beamed rakish ship has been tied up at the Bedford Institute of Oceanography (BIO) on Bedford Basin.

The Acadia, the first northern survey vessel of the Canadian hydrographic service, stands out beside the pedestrian stocky figures of modern research ships.

One of her notable dockmates is the Dawson, which became the first ship to circumnavigate the American continent on a research project several years ago.

The Acadia is slated to become part of the proposed Maritime Museum on the Halifax side of the harbor. In the meantime, the ship is serving as a museum at BIO.

Captain John Taylor, who was the Acadia's skipper for 18 years and spent 44 years at sea, directs tours.

The ship remains as handsome and proud as the day she sailed from Halifax harbor on July 8, 1913.

Despite her 61 years, she has been well cared for and the warm mahogany panelling stands aristocratically as it does for shining brass plaques, tiled lamps and bells.

During her more than 50 years of service with the government, she battled Arctic ice in scientific expeditions, served in both world wars, helped chart the coasts of Newfoundland and rescued men, women and children from a fire.

She also survived the Halifax Explosion of 1917 when Mont Blanc and Imo collided setting off a blast which killed more than 1,500 and destroyed half the city.

In her first year of service, the Acadia saved the crew of the shipwrecked steamer Aletis, caught in ice at Fox Channel, near Hudson Strait.

The Acadia reached the crew just as the steamer touched bottom and lifeboats were lowered but in doing this, the Acadia endangered herself.

Fighting the same ice that claimed Aletis, it took eight trips by Acadia to get through and on the eighth try she succeeded with only a slight leak in the bow.

During that first year, the Acadia saved 15 ships and the crew of one other wrecked ship.

Capt. Taylor, a native of Carbonear, Nfld., began his life at sea on fishing vessels, then worked with the Furness Withy Steamship Lines before joining the government service in 1908.

Yellowstone World's Oldest National Park

YELLOWSTONE PARK, Wyo. (CP) — Thanks to the fumarole, Yellowstone Park has become familiar to nearly everyone—whether viewed in person or not. Old Faithful, mountains, plains and forests feeding the bears are in spout of our memory banks.

But Yellowstone, whose visited exceeds the greatest, of expectations, is the oldest national park in the world, but not the largest. It's also little smaller than Jasper and half the size of South Africa's famous Kruger Park. But the variety of sights it's still champion.

It was late summer and the hordes had departed with their campers and their boats cars, revealing an enchanting world of hundreds of hot springs, mud pools, geysers, lakes, rivers, canyons, landslides, waterfalls, cascades, cliffs, pine and spruce forests, sage meadows and valleys.

Old Faithful was blowing columns of water and clouds of steam into the air. But the famous geyser is only one of 10 and is not the largest, the highest, the most regular, nor the greatest spouter. Yet it remains the most — possibly spouting 10,000 gallons of boiling water up to 150 feet at each eruption. By comparison, the Giantess can spout for a day and half at a time, blowing 200 feet in the air. Geysorites has been spouting consistently for the last 15 years.

But geysers aren't the only bizarre action in this immense waterworks extravaganza. Hot springs, 3,000 of them, boil and bubble. Mammoth Hot Springs have been bringing up limestone which has solidified over the centuries into terrace terraced steps in shades of pink, tan, white and grey. Fountain Spring, the largest, forms a brilliant blue pool. Emerald Pool is cobalt and green, edged with ochre.

Mud pots percolate and gurgle in various colors, and fumaroles vent up jets and puffs of steam.

Board walkways lead through the main fields of geysers, mud pots and fumaroles, and in most cases it would be suicide to step off the walks to take a closer look.

Early adventurers included tales of a giant mountain in their Marco Polo descriptions of Yellowstone. It is a cliff of obsidian, which turns out to be the largest in the world.

The petrified forests are also the largest in the world. Volcanoes once sent up clouds of ash, turning them to stone.

Yellowstone Lake is the largest alpine lake in the United States and has marinas, rental boats and boat cruises. Fishing Bridge, at the north end of the lake, was for years a popular that anglers were hooking more people than fish. It now is closed to fishermen but you can lean over the railings and watch trout swim through the clear, cold water.

In its wanderings, Yellowstone River drops in falls (the Lower Falls are twice as high as Niagara) and narrows to form the 25-mile-long Yellowstone Canyon. Here canyon walls are streaked ochre, rust and rose by the different mineral colors of yellow—the stops that give the park its name. Artists gather along the canyon where visitors may watch the artists capture the shades and hues.

Apart from its geological wonders and sights, Yellowstone is an immense wildlife preserve where a new policy of garbage removal, bears have moved to wilderness areas; making them less visible. Deer used to be, although their numbers have increased. They share the wilds with bison, elk, moose, antelope, wolves and coyotes.

Rangers claim that the average visitor sees only about five per cent of the park. Roads loop around for 200 miles to disperse traffic.

Camp grounds are equipped with such comforts as showers and ironing boards, and a variety of lodges, chalets and cabins can sleep 2,500 people. Rates are reasonable—at Old Faithful Lodge near the geyser you can get a single room with bath for less than $16.

Rangers conduct trail walks that start from one hour to an all-day trip that takes in a petrified forest. They also give talks at campgrounds and demonstrations on back packing and fishing. Five-day backpack trips through the park by boat, horseback or scenic coach are also available and the park is now open in the winter for snowshoeing, cross-country skiing and snowmobiling.

Allergic Persons Get Help

SASKATOON (CP) — Allergic persons or those with allergic persons in the family, have a place to turn for help and information in this city.

The Allergic Foundation of Canada, Saskatoon branch, was founded in 1972 to fill a gap no guidance felt existed in disseminating information about allergic conditions and treatments.

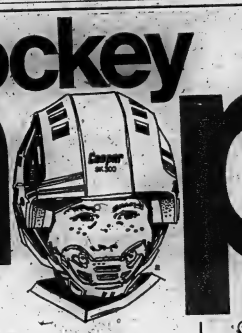
Composed of a group of concerned parents, the organization is making literature on the subject available and providing mutual support among allergy sufferers and those who care about them.

Helen Hughes, an executive member, said 18 per cent of the population is affected by allergies and 20 per cent require medication for the ailment.

The Saskatoon branch is the only one in the country, although several enquiries have been received from other Canadian cities.

Deodorant May Draw Skeeters

GUELPH, Ont. (CP) — An entomologist at University of Guelph says research indicates that the type of deodorant used may be the reason some people are more attractive to mosquitoes than others.



Prof. Russell Wright said that if you are bitten frequently by mosquitoes it could be a good idea to change the brand of deodorant or if you don't use deodorant, try some. It may keep the mosquitoes away.

He said that mosquitoes often prefer one person over another depending on individual body odor.

There are about 35 different species of mosquitoes in Ontario, he said, but only about 10 or 12 are considered "serious" to humans.

Coast Guard Receives Varied Calls for Help

HALIFAX (CP) — It takes an American tourist west girl to learn how book learning is necessary out the job of a coast guard captain.

Pte Captain Orrin Millard of the Canadian Coast Guard cutter Alert a case in point occurred earlier this month when an American tourist west girl using her sweetheart's sword ended up with barbed sword fish Link, embedded in his throat.

The Alert rescued the injured fisherman, who was taken to hospital here.

It was only one of a series of rescues that day for the 224-foot Coast Guard ship.

Early in the morning she had come to the aid of the fishing vessel Sandy Bess II, whose hydraulic system had broken down off Sable Island. The Alert's crew repaired the broken hose with equipment carried aboard the ship and within 2½ hours the fishing boat was under way again.

She was then called to search for an overdue vessel, but the missing boat reported in before the search started.

Captain Millard said the Coast Guard does a lot of unnecessary work searching for boats that are overdue only because of a lack of communication between the crews and their families. The work could be avoided if they would call ashore and report their whereabouts to prevent relatives and friends from worrying.

An example happened on Aug. 1 while the Alert was anchored at Shelburne, N.S. One of the officers rushed ashore to a yacht sail into port. Later that evening a call came to search for the 42-foot Therapy. Luckily the officer recalled having seen the yacht, and after a check of the harbor she was found safely moored.

Had the Alert not been in Shelburne at the time, she would likely have spent all night searching for the yacht.

Captain Millard said the Alert's crew is highly skilled and able to cope with the many emergencies which crop up almost daily.

The ship has four engines developing 10,580 horsepower and carries a crew of 39, including two nurses. She also has a helicopter deck and hangar, a hospital and dispensary, and the latest in navigation and communications equipment.

Summer Job Keeps Him Busy For 19 Years

HALIFAX (CP) — Walter Gormley, who has been the chauffeur for Nova Scotia's last seven lieutenant-governors, began the longest summer of his life in 1949.

That is when he regarded his duty as driver for LL-Gov. H. L. Kimball.

"I only intended to stay for the summer while I was looking around for another job."

But except for a six-month stint with former premier Angus L. Macdonald, Mr. Gormley has been a permanent fixture over seven years at Government House. Now a Stella's historic residence for the lieutenant-governor.

During the Second World War, he had been a tailor but he end of the war dried up that job.

He found he liked being the chauffeur and the people whom he worked for so he cancelled his plans of leaving when new employment was available.

His responsibilities are considerably more wide-ranging than driving the lieutenant-governor to various functions.

He has to keep the car in top mechanical condition and look after Government House property. He also has to ward off would-be preachers, who appear to be one of the hazards of the job.

He was kept walking for almost seven hours outside a Halifax hotel one evening after he received a call telling him the lieutenant-governor had changed his planned departure time.

Preserving Tradition

Edmonton College Offers Course in Culture of Crees

EDMONTON (CP) — A Metis woman who never graduated from high school will teach Indian lore through six years of history in a Cree language and culture course being offered this fall at an Edmonton community college.

Grant MacEwan Community College is offering what it believes is the first North American college credit program in Cree language and culture after offering Cree language programs to adult education night classes for three years.

The teacher, Anne Anderson, said she had to write all her own textbooks because no one else had ever produced any. Since her first basic Cree translation book in 1976, she has published and personally financed 30 textbooks on language, culture and lifestyles.

Mrs. Anderson, who spent the summer putting her program on tape for use in a language laboratory, said her students will learn about Indian teachings, eating habits and methods of survival used by the western and plains Cree.

"The Cree dancers were the first to put words into their songs," she said. "Most other Indians did not use words; they just sang 'aye hi yah aye' but no words as such. The Cree-speaking people were the first coast to have words and sentences."

She said the Cree for "dancing is neat to, spiritualism, very close to what the Great Spirit has offered us."

The Sun Dance, one of the most important Cree dances, was performed only by "men of knowledge, men who were worthy," men whose background was of great importance.

The dancer would perhaps be a man whose grandfather was a medicine man and the things he knew were handed down through them.

"The dance was really a fast. They would dance inside a lodge around an pecial covered pole for three days. During that time they would not eat anything, only drink a little water. It was a sort of penance."

The Cree survived on a staple diet of buffalo, whose meat was fried over an open fire or dried in the sun.

"Buffalo gave them clothing, gave them footwear, gave them blankets, rugs; they used everything from the buffalo.

"Nature provided meat, nature provided berries. Everything that we

Budget Soon

Turner Promises To Cut Spending

OTTAWA (CP) — Finance Minister John Turner said Friday the government intends to cut spending and he will be spreading the gospel of restraint to domestic trips and travels to foreign capitals.

Mr. Turner emerged from a period of public silence since the July 8 general election to announce a busy itinerary for the rest of the month and give some hints as to what will be in the federal budget.

He said a news conference for friends to bring in a budget, at the "earliest parliamentary opportunity" after the session begins Sept. 30, probably in late October or early November.

He said the government remains committed to most of the revenue measures, including tax cuts and concessions, but there may be changes in the source industry tax measures.

The relief has got to focus on the expenditure side," he indicated many cuts would come in social programs.

It was a defeat in the Commons on a budget tabled May 6 which precipitated the election.

Revenue measures in that budget included: A plan to allow tax-free savings up to a certain limit for purchase of a first home; making tax-free the first $1,000 of a taxpayer's investment income; adding special exercise taxes on purchases of high-energy-consuming vehicles; and increasing taxes on tobacco and alcohol.

The government was under fire during the election for its spending policies and budgetary surpluses Mr. Lambertson has been urging Mr. Turner recently to cut federal spending.

Budgetary spending proposed May 6 totalled $22.4 billion for the 1974-75 fiscal year, which was $408 million more than projected revenues. The spending total was 22-per-cent more than the amount for 1973-74, about half of that increase was due to a support program to keep gasoline prices down and this program was to be financed by a tax on crude oil exports.

Mr. Turner reaffirmed the federal government's intention to increase taxes for mining and oil companies but indicated positions might be modified after talks with the provinces.

A meeting with Alberta representatives has been scheduled for Sept. 14.

Most of the rest of this month will be taken up with meetings, beginning Monday when Mr. Turner joins Prime Minister to talk to Treasury Secretary William Simon.

He said he will make two major policy speeches—one Friday to the Canadian Club of Vancouver and another Sept. 18 to the Canadian Bankers Association at a meeting in Montreal.

On Sept. 21st he leaves for London, Paris and Bonn, returning Sept. 28. In June to by chairman of the Commonwealth finance ministers annual meeting Sept. 25-27.

Mr. Turner revised downward his expectations for the Canadian economy this year. The May budget predicted real growth at five per cent and he said Friday the latest estimate is four to 4½ per cent.

He criticized Statistics Canada for its commentary accompanying the latest report on gross national product. He said the figures indicate that the Canadian economy may have shown a period of weakness common to industrialized nations.

The second quarter report showed there was no real growth during the April-June period.

"I didn't appreciate the editorializing by Statistics Canada. They ought to just produce the damn statistics.

"We are not heading into a recession. Nor are we in a period of stagflation."

Cypriot Forces Reach Partial Agreement

NICOSIA (AP) — Turkish-and GreekCypriot leaders have agreed to exchange military and civilian prisoners and lists of thousands of refugees in the first Cyprus accord signed since the Geneva talks broke down last month.

The agreement came Friday as Glafcos Clerides, the Greek-Cypriot president of Cyprus, and Rauf Denktash, the Turkish-Cypriot leader, met in the war-torn Ledra Palace Hotel near the divided line between the Greek-and Turkish-Cypriot communities of Nicosia.

In Ankara, meanwhile, Turkish Premier Bulent Ecevit warned that further delays in negotiating a political solution for Cyprus may leave the island permanently divided.

"Life on the island cannot wait indefinitely and administration in both zones would have to take shape and be consolidated so that eventually there would be no room left for a federal solution," Ecevit told Associated Press correspondent Nicholas Ludington in an interview.

Ecevit accused Greece of stalling in resuming the peace talks because he said they "may have in mind the annexation of the remaining part of Cyprus to Greece."

The Greek government and Cypriot President Clerides have repeatedly vowed they will not resume discussions on the future of Cyprus until the Turks withdraw from some occupied territory on the island.

Turkey has proposed dividing Cyprus into two federated cantons, one governed by Turkish Cypriots and the other by Greek-Cypriots. The Athens government has adamantly opposed any attempt by Greece to arrive any part of the island.

Milhaven Reported Quiet

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — The "dynamic" situation that prevailed at Milhaven Penitentiary during disturbances earlier this year is over, Solicitor-General Warren Allmand said Friday after touring the institution.

Mr. Allmand was at the maximum security prison to check on the implementation of recommendations by the parliamentary committee formed after a series of disturbances in March and April in which guards were assaulted, weapons discovered hidden in cells and prisoners confined to their cells during the trouble.

After his tour Friday, Mr. Allmand said staff relations were good and the penitentiary operation is "going quite well."

He said a number of changes at the penitentiary have come out of the committee's report.

He said a segregation wing for trouble-making prisoners is nearing completion and several guards who have been accused by the committee of inciting prisoners have been transferred, while others have been retrained.

Vacant positions within the institution's administration have been filled and the prisoner population has been reduced from 625 to 528. Seventy prisoners classified for medium security have been moved out of the maximum security institution, he said.

Mr. Allmand also announced Friday that Kingston Penitentiary will be closed within five years and a new regional medical centre opened by 1976 at Collins Bay Penitentiary, about 12 miles west of here.

Outrage Mounts Over Bad Eggs

OTTAWA, (CP) — Chickens and turkeys may be the first victims in the marketing upheaval that has led to the destruction of millions of rotten eggs, Chairman Bergi Plumptre of the food prices review board warned Friday.

"If farmers follow the same route, I don't see why they won't be just as big a failure," she told a news conference in reference to national marketing agencies for the three products.

Turkeys now are controlled by a marketing agency similar to the one that governs egg farming, and plans are almost completed for a national chicken marketing agency.

Mrs. Plumptre described the latest disclosures of rotten eggs as a sad situation, particularly at a time when there is a protein shortage in the world.

But she added that the time has come when her board, members of the cabinet and others should be squabbling about the weather. The government should act to correct the situation, beginning with a full explanation by Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan of the reasons for the current egg scramble.

Conservatives Jarka McGrath (St. John's East), the party's food critic, in a statement, expressed indignation and disbelief at reports that at least another five million eggs will have to be rotten in Ontario. Late last month, nine million eggs stored by the Canadian Egg Marketing Agency (CEMA) said the eggs went bad because they were stored improperly in apple bins in Quebec.

Meanwhile, in Toronto Friday, the vice-president of a major export firm added fuel to the flaring dispute when he predicted that the total of rotten eggs may reach 200 million by October.

Jeffrey Rubenstein of Export Packers Ltd., which has offices in Toronto and Winnipeg, said CEMA is "playing with fire" because his firm had 29-per-cent spoilage on 18 million eggs purchased from the agency last month at 26 cents a dozen.

Mozambique Gains Independence

LUSAKA, Zambia (Reuter) — Mozambique is to become an independent state June 25 next year with a transitional Frelimo government taking over immediately, it was officially announced today.

The announcement said there will be a ceasefire between Portuguese forces and those belonging to Frelimo, which has led the territory's guerrilla war to win independence, effective from midnight tonight.

Jeffrey Rubenstein of Export Packers Ltd., which has offices in Toronto and Winnipeg, said CEMA is "playing with fire" because his firm had 29-per-cent spoilage on 18 million eggs purchased from the agency last month at 26 cents a dozen.

Breaks 3 Million Eggs a Week

Egg processor Max Rubenstein, owner of the Export Packers Co., stroll through a company warehouse in Mississauga, Ont., where 3 million eggs a week are broken. Export vice-president Jeffrey Rubenstein says there was 20 per cent spoilage of the 18 million eggs bought in August from the Canadian Egg Marketing Agency. An agency spokesman expects 3 million rotten eggs will be discovered in its Ontario warehouse upon completion of inventory this month. (CP Photo)

Leftists Declare War on Gov't.

BUENOS AIRES (AP) — The left-wing Montonero guerrillas have declared open war on the government of Argentine President Isabel Peron, promising arson, assassination, sabotage and bombings.

Mario Firmenich, the 28-year-old leader of the guerrillas, told a clandestine news conference Friday that the group's campaign would be waged, each the murder of two policemen, the blowing up of a French-owned auto salesroom, the kidnapping of a steel-mill executive and a raid on a police station.

Constable Suspended Following Fire Inquiry

MONTREAL (CP) — RCMP Constable Robert Samson was suspended without pay Monday by Jean-Paul Dragoni, commander of the force in Quebec.

The suspension is retroactive to Sept. 4, when Constable Samson was sentenced to 60 days in jail for refusing to continue his testimony at a fire commission inquiry into a bomb explosion.

Fire Commissioner Cyrille Delage declared Constable Samson in contempt of court Wednesday after the officer told the inquiry he could not testify again because of memory lapses and physical fatigue caused by injuries received in the explosion at the suburban home of Melvyn Dobrin, president of Steinberers' Ltd.

An RCMP spokesman said Constable Samson was suspended because the acts committed by him discredited the force as a whole.

Following the constable's testimony last week, the RCMP detained him at force headquarters. Under the RCMP Act of 1959, the force can arrest and hold any member for up to 30 days pending trial by an RCMP-appointed tribunal.

The 29-year-old member of the RCMP anti-terrorist squad had testified that he went to the scene of the explosive July 26 after receiving an anonymous telephone tip that he would find something interesting there. He was injured, he said, when a package he saw lying on the back patio of the Dobrin house exploded.

Constable Samson said he lost the fingertips of his left hand in the explosion and suffered 25-per-cent loss of hearing for which he needs surgery.

Police officers who interviewed Constable Samson during his stay in hospital testified that he told them he knew a business associate of a reputed underworld leader. A Montreal police detective told the inquiry that Constable Samson admitted he was promised $1,000 to plant the bomb.

Commissioner Delage adjourned the hearing until Constable Samson finished serving his jail sentence.

Ford Plans Review For Draft Dodgers

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford says he will establish a review board to consider amnesty for Vietnam-era draft dodgers and deserters.

The board, patterned after one created by President Harry Truman after the Second World War, is one of "10 to 12 points" which an aide said will be included in an amnesty plan Ford will announce Tuesday.

The president personally confirmed his intention to set up the review board in talking with reporters Friday night aboard his jetliner while returning from Philadelphia, where he addressed a dinner marking the 28th anniversary of the First Continental Congress.

He said he has not decided who will be chairman of the board, which an aide will have three to seven members.

While House press secretary Jarald terHorst said the review board will be composed basically of non-government members. He said it will not include military representatives.

Farmers Gain Little From Rising Prices

WASHINGTON (AP) — This summer a farmer with 1,000 acres of wheat may have felt pretty good about the price, perhaps close to $4 a bushel at the local elevator, but chances are he did not do cartwheels across the back 40 out of sheer joy.

That's because when that farmer set out to harvest his wheat, priced about 40 per cent higher than a year ago, he shopped into a new pair of overalls costing $9.87 a pair. The fourth current cost $7.36 at the local haberdashery a year earlier.

Then he climbed onto a sparkling new clothes and headed toward the nearest wheat field. Forget that the yield was only 30 bushels an acre instead of 35 as a year. The combine price itself was enough to send the farmer's thoughts of vacationing next winter in the Caribbean up in smoke.

As of June 15, the agriculture department says, a large combine of the type used to harvest wheat and other grains cost an average of $27,100. A year earlier it was $22,300.

The latest agriculture department price report also tells what farmers are faced with: Rising costs for many of the products they use regardless of what happens to prices of their own products.

For example, prices of building and fencing materials rose 1.5 per cent from June 15 and were up 25 per cent from a year earlier. This, an implement shed that might have cost $12,000 last summer is up to $12,500 now.

Then, if the building required it, paint cost 10.2% a gallon compared with $8.08 last summer. The report showed. That new fence might have taken rolls of woven wire costing $65.39 each — up from $52.69 a year ago.

Suppose a new tractor was needed. A typical medium-sized model was $12,900 this summer, on the average, the report said. Just a year ago it was $10,866.

New tires for the old tractor? They averaged $185 for large wheel models, up from $148 a year ago. And labor costs for a motor tune-up were up to $13 from $11.18 last summer.

Diesel fuel averaged 38.3 cents a gallon at the farm, up from 28.6 cents a year earlier.

Even the humble old pitchfork. A four-tine model was $8.47 this summer, compared with $7.59 a year ago.

Bean Harvesting Underway in Southeastern Ontario

Grain Industry Tired Of Ottawa's Interference

REGINA (CP) — The firm stand taken by the grain handling companies in the labor dispute at Vancouver is a warning to Ottawa that the grain industry is tired of government interference in settling contract disputes.

That's the word from Ira Mumford, general manager of the Saskatchewan Wheat Pool, the largest of the five operators now embroiled in a contract dispute with 595 grain handlers.

There's been a history of recent government interference in labor disputes in the grain industry and "we want to break this pattern," Mr. Mumford said Wednesday in an interview.

Facing a promise that the federal government will impose conciliator's award, Mr. Mumford said part of the concern faced by his firm and the other companies is that in future negotiations the unions may sit back, assured the federal government will step in.

"In the last two or three settlements we've been forced ourselves to be pressured by the government . . . when the final deadline was moved," Mr. Mumford said.

"We're seriously given to unreasonable demands, but they were nothing like the settlement proposed by Dr. Neil Perry in the present situation."

Mr. Mumford says grain handlers are paid as much or more than other groups.

Perry, the federal conciliator, has set 32 to 45 items unresolved in his report which recommends a $1.35-an-hour increase over two years in addition to fringe benefits, improvements and a new pension plan.

Mr. Mumford said the issue "could easily increase operating costs."

The grain handlers work in the terminal, unloading, cleaning and preparing grain for loading—work performed by the longshoremen.

Negotiations start with the longshoremen in about three months and they can bargain on maintaining the traditional wage differential between them and the grain handlers," Mr. Mumford said.

Another pool official said only 50 of the grain handlers are actually employed by the pool of the total of 595 at Vancouver and "presumably all our 4,000 employees throughout the system will be affected by this settlement within the next 12 months."

Then there are two railway workers who now are "getting less than the grain handlers under their old contract and they'll be even more unhappy when this preserving longshore settlement goes through," Mr. Mumford said.

He added that railway workers "have caused more slowdowns in the grain industry during the last two or three years than any other labor group."

The contract with grain handlers at Thunder Bay expires Dec. 31 and there has been a differential between those workers and their counterparts at Vancouver where the cost of living is higher.

"The rates at Thunder Bay now are not that far behind Vancouver and they've always followed west coast settlements," Mr. Mumford said.

With the Saskatchewan pool also just starting to negotiate with its 609 country elevator agents, these leaders represent the firms' contention that the Perry award is unreasonable and will have wide-ranging effects on inflation in Canada, Mr. Mumford said.

Reaction already has started with 19 terminal grain inspectors at Vancouver, federal employees and members of the public services alliance demanding wage parity with the grain handlers and the longshoremen, hour with the longshoremen receive a base rate of $6.84 an hour while the longshoremen receive $6.98.

Mr. Mumford rejected suggestions that more automation of the terminals is the answer.

"We could never get to the point where we could operate a fully automated plant and, even if we could, I'm sure the union would find a way to get around it," he said.

Scientists Study Manure As Possible Fuel Source

WINNIPEG (CP) — Engineers and scientists at University of Manitoba Engineering research centre here are putting the finishing touches on a $60,000 pilot plant to convert animal manure into usable fuel.

The idea itself is not new, but the plant will be the first of its kind in Canada and is likely to be followed by experiments on a much larger scale.

Prof. H. M. Lapp of the university's department of agricultural engineering says the economic feasibility of the scheme remains to be seen, but he foresees larger farmers being able to reduce their dependence on fossil fuels in the years to come.

Basically, the plan is to capture the methane gas produced as animal waste is broken down by bacteria.

"We started the project in 1971, before the fuel crisis caught the public attention," explained Prof. Lapp.

"We had three main objectives—to recover energy from animal wastes, to control the fertilizer value and to make the farmer able to save.

Despite these problems, the results of the experiments to date and the estimated $150,-000 that has already gone into the project would seem to indicate the system has merit, particularly in a world that has become increasingly energy-conscious.

Prof. Lapp himself looks forward to the time when livestock and poultry producers become self-contained energy producers and consumers and the energy potential of human waste is explored as well.

One sewage treatment plant in north Winnipeg already uses some gases generated by rot equipment in the winter, he said, although it's not ready for commercial production.

Official Says Fish Shortage 'Critical'

HALIFAX (CP) — The actual that the world's oceans will be the natural "bread basket" of the future no longer holds true, with most fish under international control, and as men begin to consider stocks of fish as finite.

This is the situation which, according to Dr. E. Graham Bligh, director of the fisheries and marine service laboratory here, is not met with developments in aquaculture and by increasing the use of processing traditional and under-utilized marketable species.

Recently appointed to the presidency of the Canadian Institute of Food Science and Technology (CIFST), Dr. Bligh said in an interview that Canadians will have to consider food as a low priority item, now are concerned with inflation, unless the supply of food as a big issue.

"Population increases will spend less of their disposable income on food than do other consumers. In Italy and Japan food takes up 50 per cent of income; in Russia the figure may be as high as 35 per cent.

"However," he said, "people concentrated in cities is declining; the world shortage of fish is critical; agricultural land is being urbanized, and food investment in the rest of the world are below normal."

As the president of the CIFST, Dr. Bligh said that organization's role as developing a Canadian food policy to ensure protection and utilization of food resources and production capacity.

In his role as director of a fisheries laboratory, he has the opportunity of work toward implementation of these goals, supervising experiments in aquaculture and science.

Among his concerns are maximum extraction of protein from marine sources, and initiation of new products and the commercial development of new species as traditional species decline or become uneconomic to harvest.

Dr. Bligh said filleting of fish is a waste operation, taking only the choice flesh and discarding 80 to 75 per cent of the fish.

"Fillets will survive as a choice product but we will no longer be able to discard the bones and skin, scraping the protein."

New products using mechanical protein are being created by the Halifax laboratory's meat-bone separator which squeezes fish under a high pressure through a screen.

Consistency of the product can be varied from that of hamburger to paste, depending on the size of the interchange plate chosen.

Dr. Bligh said products like fish minced fish burger lend themselves to continuous processing, quality control and automation as convenience foods.

"Conventional foods are extremely important in the institutional trade at the time when most Canadians eat one meal away from home each day.

Aquaculture, or raising fish in a controlled environment, is a venture with potential in the Maritimes, Dr. Bligh said.

"In the Atlantic lobster, we have a species with a good image and high value which, unlike the migratory salmon, is here from year to year and thereby lends itself to aquaculture.

In such an aquatic farm, disease is easily communicated, contamination controlled and a major factor, though, he added.

"We have been active here in studying the diseases which and prevention program related to fish farming and ensuring that new diseases aren't brought to Canadian waters.

Inflation Hurting Farmers

ELMVALE, Ont. (CP) — Exorbitant land prices and ever-increasing production costs are creating severe problems for farmers in Simcoe County, a local representative of the Ontario agriculture ministry said Tuesday.

Allan Scott notes that few young farmers can afford the $30,000 it usually costs to buy a 100-acre farm today and many of the older farmers are selling to developers.

He said increased animal feed prices and a slump in beef and hog markets have also become will be below the cost of production for many farmers this year.

Even dairy farmers may soon be facing shortages, despite the stable income they derive from the efforts of the Ontario Milk Marketing Board, Mr. Scott said in an interview.

Since the trend is to fewer farms with larger herds and increased production per cow, dairy farming today requires large amounts of capital to succeed long, he said.

But the year-end effort the work entails, as well as irregular hours and difficulty in recruited with finding suitable labor, has caused many milk producers to sell out to land developers and speculators at a fast and substantial profit, Mr. Scott said.

Mr. Scott added that one of the most serious probles facing farmers is the danger of "increased urban encroachment."

He urged that steps be taken to preserve prime farm lands because farming "just cannot compete with some sort of beer."

Elmvale is about 15 miles northwest of Barrie.

Disease Major Fear Among Dairy Farmers

GUELPH, Ont. (CP) — Along with the high cost of feed, equipment and everything else, farmers are constantly faced with the threat of dreaded diseases such as rabies, brucellosis and tuberculosis, all of which can cost them a bundle.

Dairy farmers, for instance, face the prospect of having their whole herd slaughtered if one cow contracts brucellosis. This disease causes cows to lose their calves and is often called a infectious abortion.

Brucellosis is also dangerous to humans.

Bridge or Tunnel?

Conjecture as to the actual location of the proposed Bay Bridge has replaced the euphoria that came with the announcement that a bridge was actually in the cards.

Transportation and Communications minister John Rhodes is thinking along the lines of a bridge at the present location of the Bay Bridge.

However he has noted there are the aesthetic considerations of the Ewart's Island park complexes. Indeed the more they are pondered the more this is seen to be a factor.

On the other hand it is just possible that, rather than being an eyesore, or a structure that would unalterably spoil the overall surrounds, a new high-level bridge at that point might enhance the Quinte scene there.

Inevitably people would become accustomed to it. As to the practical benefits of such a bridge there is no argument. Considering the other bridges of this nature that are familiar to most of us — the Skyway at Deseronto, the Thousands Islands bridge, and the international bridge link between Prescott and Ogdensburg, they are very much part of the landscape and they fulfill a vital function without seriously detracting from the surrounds.

When it comes to artistic concepts clashing, we have never thought much of the placing of an old steam train where it now stands at Zwick's Island. Bridge support over that point would not seriously upset the park's natural charm.

In any event, these are matters that will have to be considered by the draftsmen and engineers. Alderman Jack Smith's suggestion of a tunnel also has merit and should be considered. The whole project will require careful prior study.

Worsening Situation

The fatality rate on the highways appears to have worsened so markedly that the authorities can no longer stand idly by.

Government and police have a clear responsibility in a situation that is claiming an increasing number of lives.

Once again the holiday weekend marked up its grim share and injured. Even before its onset there had been other grievous accidents on the roads: no fewer than 17 people for instance killed in three separate accidents on Highway 17 in the Sault area. And one in the London area which saw six persons die in a two-car collision.

A three-year-old boy, suffering from shock and unable to tell police his name, was the only survivor of the accident encompassing the tragedy of the six others burned beyond recognition, and leaving unspoken the calamity of a child's desperate loss and uncertain future.

And yet, governments and police should step up counter measures, the driver remains the principal arbiter of life and death on the highways, and the toll of the speed is here, and the degree of attention he gives to his driving, he and others may live or they may die. It is as simple as that.

Production the Key

When it comes to producing more goods, which is what is needed to combat inflation, we should look to the example of China. Such is the view of President Ford. He told an Ohio State University audience recently that the free-enterprise system is being challenged by disciplined and highly-motivated young Chinese dedicated to transforming their country into a major industrial power. The question is, does the West have the will — to mention Canada here, that kind of discipline and motivation nowadays, to go along with the professional and technological skills that thus far have given them the edge in world commerce?

Bad Egg

The fate of all those Canadian eggs would be comical if it were not an incident of sheer bureaucratic inefficiency and confusion. But let's take heart — literally — there could be some side benefits in there being that much less cholesterol around. Yes the whole egg is said to be a bearer of this fatty compound which strains the physique and especially the heart. Indeed it is almost like back to wartime conditions with manufacturer's plugging egg substitutes.

Small Investors Losing

The Great Economic Debate: Will There Be a Depression?

By VINCENT EGAN
Business and Consumer Affairs Analyst
Thompson News Service

Exactly 45 years ago, stock markets in North America came to the end of the greatest upside in history—and the Great Crash began.

Is history repeating itself?

Yes, say some investment men, who can fiagle price definers and the like, and come up with a greater percentage decline for 1929-31 than for 1973-74.

No, say others, who contend that the recent decline has been greatly exaggerated and will soon be reversed.

In the middle are the millions of small investors who have seen their paper profits vanish and their nerves jangle upset.

All indications are that most of them—badly burned and disillusioned—have lost confidence in the stock market and prefer to remain on the sidelines for the time being.

Stockbrokers decry this attitude as short-sighted. They advise buying now while prices are relative to current earnings—than they have been, for decades.

The prime buying opportunities, they say, coincide with periods of public pessimism and a lengthy decline in stock values—says Bongard Leslie and Co. Ltd. in its current investment letter.

The brokers could be right. But consumers with the past, are never easy nor exact.

The period leading up to the 1929 crash, for instance, was one of relative stability in most economic and financial indicators—in sharp contrast to today's demoralizing Superinflation.

And while today's corporate earnings may theoretically justify much higher stock prices, investors are interested in future earnings. Their collective opinion seems to be that earnings are likely to collapse under the weight of uncontrolled inflation in the costs of labor and raw materials.

But even setting aside contingent fears about earnings, investors are still faced with a public policy that's decidedly hostile to business and investment.

Corporations are harassed with confiscatory taxes (in Canada's natural-resources industries) and with half-baked concepts such as the federal anti-profiteering bill.

Any gains an investor may make on stocks is taxed as income—despite the basic difference between taking a percentage risk with one's savings, and working for steady, assured wages.

People eventually learn to accommodate themselves to their circumstances. Investors and businessmen can only try to make the best of today's situation. But the government has made it plain that it isn't interested in checking inflation or in abandoning its anti-investment policies.

One key to the market outlook for the months immediately ahead is the trend in short-term interest rates.

A significant decline in these rates would signal a move expansionary period for business, and could generate a recovery in stock prices.

But the seasonal pattern is that commercial demand for credit rises to an annual peak starting in September in anticipation of the Christmas trade. That could rule out any early easing of interest rates.

"Selectivity" is one of those safe, cliche words one of stock-market advisors used. It was never more essential than today.

In the view of some analysts, one relatively promising group is the industrial raw-material sector, because declining inventories seem to be signalling further shortages of aluminum, copper, steel and newsprint.

"That's my boy — obviously a future NHL star!"

PC Leadership: As Many As Eleven Possible Starters

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — So okay, let's look quickly over the 11 possible candidates the Conservative caucus could field two years from now in the race for the leadership.

The caucus, that is the Conservatives in the Commons, 95 MPs, range from Alan Lenongah Lett they could be interchangeable with the New Democrats, to those so far Right that they view moderate Robert Stanfield as a bit of a socialist.

A wildly varied bunch, but perhaps the very breadth of the socio-economic opinion is the basic strength of Conservatism. And also most of the time and united usually only in the pinches, the caucus this time is solid in its determination that the new leader will come from within its ranks. For except in the case of former Prime Minister Diefenbaker, the caucus, since the days of Richard Bedford Bennett, has had leadership thrust upon it from the "outside" by the party panjandrums.

But if there is talent of leadership among the Conservatives with a working knowledge of federal politics and Parliament, it has to be resident in the caucus and no other place.

So who, then, are the 11 potential candidates among the 95 MPs who form Conservatives, or Democrats, to those so far Right that they view moderate Robert Stanfield as a bit of a socialist.

A wildly varied bunch, but perhaps the very breadth of the socio-economic opinion is the basic strength of Conservatism.

Flora MacDonald, 38, United Church clergyman; married, nine years in the House, on the left in the Commons, inventive — he broke new campaign ground with an election trailer — personable if over-assertive to criticism, a left winger of genuine conviction.

From Nova Scotia Robert Coates, 52, lawyer, married, two children, in Parliament since 1967, enormously able, intensely active. An instinct for going for the Liberal jugular, deadly with questions revealing government waste and extravagance. A gifted Trudeau-baiter, makes news and relishes the clash and clamor of the Commons.

In New Brunswick, Gordon Fallwewather, 51, lawyer, former professor of political geography, married, three children, in Parliament 8 years, generally regarded as one of the best brains in the House. A reformer of independent mind enough to put personal conviction ahead of political expediency, for enough to the Left to be comfortable with the NDP.

Claude Wagner, of Quebec, a former hard-living provincial attorney general, with a firm enough sense of law and order that he could defy separatist hoodlums and use force to crush their apocalyptic rioters during a royal visit. A handsome, family man with three children, in public 19 years. Charismatic. A prop and pillar of the Right.

In Ontario, Walter Baker, Sinclair Stevens and Allan Lawrence, in Parliament only two years, but still, standouts.

Baker, 44, lawyer, married, three children. Able, personable, talented, tough but disciplined parliamentarian. Enjoys politics. The only Conservative east of the Manitoba border to consistently top 50% in his constituency. Right of centre.

Allan Lawrence, lawyer, married, two children, in Ontario legislature 14 years, four of them as Speaker. Excellent parliamentarian, aggressive, ambitious.

Sinclair Stevens, 47, lawyer, business executive, handsome, attractive, articulate. A young Long active in political organization, clever, a conservative Conservative.

From Alberta a pair of veterans of the Diefenbaker leadership of 1956 Jack Horner and Eldon Woollams.

Jack Horner, 47, married, five children, a rancher, a forceful boy and proud of it. Hugely vigorous, ruggedly handsome, smart, analytical mind, a reasoned and seasoned speaker always worth the listening. Easy, relaxed, nice sense of humor. A private enterprise if there ever was one, a real firmly on the Right.

Woollams, 58, married, two children, a lawyer, skilled parliamentarian, first class speaker with a huge voice. Excellent, ably declared himself in the running for leader. A big, handsome redhead with a ready wit. Personable, popular. Firmly on the Right, except for being a confirmed abolitionist of capital punishment.

From the West Coast, John Fraser, 43, married, three children, a lawyer, in Commons only two years, but already a man to watch. Middle of the road.

Cuba's Long Political Isolation May Be Ending

By PETER BUCKLEY

WASHINGTON (CP) — The 10-year-long isolation of Cuba from its Western Hemisphere neighbors is drawing steadily toward a close, with what appears to be the resigned blessing of President Ford.

Ford's public comments on the issue have been deliberately cautious. He has said the United States, acting "in concert with" Latin American allies, will be ready to change its policy if Fidel Castro's regime does changes.

However while the statement was on its face, it was seen by Latin diplomats here as a distinct about-face from the unforgiving hostility of former president Richard Nixon.

It has given new life to the manoeuvres and intrigues at Rogers's nomination has been welcomed as well in the state department, whose staff sees him as a knowledgeable expert and provocative thinker.

Besides pressing for more American flexibility toward Cuba, Rogers can be expected to exert greater continuity and initiative from the U.S. toward South America and the Caribbean partners—replacing the on-again, off-again attitudes that have characterized American policy under a succession of recent presidents.

The Cuban issue represents an early opportunity for President Ford to demonstrate a clean break with his predecessor in foreign policy.

Richard Nixon's chief successes were in foreign affairs, where his bold initiatives with China and the Soviet Union have left a durable mark.

But Nixon had a blind spot on Cuba. Influenced by his close friend Bebe Rebozo and others in the fiercely anti-Castro community of Cuban exiles in the U.S., he balked at ending the isolation of Cuba despite the growing trend in Latin America toward restoring relations with the communist island.

Cuba has been under boycott since 1964, when her attempts to export revolution to Venezuela and elsewhere provoked the OAS to retaliate. In 1973, a group of Latin states tried to lift the boycott revealed by the OAS and were defeated, but the movement has since gathered steam.

"I' a man row a row unto the Lord, and walk with his God in bird his soul with a book: he shall not break his word, he shall do according to all that proceedeth out of his mouth." Numbers 30:2

So many of us have said things that we didn't mean, and yet have meant a lot of things we said but never followed through. The word will surely keep His promises to us and we should all take lightly the commitments we make to Him.

LOOKING BACKWARD

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FILES OF BYGONE YEARS

40 YEARS AGO

September 9, 1934

Cannot see anything to stop Mackenzie King. It is the only industry at the moment that seems to possess any stability and sureness of profit. In addition with the world conditions as they are we face another period of uncertain money and fluctuating currencies and such a condition makes for scared money. Scared money's only refuge today is gold.

50 YEARS AGO

September 9, 1924

About 60 members of Holloway Street Church League enjoyed a drive to Foxboro last evening and furnished a program. In a debate, resolved "That the influence of women for good is greater than that of man", the affirmative was taken by Mr. Terry and Mr. Poulter and the negative by Mr. Hamilton and Mr. Stokes. The motion was lost.

Letters

Hospital Praised

Editor,
The Intelligencer:

May I, through the medium of your newspaper, say a few words in praise of the doctors, nurses and staff of the Belleville General Hospital.

Last Saturday I had occasion to be rushed to the emergency of the Hospital and from the moment I went through the door, until I was discharged on the subsequent Monday, I was treated with such kindness and consideration by everyone I came into contact with, from the Doctors and nurses through the radiologists, orderlies and cleaners. Everyone without exception, went out of their way to be helpful, friendly and cheerful, all with a pleasant smile as if a happy face. I can well see why Belleville is aptly named, "The Friendly City."

I can not begin to name any of them individually, but I hope in this manner that they will accept it as my sincere thanks to a wonderful group of people, who are so obviously dedicated to doing a great job.

I will long remember my short stay in Belleville General Hospital. May God bless them all.

Potter Property

Editor,
The Intelligencer:

As an outside observer may I express my opinion regarding the Potter property as reported Aug. 9 in The Intelligencer, of 1866 Jack Horner and Eldon Woollams.

Such a hostel would in all likelihood follow the pattern of similar projects in other cities, attracted undesirables persons with no respect for the rights of others. Within a few years the facility would deteriorate to such an extent that no sane person would remain would be a haven for drug addicts and the drug abusing type of individual resulting in the necessity of continual police surveillance. This would definitely destroy the prospect of a reasonably overnight camping ground being developed at this site.

This resort has been operated by the Potter family in a manner very much admired many years and is one of the few peaceful spots left in the area. All this will be lost if the varied properties envisaged are brought to reality.

I personally would rather see this property remain as it is and continue to be operated as an overnight camping ground by the surviving Potter family, which I believe is Mr. Potter's wish.

Teacher Programs

Editor,
The Intelligencer:

I was pleased to read that Hastings County teachers, have studied "Future Shock" author Alvin Toffler to be the speaker at their upcoming development days.

This whole business of so-called development days is reaching such proportions that it should be stopped or if it is being held at the taxpayers' expense.

With the frightening figures of 1 in every 7 in Canada now on the pay role as a civil servant of some sort or other, it's time well paid professionals played their philosophical games at their own expense and in their own time.

It is doubtful anyway if anything of benefit to the taxpayers emerges from these jolly get-togethers.

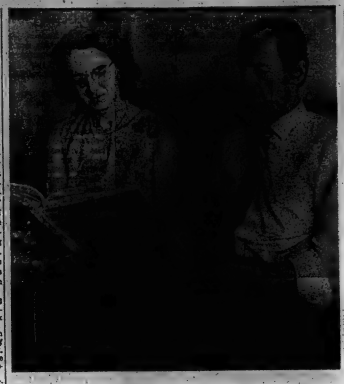
Blacks' Revenge Cults Rejected



BUFFALO (AP) — The president of the U.S.-National Baptist Convention said Thursday that black people should reject "black" success and black political conventions if they exclude other American citizens.

"We should not be guilty of harboring among ourselves the same vicious evils against others which we labored so long and hard to destroy," said Dr. Joseph Jackson of Chicago in an address to 20,000 delegates attending the convention's 96th annual meeting.

The convention says it has 6.3 million members and represents one-quarter of the black population of the United States.

"Negro Americans," Jackson said, "should reject the 'cult of revenge' in which people think, and work to get revenge from those who were once oppressors of the weak.

"We should not allow ourselves to be used by those native members of movements to divide, weaken and destroy our democracy. We must reject members of our race who strive to excite a return to segregation and discrimination and have taken a stand against integration."

Lutheran Theologians Answer Popular Sayings

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — "After all, aren't we all just taking different roads to the same place?"

"God helps those who help themselves."

"You can't mix religion and politics".

"The Bible says . . ."

These common expressions are cited by a Lutheran Church in America theological team as "some of the confusions" in beliefs found among members in a denomination-wide study.

"We must try to work through them," the report says, through discovering any attempt to "judge hearsies." It offers observations intended to counterbalance the various sayings cited as misleading, including:

Saying: "The Bible says . . ."

Comment: "The 'Bible says' can awful lot of things, ranging . . . from the chapter on love in 1st Corinthians 13 to the suggestion that babies of enemies be smashed against a rock (Psalm 137:9). To quote the Bible as truth in all details is to weaken its over-all truth. . . .

"God comes to us only . . . 'in earthen vessels' . . . The Bible is not God's Word. The Bible is an earthly book through which the living word of God flows full and free . . . The Word is heard in both divinely inspired and humanly written."

Saying: "After all, aren't we all just taking different roads to the same place?"

Comment: "Respect for the rights of others is good. Learning from others is good. But the thought that one religion is as good as another is not good. To have just a religion in general is to be unfaithful to God . . .

"All religions may have moral rights, but this doesn't mean they are all equally right . . . The church confesses that Christ is the way . . . Christians can learn about life from the teachings of others so long as they do not give up their relationship with God in Christ."

Saying: "God helps those who help themselves."

Comment: "A strong streak of independence runs through all of us . . . We don't want to accept forgiveness as totally free . . . We want to show God . . . (However), God accepts us the way we are, not because we have proven ourselves, but because Christ is for us. . . . We are taken as is. . . .

"Because God already accepts us, all we need to do is accept the acceptance."

Saying: "The church should stick to saving souls."

Comment: "Many people believe as the ancient Greeks did that a human being is made of two parts, a body which is bad and will die, and a soul which is good and will live forever . . . Christians believe God created humans whole and complete in one person and that creation is good.

"Christians believe Jesus is true human as well as true God. . . . To say the church should have nothing to do with physical life is to deny the humanity of Christ and the creation of God."

Saying: "You can't mix religion and politics."

Comment: "Baptism elects us for special service in the world, not special rewards in heaven. We are to be the salt of the earth, the food, the yeast that leaves the dough . . . We are to become even more involved in politics as a result of our baptism. . . . The Spirit works constantly in us trying to get us to do more and more of His holy work in the world."

Sense of Reverence Necessary for Worship

By Dr. Gordon C. Smyth

Some time ago, I watched Billy Graham being interviewed on television. The subject of religion came up. Did I believe in God? Of course not. How could he believe in "God" who played hide-and-seek with mortals, never showing himself?

Mr. Sinclair's comments were cool and confident. But I felt sorry for him. Anybody who requires something spectacular to make him wonder loses the capacity to find the full answer to the wonder of being.

A sense of awe, reverence or wonder is a precondition of wisdom. You did not fall in love with your mind alone. Your appendix could be displayed in a bottle, but not your emotions. The intuitive or spiritual interpretation of experience is a valid road to truth. Thus the Psalmist wrote, "I believe that I shall see the goodness of the Lord in the land of the living" (Psalm 27:13).

Beauty is a sign, seal and symbol of God's goodness. Dr. Wernher von Braun has played a major role in America's space program. He affirms, "There is certainly no scientific reason why God cannot r tain the position that people 1 ve'd before we began probing 10- ersion with telescope and cyclotron." The ancient words of Psalm 8 prove to strike a response chord on a starlit night.

Where else can we "see the goodness of the Lord in the land of the living"? Within nature is human nature. Its love is another sign, seal and symbol. Those who know most about it have been followers, not of Sigmund Freud nor Karl Marx but of Jesus Christ.

Such a person was George Matheson, one of Scotland's greatest authors and preachers. And yet at the very summit of his manhood the appalling fact forced him that he would have to go through life with loss of sight. Why should the innocent suffer? Why should a catastrophe of blindness, altogether undeserved, befall him? These and similar questions that test a man's faith recurred to him with overwhelming force at this time.

His illustrious later life was to write one of our favorite proof that Dr. George Matheson. O Love that will not let me go.

To believe its message, come what may, is to enter the Holy holies, to discover the secret of Christianity, and to rejoice in "the goodness of the Lord in the land of the living."

Saying: "Have you accepted Jesus as your personal saviour?"

Comment: "We can become so zealous for redemption that we no longer appreciate the creation or the sanctification of life here in this world. . . . Jesus is God's word made flesh. . . . When we place too much stress on the 'decision' for Christ . . . we begin to believe that salvation depends on our will to decide . . . But we believe God takes the initiative."

Kids' Bike Seats Will Be Studied

The Canadian Medical Association and the federal department of consumer and corporate affairs each plan to investigate some added to adult bicycles to take baby along for the ride.

The department of consumer affairs expects receiving no specific complaints but said a letter had been received from an Ottawa physician who related the case of a five-year-old patient seriously injured while riding in one of the seats.

Dr. Glen Cooperman said the girl was riding on the back of her father's bicycle when the man swerved to avoid hitting a pedestrian. Strapped into the seat, the girl fell to the pavement with the bicycle and suffered a fractured skull.

Dr. Cooperman said he is calling manufacturers of bolt-on seats but that there is no way to protect a child from such a bicycle passenger.

"It's just the nature of a bicycle," he said.

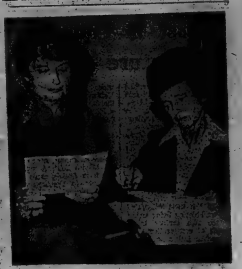
In connection with the municipal day care centre, the city of Kitchener has organized a private home day care program.

Already providing homes for 100 children in need, the regional program is designed to find good, safe day care homes for children of working parents.

Children who attend registered private day care homes can be subsidized by the municipality just as children who attend the day care centre.



Requirements for a registered day care home include an inspection of the home and medical examination of the person who will care for the children.

Limitation is five young children, no experience like nursing or previous child raising experience, and physical requirements like fire and ill telephone, sleeping accommodation and heating for each child, safe indoor and outdoor play areas.

Participating homes can get toys, books and equipment from the centre and centre personnel are available for assistance and consultation.

Both participating child care workers most of whom have cared for children in their homes before — and parents are pleased with the program.

Parents are reassured that their children are in good, safe homes and the child care workers are happy with the assistance they get from the municipal centre.

Ann Landers

Do Dentures Ruin Romance?

Dear Ann Landers: I am a woman 43 years of age and considered good looking. I've always had trouble with my teeth and confess I haven't taken care of them properly. Now the dentist tells me I must have a complete extraction, which means every tooth in my head has got to come out. According to him I have a bad infection of the gums which could ruin my whole system. He says it's the best way, because the few teeth that I would have left after pulling the bad ones would make replacement impossible.

I'd rather die than go through life with false teeth. I'm sure I will look old and I hate the idea. Also, I was recently divorced and I'm afraid a woman with dentures would have a harder time getting married.

A friend of mine who had dentures made last year claims it ruined her romance because it killed her sex drive. She was afraid to kiss the man she was going with, and he finally dropped her. Please advise.—Yea Or Nay?

Dear Y.: If you don't believe your dentist, get another opinion.

As for "looking old" and having your sex life damaged, I'm sure plenty of people with dentures have better sex lives than they had when they were walking around with teeth that should have been extracted.

Dear Ann Landers: Will you print this beautiful poem for parents who have a very "special child"? It struck me as the most moving and supportive thing I had ever read. I'm sure it will mean a great deal to those who have "special" children. Thank you, in advance.—Your friend, Essex Kapcicat.

Dear Essex: I agree. The poem is beautiful. Here it is. Hope I'm not stealing it on.

Heaven's Very Special Child

A meeting was held quite far from Earth.
It's time again for another birth.
Said the angels to the Lord Above,
"This special child will need much love.
His progress may seem very slow.
Accomplishments he may not show.
And he'll require extra care
From the folks he meets way down there.
He may not run or laugh or play;
His thoughts may seem quite far away.
In many ways he won't adapt,
And he'll be known as handicapped.
So he'll be careful where he's sent.
We want his life to be content.
Please, Lord, find parents who will be special job for you.
They will not realize right away
The leading role they're asked to play.
But with this child sent from above
Comes stronger faith and richer love.
And soon they'll know the privilege given
In caring for this gift from Heaven.
Their precious charge, to meek and mild
Is Heaven's very special child."—Author Unknown

Persons confined to the limited life of a nursing home would be bound to appreciate tapes designed especially for them.

'Women's Equality Soon Reality'

OTTAWA (CP) — Hervi Lalonen Shaffa is so committed to full equality for women in the world that she has left her family in Finland while she pursues her ideal through the United Nations in New York.

"A wasn't an easy decision for me to make," she said in an interview Thursday, explaining why she left home two years ago to accept a appointment as UN assistant secretary-general for social and humanitarian affairs.

An ardent family lawyer in her own country, she is here for a UN conference on women's rights which attracted delegates from more than 30 countries.

The conference, a scene-setter for 1975—decreed by the UN as International Women's Year, is designed to examine how national and regional machinery may be created to bring about full equality for women. It began Wednesday and continues to close, workshops through Sept. 17.

For Ms. Sipila — the conference is clear evidence of the progress made by women in their seemingly endless fight for full equality.

Ironically, she said she has had to overcome the personal obstacle of never having had her equality challenged.

Three children have sparingly with male cousins, competing with them at their level.

Ms. Sipila practises her own law office in Helsinki in 1942, the only practising woman in a country that has been relatively progressive as far as its women are concerned. The law practice flourished and eventually employed four other attorneys.

Since 1958, she has participated on numerous Finnish committees dealing with family law and from 1962 to 1966 and again in 1971 and 1972 represented Finland on the UN's Commission on the Status of Women. She was commissioner from 1962 to 1966 and chairman in 1967.

When Kurt Waldheim became UN secretary-general in 1972 and decided he wanted a woman in his executive, Ms. Sipila was recommended by her own government. "almost before I knew about it."

She feels equality in the full-est sense of the word will be a global reality for women before the end of the 20th century, largely because of work being done in many countries by the UN and other agencies.

She said great strides have been made in Asia and Africa, thanks to UN work. Fresh interpretation of the Koran has allowed progress in Moslem countries.

In Persia, for example, polygamy has been abolished, although strict interpretation of the Koran permits it. Women have been allowed to drop the veil in Iran.

Ms. Sipila said the main weapon, ie., education, and reliance on the mass media, particularly radio and television, which she said have been invaluable in telling women about their rights.

Successful Living

Ideas for Elderly

By DORIS CLARK

Dear Doris: Elderly people in nursing homes should be found interesting things to do. I visited one where the "activities" consisted of tossing a light ball around and similar things which I felt were not just suitable for the elderly patients. I offered to present this place with cassette tape recordings and music but though my suggestion was not overly well received, since they have a TV and phonograph, offering "similar entertainment."

These cassettes can be used for recording stories, instructions, games, or anything else which can be presented orally. The nurse's aide who wrote in would be welcome to use I have on hand, since she was looking for ideas. There is a phone-in talk show called The Nitecaps Association (NIA) which broadcasts over WEAS (940 on the dial) from midnight to 1:00 a.m. e.s.t. This is a non-controversial show through which lonely people can have someone to talk with.

Nitecaps publish WICK magazine every second month, providing, among other things, the names of penpals as a way of building up a friendly group. Where six or more Nitecap members live, they may form a Nightstand (or Daystand). These organizations devote themselves to the unfortunate and the elderly, with nursing homes often becoming centres of Nitecap activities. Three times a year the NIA sets host and air tours for their members at group prices. The WICK is $5. annually, plus a supplementary pen pal list at $3.95 Box 98, Salt Lake City, Utah.

Please do not assume that I am trying to sell the Nitecaps to you. I merely thought that members of that association, having 18 years of experience, may be able to offer invaluable help for anyone eager to serve.

I tape a reading from WICK magazine for a "d number in Louisiana. At 68, I feel too young to become involved in the local seniors club (with euchre every meeting and occasional bus trips). I feel that I have more to offer and having the time and not much money, wish to make my declining years worth while.

Cultural Exchange Surface at Conference

OTTAWA (CP) — Fundamental differences are surfacing at cultural delegates to a United Nations conference on women's rights, which began here Wednesday.

Some Mali delegates agree on desired ends, cultural values are making it difficult to reach agreement on means.

"Indonesian women look at life beyond the self," says Philippine delegate Leticia Shahani.

"They want rights and equality but not at the expense of their husbands or children. Western women are more individualistic.

The philosophic conflict, she says, arises from the deep-rooted differences between industrialized and less-developed nations.

Women do not want to come forward and complain about employers not extending materially more to less developed nations, because they might lose their job due to the high rate of unemployment, Mrs. Shahani said.

The Mali delegation told the conference of backward customs in their country, which still influence the court rulings.

Artist is Gloomy On Future of Man

VILLENEUVE, Switzerland (AP) — "Art is dead," said Oskar Kokoschka as he smoked cigarette, ignoring the gesticulated plea from his wife to slow down on smoking.

"Pictorial art is completely dead," he repeated. "Literature also has suffered enough. And music? Just listen to a modern career. Everything has become experiment. In art you need ideas, not experiments.

"In some, such views from one of the most celebrated and trail-blazing living artists of the 20th century might smack of conservatism. But Kokoschka insists he has no desire to try to stay what he feels is a natural process.

"I face the facts and I accept them," he explained. These "facts" are just added evidence that man is doomed.

"This is my situation: I would like to live at least 200 years. I would like to be the last one sitting on a tree so I can watch. I know that I would be doomed as well. But I would like to know how the end will come," he said, eyes aglow.

The gloomy words from the 88-year-old painter-poet contrasted with his sprightly style and with the vivid colors with which he described a hummingbird or a lily. He also — he prefers to call them "life impressions."

Kokoschka — one of the founders of modern expressionism — was recently interviewed in the book-lined living room of his villa on the outskirts of Villeneuve, a peaceful vine-growing town on Lake Geneva, about 50 km by the Vaudois Alps. His petite, dark-haired wife, Olda, two more were on canals in the adjoining garden, and appeared to an idyllic garden with a cherry tree, roses, lavender. But for Kokoschka, he is not dependent on this environment.

"The world to whitshe vie. "The world to which I have a relationship remains as far as I can see or walk. If it is taken away from me, I still possession of something else. I never cry over a loss. I have always been a nomad."

The Austrian-born son of a Prague goldsmith has lodged on the moves for much of his life. In Vienna, starting point of his career, after his bold and slashing style of pictorial expression and erotic play he had written touched off a scandal.

The rupture of a passionate love affair with Alma Mahler, widow of composer Gustav Mahler, sent him rushing to the Austro-Russian front as a First World War volunteer cavalry man. A Russian bullet narrowly missed his brain and a bayonet pierced his chest.

After the war, he travelled widely in Europe, Africa and the Middle East. A rightist putsch in Austria made emigrate to Czechoslovakia. The atrocities of Hitlerism, who denounced him as a "degenerate artist," but had his paintings sold abroad rather than destroy them, made him move to London.

Villeneuve has been his base since 1953, but he has continued to travel. He has spent 11 summers in Salzburg, Austria, teaching students from more than two dozen countries in an art academy he named Schule des Sehens, School of Vision.

The list of honorary and townscapes he has done in the last half-century attests to his wanderings. They range from Jerusalem, a "really beautiful picture," to New York, a "city without face but with dynamism."

He has never painted from memory; "I have to hold on to the visual impression until I have finished squeezing it like a lemon."

In recent years, his emphasis has been on allegorical compositions. He also has continued doing the psychological portraits that gained special attention when he was still in his 20s.

Olda, Mefr. Agatha Christie, Pope Pius XII, Pablo Casals and Konrad Adenauer have been among his "victims," as he calls them. So have a score of emergent European and American.

While he often had to turn down people who wanted to be painted. "I can't paint someone sitting in front of me opening him up like a tin," he explains.

One whom he did not want to paint was conductor Arturo Toscanini.

"He looked to me like a shivering cat. I think he had a metronome inserted instead of a heart."

But there were also some who refused to accept the finished painting because they felt they looked "stunned alive" on the canvas, as one critic wrote.

He works resolutely for at least four hours, usually starting at 5 in the morning with a slug of scotch. "I need the whisky," he said. "It's my spokesman. He says he wants to restore public confidence in big business and says the oil industry has nothing to hide. (CP Photo)

Many Montrealers Speak Three Tongues

MONTREAL (CP) — People neither French or English living in this cosmopolitan city are likely to be trilingual.

They want to be Canadian but we don't want to forget our origins.

For most, "keeping the culture," as it's called, begins with learning the language, then moves on to literature, folk tradition, history and geography.

Almost every ethnic group in the city has some kind of educational program for its children. Classes are supported by a combination of the province's bilingualism experiment, parents' groups, church organizations and, in some cases, foreign governments.

For example, Socrates Schoolon, a Greek elementary day-school which dates back to the 1930s, used to be run strongly by the Greek Orthodox Church. The program was heavy on Greek and English and light on French.

Three years ago the school shifted to a predominantly French curriculum with substantial Greek and only a touch of English in return for 80 per cent funding from Quebec. As a result kindergarten was added as well.

For many immigrants, ethnic schools serve the primary function of enforcing their cultural origin.

For others, immigrant schools provide insurance their children will be able to take the appropriate school grade should they return home.

Still another reason for the schools is to bridge the various cultural and communications gaps between old country parents and their Canadian-born children.

"Some Italian children would have a very hard time communicating with their parents," said Alfer Di Filippo, administrator of a Saturday morning program in Montreal North.

Gulf's Texas-Irish Hip-shooter Speaks out for Oil Industry

TORONTO (CP) — When the petroleum industry was caught in the federal-provincial crossfire over sharing of tax revenues, Jerry McAfee was one man who got upset.

It was an understandable reaction for the president of Gulf Oil Canada Ltd.

But unlike many corporation executives, Mr. McAfee did not sit fuming in his French-fries office at Toronto headquarters while lieutenants were dispatched to carry the word.

Instead he mounted a series of speaking engagements in Eastern Canada and the Maritimes to criticize sharply the governments and vigorously defend the industry.

"Unfortunately, the Canadian oil industry today is caught at the home of intension in the middle of a ludicrous tug-of-war between the federal and various provincial governments," Mr. McAfee said at the time.

"Instead of working out realistic solutions on an intergovernmental basis in the interests of Canada as a whole, they each take another bite out of what is already a badly bitten industry.

"While the industry, for its part has demonstrated its willingness to co-operate with every reasonable request of governments, I, for one, do not think it should be the role of industry to try to resolve conflicting, overlapping and sometimes deliberately preemptive government policies."

Talk such as that has earned Jerry McAfee the label of the "Texas-Irish hip-shooter" but also a reputation as one of the industry's most articulate and effective spokesmen.

Yet it is in the area of communications that Mr. McAfee suggests that both he and the industry could be doing a much better job.

"We've been so badly misunderstood in spite of our best efforts in the past," he said in an interview. "We've got to find a better way of getting our story over, a better way of communicating with people and with governments."

A five years Mr. Gulf Canada president, Mr. McAfee, 57, has made a point of carrying his message in his easy southern drawl to anyone who cares to listen.

He has addressed himself to the industry's traditional problems-security of future oil supplies, exploration, prices, the Arctic mainland and more recently to—satisfaction, the environment, intergovernment disputes, and the world-wide energy crisis.

What he has said has not been all that unusual. His stand on the industry's problems are those universally voiced by the industry.

But in these uncertain times Mr. McAfee is concerned that an erosion of public confidence in big business and big government.

For his part he wants to restore confidence in business by open the federal and various provincial governments. Mr. McAfee said at the time.

some displeasure and then, like the seasoned politician, successfully sidestep the question with some verbal maneuvering.

His company, 93.5-per-cent owned by Gulf Oil Corp., of Pittsburgh, Pa., is the country's second largest refiner. It has a network of sales of refined products and natural gas and found its production of crude oil and natural gas liquids rose 10%.

Gulf accounts for 20 per cent of Canadian refining capacity, has 10,000 direct employees and 7,000 outlets including bulk plants, distributorships, and service stations.

After more than 30 years as an oil man, it's hard to separate the man from the industry.

His association with Gulf began with his father who spent more than 40 years in Gulf labs as a research scientist. Jerry McAfee grew up in Port Arthur, Texas, with a Gulf refinery in his back yard.

His high school and university vacations were spent rolling barrels in the refinery for 40 cents an hour.

He received a degree in chemical engineering from University of Texas and a doctorate from Massachusetts Institute of Technology in 1951. He spent the war years with a small independent working on the design and start-up of aviation gasoline plants. In 1945, he returned to Port Arthur to "put down roots" with Gulf.

That lasted about five years until he eventually started moving around, spending much of his time in research and development. He holds 17 U.S. patents.

He moved to Canada in 1967 as a executive vice-president and in 1969 was appointed chief executive officer.

His climb up the corporate ladder was probably in part due to two personal characteristics he exhibits. One, he is somewhat decisive by his colleagues, offering a "sense of purpose," and he exudes optimism.

"I'm a great believer that each individual has a certain contribution to make at a given time and a given place and it's up to us to make the best contribution we can," he said.

So when is a person successful?

"The only measure of development is within a person," Mr. McAfee said. "And if he gets satisfaction, genuine satisfaction, out of what he is doing then he is a success, no matter what his particular role in life turns out to be.

"The measure of a man's success is the degree to which deep down in his heart he has been of some service to his fellow man."

Unless a person can feel at the end of the day he has done something for other people, that person might as well have not got up in the morning, Mr. McAfee said.

Head down, he passes for Detection and then adds with a wide grin: "It's a great business to be in and I wouldn't be anywhere else."

Ways Studied To Beat Threat Of Icebergs

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — Oil rigs operating off Canada's East Coast may soon be able to protect themselves better from the ever-present hazard of icebergs.

Data being gathered at Memorial University on the movement and modelling of iceberg drift will ultimately be of considerable benefit to operators of the drilling platforms.

Neil Riggs, project manager of field studies off the Labrador coast, said the information gathered may be useful now.

He said a basic system has been devised to allow rig operators to track the approach of an iceberg to determine its course as it nears the drill site.

Essentially the system involves the regular monitoring of ocean currents and other factors. Mr. Riggs feels the accumulation of additional data would produce a relatively accurate tracking plan.

But it is the rig operator's responsibility to investigate ocean currents, the sea bed and weather conditions in the drill site.

Meanwhile experiments are under way at the Bedford Institute of Oceanography in Dartmouth, N.S., to determine the feasibility of towing icebergs.

Tug boats might be used to tow icebergs to avoid collisions with rigs.

Artist is Gloomy On Future of Man

VILLENEUVE, Switzerland (AP) — "Art is dead," said Oskar Kokoschka as he puffed on after cigarette, ignoring the sputtered pleas from his wife to slow down on smoking.

"Pictorial art is completely dead," he repeated. "Like a store also has suffered strength. And music? Just listen to a modern concert. Everything has become experiment. In art you need ideas, not experiments."

To some, such views from one of the most celebrated and trail-blazing living artists of the 20th century might smack of conservatism. But Kokoschka insists he has no desire to try to stay what he feels is a natural progression.

"I race the bulls, and I accept them," he explained. These "facts" are just added evidence that man is doomed.

"This is my situation: I would like to live at least 200 years. I would like to be the last one sitting on a tree so I can watch bees that I would be doomed as well. But I would like to know how the last evil creature in an explorer."

The gloomy words from the 88-year-old painter-poet contrasted with his sprightly vigor and with the vivid colors with which he described a hummingbird, one of his obsessions—he prefers to call them "His hummers."

Kokoschka, one of the founders of modern expressionism, was recently interviewed in the book-lined living room of his villa on the outskirts of Villeneuve, a peaceful vine-growing town on Lake Geneva at the foot of the Vaudois Alps. His paintings hang in the atelier. Two more were on easels in the adjoining studio. The windows opened to an idyllic garden with a cherry tree, roses, lavender. But he seemed blind to it as it dependent on this environment.

"The world to whitehe vie "The world to which I have a relationship ceases as soon as I can see or walk. If it is taken away from me, I take possession of something else. I never cry over a loss. I have always been a nomad."

The Austrian-born son of a Prague goldsmith has labored been on the move for much of his life. In 1907 Vienna, the big point of his career, after his bold and startling style of painting and poetry shocked world play he had written touched off a scandal.

The rupture of a passionate love affair with Alma Mahler, widow of composer Gustav Mahler, sent him rushing to the Austro-Russian front as a First World War volunteer cavalry man. A Russian bullet narrowly missed his brain and a bayonet pierced his chest.

After the war, he travelled widely in Europe, Africa and the Middle East. A rightist, patch in Austria made him emigrate to Czechoslovakia. The arrival of Adolf Hitler, who denounced him as a "degenerate artist", but had his paintings sold abroad or even thus destroy them, made him move to London.

Villeneuve hah been his base since 1953, but he has continued to travel. He has spent 11 summers in Salzburg, Austria, teaching students from more than two dozen countries in an art academy he named Schule des Sehens, School of Vision.

The days of long sojourns and townscapes he has done in the last half-century attests to his wanderings. They range from Jerusalem, a "really beautiful picture," to New York, a 85-69-74 61.7 best city" without face but with dynamism."

He has never painted from memory; "I have to bind on the visual impression until I have finished squeezing it like a lemon."

In recent years, his emphasis has been on allegorical compositions. He also has continued doing the psychological portraits that gained special attention when he was still in his 20s.

Golda Meir, Agatha Christie, Pope Pius XII, Pablo Casals and Konrad Adenauer have been among his "victims," as he calls them. So have a score of emergent Europeans and Americans.

He said he often had to turn down people who wanted to be painted. "I can't paint someone unless I succeed in opening him up like a tin," he explained.

One whom he did not want to paint was conductor Arturo Toscanini.

"He looked to me like a shivering dog. I think he had a metronome inserted instead of a heart."

But there were also some who refused to accept the finished painting because they felt they looked "skinned alive" on the canvas, as one critic wrote.

Kokoschka usually has at least four hours, usually starting at his 7 a.m. morning with a glug of scotch. "I need the whisky," he said. "It's my spokesman. He says he wants to renew public confidence in big business and says the oil industry has nothing to hide. (CP Photo)

Many Montrealers Speak Three Tongues

MONTREAL (CP) — People neither French or English living in this cosmopolitan city are likely to be trilingual.

While French and English are the dominant tongues in business, public schools and in the streets, thousands of children all over the city are learning Chinese, Italian, Armenian or Greek as well.

Members of Montreal's ethnic communities say whether they be the more recent arrivals such as Portuguese, Italians, Greeks and North African Jews; or from the longer-established groups such as Ukrainians, Russians or Poles—want to keep their culture alive and they feel an important way to do so is to maintain links with the language of the old country.

"We're very much attached to our traditions and we want to keep them alive," said Mrs. Anahid Markarian, an Armenian parent who teaches her native tongue in about 250 children on Saturdays.

"We want to be Canadian but we don't want to forget our origins."

For most, "keeping the culture," as it's called, begins with learning the language, then moves on to literature, folk tradition, history and geography.

Almost every ethnic group in the city has some kind of educational program for its children. Classes are supported by a combination of the provincial immigration department, parent groups, church organizations and, in some cases, foreign governments.

For example, Socrates Scholson, a Greek elementary day-school which dates back to the 1920s, used to be run although by the Greek Orthodox Church. The program was heavy on Greek and English and light on French.

For many immigrants, ethnic schools serve the primary function of enforcing their cultural origin.

For others, immigrant schools provide insurance their children will be able to enter the appropriate school grade should they return home.

Still another reason for the schools is to prevent serious cultural and communications gaps between old country parents and their Canadian-born children.

He said: "We've called this press conference to announce our 1973 earnings of which we are pretty much proud, not from being apologetic or negative. It's the other way around. We worked hard to achieve these results."

He went on to say that the figure that counted was the return on investment which was 10.1 per cent—a fair figure, he said, but by no means astounding.

Commenting, he stresses repeatedly, is the single most important factor in solving the problem.

"I don't know any way to answer your questions except straight on top of the table. If I don't know, I'll tell you right off the bat. If it is something we are not prepared to talk about, I'll tell you that too," he told visiting reporters.

Uncomfortable question. Normally genial and unassuming, he will frown a bit indicating some displeasure and then, like the seasoned politician, gamely sidestep the question with some verbal maneuvering.

Fight Looms Among Cabinet Over Eggs

OTTAWA (CP) — Federal cabinet members have rarely fought in public lately, but the current argument between Andre Ouellet and Eugene Whelan is about eggs—or has been carefully orchestrated.

It could signal a return to the days, when cabinet ministers, with a secure parliamentary majority, engaged in open bloodletting.

Mr. Ouellet is the young Quebec lawyer whose recent election to the consumer affairs portfolio followed an unsolicited two years as postmaster general.

Mr. Whelan is the canny Southwestern Ontario farmer who, as agriculture minister, prided a shrewd political mind behind a rugged rustic exterior.

Mr. Whelan literally ate his way across rural Ontario during the July election campaign, coming front row, outdoor barbeque in the next to deliver the crucial farm vote that helped restore Prime Minister Trudeau's Commons majority.

Mr. Ouellet had to do little more than let his name stand to win re-election in the solidly Liberal Montreal riding of Papineau.

Now the two are feuding. Mr. Whelan, the Progressive Conservative who set out to test the sensitivities of his cabinet colleagues with a trial balloon, emerged from the Food Prices Review Board, to her criticism of Mr. Whelan over egg pricing and marketing policies. Mr. Ouellet agreed with Mrs. Plumptre that the egg marketing system was a mess and said he supported her proposals that consumer representatives be named to egg marketing agencies.

Mr. Whelan responded by again declaring that Mrs. Plumptre knows little of what she's talking about and by dismissing the appeal for non-producer consumers on marketing boards.

Such bickering is a sign of virility in government, Mr. Trudeau told reporters.

"I'm very glad that Mr. Ouellet is fighting for consumers and Mr. Whelan is fighting for farmers," he said. "It's their jobs."

Sources say the whole burst of virility was planned at cabinet to give Mr. Ouellet a chance to divert the pressure of consumer complaints over high egg prices and to allow Mr. Whelan room to back off from his hard-line defence of egg producers.

They say Mr. Ouellet's prepared statement lamenting the Whelan attack on Mrs. Plumptre was rehashed on the minister's orders at least once to toughen the language.

And they add that Mr. Whelan, despite his public declarations of surprise at Mr. Ouellet's statement, knew about it and helped to advance it.

The feeling is that, with his regained parliamentary majority, Mr. Trudeau will condone but not encourage such public dissent among cabinet members on issues that have not been thoroughly explored into firm government policy.

During the 18 months that he clung to a precarious parliamentary minority, cabinet and caucus closed ranks behind the leader and raised hardly a murmur of internal dissent. The few that did were passed on the other side of the Commons chamber in menacing undertones.

Now some say there will be a return to the pre-1972 days when cabinet members were more bold about airing their doubts in public.

They recall the 1969 battle over Canada's role in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization. It set Defence Minister Leo Cadieux against Postmaster-General Eric Kierans. The two argued the merits of Canadian membership in NATO from meeting hall platforms.

Mr. Kierans later fought with Labor Minister Bryce Mackasey over the fate of the "Lapalme workers" in a group of Montreal mail deliverymen whose company was absorbed by the post office.

Mr. Kierans eventually left the Trudeau cabinet when he carried his public protests against government economic policies beyond the limits set by the prime minister.

By contrast, it was felt that cabinet bickering during the Pearson and Diefenbaker days only served to weaken the leader's image.

But former prime minister Lester Pearson's cabinet was known by squabbling over implementation of the then controversial medicare program. The issue of whether to delay the cost was hotly argued in cabinet and also on the public platform during a Liberal party policy conference.

Finance Minister Mitchell Sharp was out in this divisive fight, obtaining some ease delay in the medicare program over protests from a cabinet group led by then health minister Allan MacEachen.

Historians say the letter day cabinet feuds are mild compared with the arguments that reaged within the Conservative cabinet of Sir John A. Macdonald in the 1880s. The Bowell government of 1896 was established in self out of office in 1896.

There is no danger of that happening in the Ouellet-Whelan egg dispute.

The smooth, big-city lawyer and the earthy Ontario farmer have kept their feud as easily on as they planned it, sources say.

"The egg won't end up on anyone's face," one observer said. "It will just be on Whelan's tie."

Lewis Defends Party's Action

SUDBURY, Ont. (CP) — Defence Minister Lewis said Friday night that he does not regret toppling the federal Liberals and precipitating the July 8 election that brought a majority government and weakened his New Democratic Party in the Commons.

The NDP national leader, who lost his own York South seat in the election, told the party's Ontario convention that he could not accept Finance Minister John Turner's budget because it was "inequitable" and signalled the shift away from "progressive conscession" to the New Democrats.

"We were caught," he said. "It's a classic dilemma which often faces parties such as ours; consideration of electoral prospects on one hand and concern for the integrity of our objectives on the other.

"While I do not underrate or try to rationalize our serious electoral losses, I say that we do not lose perspective.

"The NDP remains a force in Canada. . . . The philosophy and objectives of the party remain as valid and important for Canada as they have ever been. Events in the next few years, under the majority government in Ottawa, will bring our warnings and our policies."

Nursing Home Attempts To Prosecute Striking Staff

HEARST, Ont. (CP) — Lawyer Ken Valleé of Sudbury said Friday the owners of the Hearst Nursing Home in this northern city about 135 miles northwest of Timmins will attempt to prosecute nursing assistants and aides who walked off their jobs Wednesday.

Mr. Vallée, industrial relations consultant for Ontario Nursing Homes Ltd., which owns the institution, said he has filed for an Labor Relations Board declaration naming the strike illegal and also has filed for consent to prosecute.

Under provincial law, workers at vital institutions such as hospitals and nursing homes can be fined up to $1,000 a day for an illegal strike and the union can be fined up to $25,000 a day.

The 30 to 35 members of a newly-accredited local of the Canadian Union of Public Employees (CUPE) walked out Wednesday, leaving 51 elderly patients in the care of two registered nurses. They were protesting the failure of a contract meeting scheduled for Wednesday.

Mr. Vallée said the workers are not locked out, although the home is closed. He said the workers should report to work Monday morning as usual and those who were moved to private homes or Notre Dame Hospital in Espanola, return.

Mr. Vallée said the nursing home owners are prosecuting "to make sure this never happens again."

However, Orval Turnbull, CUPE northern regional said the union is considering the dismissals illegal.

He said CUPE was unaware that the nursing assistants and aides were walking out Wednesday. He said he advised them to return to work "because the strike was illegal."

Evel Knievel Set For Canyon Jump

TWIN FALLS, Idaho (Reuter) — Stuntman Evel Knievel plans to become another Snake River Canyon rocket-powered daredevil this day and the curious are gathered here—and the like withers at the prospect of death.

If he makes it, Knievel will land on the other side of the half-mile wide gorge at least 55 million feet down.

Among the audience will be two ex-President. Here's some. They will be surrounded by motorcycle freaks, hippies and reporters.

"I always liked to live with a bang to me and that's what's in my stomach," said the 36-year-old Knievel.

Tyred up his gastric juices Sunday will be the Skycycle X-2, a 15-foot-long steam-powered missile that will reach a speed of 350 miles an hour within four seconds of take-off.

Robert Truax, the former National Aeronautics and Space Administration rocket scientist who designed the Skycycle, raises Knievel's chances of a successful crossing at 4 to 1.

"There are some dangers involved," he said, "but I think we have answered most of them."

Knievel himself, however, feels that he has only a 50-50 chance of survival. "When the ball caves, I'm going to do it anyway." He added that if he makes it he will get down on his knees and thank God.

If he doesn't, Knievel said: "It really makes no difference because I'm just going to get some extra thrills where I'm going some day and I'll wait for you."

He lives with a slight limp from all the broken bones he has suffered as a result of accidents during his career as a motorcycle stuntman.

In an article about Knievel recently, Business Week magazine said the 32 big business corporations expect to make at least $1 million each on products and endorsements based on Knievel and the Snake River Canyon jump.

The products cover just about everything that could possibly be associated with a motorbike—even underwear and automotive oil decals.

Live-television broadcasts of the event will not be permitted so that the jump's promoters can sell tickets at an average of $10 each to closed-circuit television showings.

Promoter Bob Arum says about 1.8 million seats for the closed-circuit showings bring total gross intake to about $36 million.

More than 50,000 persons, paying $25 each are expected to turn up at the Canyon site.

Knievel sees this jump as the climax of his career and he is spending great quantities of money on food, drink and entertainment for those who have come to watch.

6 Injured In Trenton Collision

TRENTON — Three of six injured people remained in Trenton and Kingston Hospitals today following a three-car crash on Dundas Street East here Friday.

Wanda Bowerman, 28, of RR 1 Wooler, is conscious and in satisfactory condition Kingston General Hospital with facial cuts and fractured ribs. Charles Thrasher, of RR 1 Wooler, is in satisfactory condition with facial injuries, a hospital spokesman said today.

Both were transferred to Kingston from Trenton Memorial Hospital following the 11 p.m. collision opposite Cheng's House of Food.

John Vallings, 30, remained in Trenton hospital in good condition with fractured ribs.

Treated for minor injuries and released from hospital here were Gerald Collings, Glenda Hendsbee of RR 2 Brighton and Paul Gauthier of Brighton.

Police say the collision occurred as one car left the parking lot of Cheng's House of Food.

An unlit board ahead caused the first vehicle, driven by Miss Bowerman, to crash into the guard rail, police said.

Thrasher's car, propelled along the curb on the south side of Dundas Street, its hood was found 35 feet east of its point of rest.

The other vehicle careened across the four lane highway and came to rest on the north shoulder at Dundas Street east.

Police said the two vehicles totaled $24 feet apart. Damage to both cars was estimated.

Fatal Mishap At Wellington

WELLINGTON — Melvin George Sanderson, 39, RR 1 Wellington, was killed instantly following a single-car accident on Highway 33 shortly before noon Sunday of here, said police.

Provincial police said Mr. Sanderson was pronounced dead at the scene after his car struck a tree, and was demolished.

The accident occurred about 6:30 a.m.

Campbellford Man Killed

CAMPBELLFORD — A 23-year-old Campbellford man died Friday afternoon when a car struck and pinned him under a side cost of here.

Gerald Hogan was thrown from the automobile as it left the Burnhame Road, and struck a telephone pole.

A passenger, James Gordon, 22, of Campbellford, escaped inside the car. He was released by the police and ambulance attendants. He was later treated for minor injuries.

Holidays Cut Recycling

Collection of recyclable paper in Belleville during August dropped 27 tons.

Causes for the decline included the fact that month is a peak holiday period, said Ald. Jean Smith co-ordinator of the collection project.

Residents may also have been confused by the fact there were five Thursdays in August. Collections were held the four last Thursdays of each month.

Some 26 tons were collected in July and 46.5 tons in June. In May residents donated 19 tons — the lowest of any month since the project began a year ago.

Madoc's Kel Kincaid and 906-pound Pet

One Man's Hobby

Buffalo Roam Close to Home

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

MADOC — Kel Kincaid says his two prized pets cost less to feed than a couple of cats.

This is despite the fact the pair weigh a combined 1,800 pounds, he estimates. And they haven't yet stopped growing.

Proud possessors of the Kincaid household are two buffalo.

Despite their bulk and glowering good looks they're little trouble to have around, claims their owner.

"They're the easiest animal to look after I ever had," says Mr. Kincaid, owner of this village and operator of a local food store.

This also makes them easier to, enjoy — and Mr. Kincaid bought them for enjoyment.

The purchases came only after long search that started when Mr. Kincaid and his wife were holidaying in western Canada two years ago.

Among the tourist sights in a national park were buffalo, so tame they were easily approachable. Mr. Kincaid was captivated.

Back home he began inquiries about buying his own buffalo.

Months later the closest he came was information from the federal Indian Affairs ministry, supervising agency for northern Canada's reserves.

The ministry at times sells buffalo from the country's protected national herd — but only to carloads, he discovered. This meant paying about $40 each for 25 animals.

Mr. Kincaid persisted and finally received a list of buffalo breeders from ministry officials. The search unexpectedly close to home. Only one name on the list was Dr. W.W. Belch, of Peterborough, who has been raising the animals for years.

Break Windows

Vandals smashed windows at Queen Victoria School Friday night and police estimate damage at about $200.

Two youths were seen leaving the area, said police.

"So it's costing about 35 cents each a day to feed them right now — less than it would for a cat or a dog," he says.

However, the food bill will increase next spring — or so Mr. Kincaid hopes. The buffalo are opposite sexes. This is breeding season.

Some time early next year he should know if his first attempts to increase the number of his big buffalo pets have succeeded.

More Register With Manpower

There were 1,140 people registered for work with the Canada Manpower Belleville office at the end of August.

This compared with an estimated 1,092 in July and 886 in August 1972.

A spokesman said much of the difference between totals for August and the same month last year was a change in registration techniques.

Mayor: "Various Programs"

Landbank One Answer For Housing

By COLIN BRUCE
Staff Reporter

No firm plans are yet on the books, but city-owned land on Cascade Blvd. may become the site of Belleville's first "community-sponsored" housing.

Mayor Robin Jeffrey said Friday the land — already serviced — could be used for housing. But she did not know what housing designs might be involved.

"Land banking and community-sponsored housing is one answer to housing shortages in the city but it shouldn't be considered the only answer," said Mayor Jeffrey.

The mayor said she is available then both senior governments and that "we'd be foolish not to look at the various programs."

The Cascade property is a form of land-banking but Council has made no firm commitment one way or another on the principle of holding land in this fashion, the mayor said.

There are two sides to landbanking schemes — and without pitfalls, she said.

Any further land-banking (laying aside of land by the municipality for future development) is "impossible" now for Belleville.

"It's very true we'll want for housing now less cause the city's boundaries," said the mayor.

Before the city can act on land-banking and co-ordinate a sponsored housing, the Quinte Planning Board must first make a report to the provincial ministry of housing detailing the area's housing policy statement.

The mayor this week said she is eager to have some questions answered concerning the policy statement, allowing the municipality to co-ordinate its needs with the board's development plans.

BELLEVILLE, ONTARIO, SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 7, 1974

Area Planning Board Ponders Request for Housing Policies

There are too many "unanswered questions" to consider giving a provincial request for a housing policy statement for the Quinte area, Mayor Robin Jeffrey said Friday.

The province's housing ministry is facing a severe shortage of general information — the result of its being a new ministry, Quinte planning director Bert Kenny told the planning board this week.

In an attempt to determine Ontario housing needs over the next five to 10 years, said Mr. Kenny, the ministry has asked municipalities to determine their housing needs in a report in the next three months. This report will be followed in the next three years by an intensive "more sophisticated outline" as a technical follow-up — which means a two-phase study.

A Toronto ministry spokesman has said funds are available to cover report costs but those funds are not, at present, said Mr. Kenny. Planning already done for the Quinte Planning Area will not be subsidized. Mr. Kenny said the ministry could not say whether cost of future work on official plans would be considered part of the housing policy background material.

Neither is it clear what effect the policy statement will have on land banking and community-sponsored housing considered by Belleville.

Because ministry correspondence and subsequent telephone conversations did not reveal all the answers, Mr. Kenny was instructed Thursday night to meet with ministry officials "face-to-face," as quickly as possible.

Mayor Jeffrey in most concerned about the timing of both phases of the study. She wonders which phase must be completed before the city can develop community-sponsored housing on city-owned Cascade Blvd. property.

"It's very valid that Mr. Kenny should go to Toronto to get some answers," said the mayor. "There are questions that have to be answered."

"In a new ministry there will certainly be some confusion," she said.

Mr. Kenny is expected to report to next month's meeting of the planning board with answers to: How much funding the board can expect in connection with the policy statement and more detailed information concerning what areas should be handled in each phase.

College Group Is Studying Dymond Report

A Loyalist College committee will study the Dymond Report — a document with far-reaching effect on Ontario's workforce.

The report is the finding of a provincial government task force — under W. R. Dymond of Ottawa University — which has pondered future job-training programs in Ontario.

A major recommendation is that employers take an active training partner in job training. Community colleges would play a key role in such training programs, John Douglas, member of the Loyalist board of governors said Thursday night.

Community colleges therefore must participate in the debate which the study will create among government and educational authorities before action is taken, he said.

The governors canned board members, most philosophers-at-large — scrutinize the report. Appointed were governors R.A. Loader, Gerald Wishart, John Campbell, Loyalist dean Paul King and retailer and director Edward Buckley.

Trenton Scouts Plan Walkathon for Funds

TRENTON — In two weeks, an expected 330 scouts will be washing highways and byways west of here, in each case raising funds for the Trenton district scouting council.

Walkathon sponsors are now preparing for a 21-mile march for funds.

Cecil Peat the council public relations officer plans to tour the 21-mile route by wheelchair to show what it is normally confined. He is shooting for sponsorship totalling $10 a mile.

Only $94 now remains in the council treasury, Mr. Peat said.

Funds raised will be used primarily in leadership training. Donations also will help support Camp Alyea, a scout camp at Stanbury Lake, north of Madoc.

Permits Total $334,500

PICTON — Building permits issued for Picton in August totalled $334,500 town council was told this week.

Jayel Development Corporation Ltd. obtained a $160,000 permit for construction of a 14-unit condominium on Pitt St. and a $20,000 permit for a new residence.

Sales Boom As Sunday Drivers Head For the Cheese Factory

By ROY PEACOCK
Staff Reporter

Cheese factories have become the half-way halt for many a Sunday drive, in Quinte country.

The product that made the district an international reputation these days draws a steady stream of domestic consumers right in the source — the cheese factory.

Over-the-counter sales of cheese and other dairy products are developing into a boom market for the factories.

For many years, the factories have made retail sales of cheese and whey butter to milk patrons. But, in the past decade, direct sales to the general public has developed into a sizeable portion of overall cheese sales.

And, if the factory happens to be on a well-travelled highway, the direct sales approach has proven just that more lucrative.

Mountain View Cheese factory, for instance, — on Highway 14 south of Belleville — is strategically located. Cheesemaker Glen Wyatt says as well as Sunday drivers, it draws many families on their way to Prince Edward County beaches.

North into Hastings County, one of the busiest factories is at Tweed — on Highway 62.

Mrs. Kathleen Tobin, its retail manager, estimates up to 1,500 pounds of cheese are sold over the counter on Sunday alone.

So big is the business, the company will have to enlarge the sales area she says.

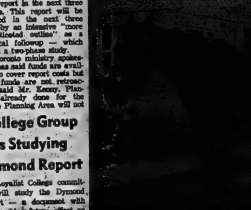
Even at the Foxboro Cheese Factory on Thurlow township's fifth concession — and midway between highways 14 and 37 — close to 15 per cent or more of total cheese sales are counter transactions.

In addition to cheese — anywhere from one-pound or two-pound packages to a five-pound block — fresh curd finds a ready demand with an overflow business being done over the weekends.

Ted Foley, cheesemaker at the Foxboro plant owned by Harold Zilnik, says counter cheese sales last year totalled approximately 200,000 pounds out of a total make of 1,750,000 pounds.

In fact, the direct sales department takes on much of the appearance of a small country grocery with soft drinks and other items being offered in addition to dairy products.

Actually, the counter sales have proven so successful that the dairy branch of the Ontario agriculture and food ministry strongly encourages the direct sales approach as a lucrative sideline for factory owners.



As an indication of the turnover potential Mr. Foley at the Foxboro factory said a check of cash register tapes showed that, in a two-week period a total of 7,000 separate sales had been made.

Many were soft drink sales

How Bruce Dennis Beats Rising Fuel Costs

Horse Helps Beat Inflation

By MARG. HAYLOCK
Staff Reporter

PICTON — Bruce Dennis a Bloomfield area farmer, is contributing to Picton's packing meter fund with nickels and dimes he gets for his horse-drawn buggy.

Mr. Dennis, a former Toronto resident who now operates a 170-acre farm in Ameliasburgh says inflation has made it too costly for him to own a car. Determined not to stay down on the farm because of this decision he decided to buy a horse and buggy.

Although he had never driven a horse before and knew nothing of how to harness one, he quickly located the perfect equine for Main Street traffic.

Essex Glen, once a race horse owned by Creighton Carr of Picton, gained valuable experience in his early career at the track. Unfazed by noises, bright lights and cars Glen has the stability necessary for high-way driving.

The horse was briefly used as a saddle animal by two Picton girls before being sold to his present owner.

Mr. Dennis says he deposits nickels in Picton parking meter when he ties Glen in front of Main Street Variety.

Registrations Increasing

Student enrolment at Loyalist College will be within a few days of submitting a total which eventually reached 5% with last-minute enrolments.

Projected on this comparative base, registrations this year should finally reach 3% by the end of the month. The final total would be "within one per cent" of what he had forecast earlier, said Mr. Harry.

101 Steals for Lou Brock

Garvey Spoils Cinci's Party

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Steve Garvey sure knows how to spoil a party.

Garvey was a festival atmosphere Friday night as a select throng of 21,005 packed Cincinnati's Riverfront Stadium to see the surging Reds battle Los Angeles Dodgers in the opener of a three-game series between the two contenders in baseball's National League West.

Garvey put a damper on their party mood in a hurry, hitting a three-run homer in the first inning off Don Gullett and Don Sutton and Mike Marshall made it stand up for a 3-1 Dodger victory.

The win increased Los Angeles' divisional lead to 3½ games over the Reds.

"Winning a head-to-head like this in Cincinnati has got to put our confidence at a high level," said Garvey. "And the effect of winning the first game of the series could be immeasurable.

"It's a heck of a difference going against the club with a 2-1 lead," added Manager Walter Alston. "When you get ahead early, you can change those guys up."

Elsewhere, St. Louis Cardinals blanked New York Mets 2-0, Pittsburgh Pirates trimmed Montreal Expos 7-1, Houston Astros edged San Diego Padres 4-3, Chicago Cubs and San Francisco Giants shared in the rain-delayed Atlanta Braves 2-0, and Philadelphia Phillies defeated Chicago White Sox 4-3.

The Reds left 15 men on base, scoring their only run of the game in the eighth inning on a leadoff homer by Dan Driessen. When Cesar Geronimo followed with a single, Dodger manager Walter Alston called in Mike Marshall for the Hot Stove Leaguer, who got the side out and recorded his 20th save.

Marshall is now just one short of his own record for appearances in one season.

The Dodgers now have won 18 of 13 games against the Reds, and six of seven at Riverfront Stadium.

Loc Brock stole two more bases for the Cardinals, boosting his season total to 101 in his quest of Maury Wills' modern league record of 104.

Garvey singled to lead off the eighth. On the next two pitches from reliever Harry Parker, he stole second and then third.

Bob Forsch stopped the Mets on four hits for St. Louis. Bake McBride, Brock and Joe Torre drove in the runs. Torre batting from Brock's with a single after the two steals.

Rain-soaked singles by Chris Speier and Tito Fuentes backed the four-hit pitching of John D'Acquisto as San Francisco halted Atlanta's four-game winning streak.

The San Diego Padres suffered their 10th consecutive loss as J.R. Richard and Kari Forsch combined on a seven-hitter. Greg Gross drove in two runs with a triple and single to pace the Houston attack.

Dick Ruthven scattered eight hits and drove in a run to help Philadelphia hand the Cubs their fifth straight loss. Ron Cash drove in a run and scored another for the Phillies.

Paiment's Big Deal A Record

KANSAS CITY (CP) — Will Paiement, the 24-year-old St. Catharines Black Hawk forward drafted second by the National Hockey League last June, signed a multi-year contract Friday with the expansion Kansas City Scouts for a reported $500,000.

The three-year contract was said by his lawyer, Al Eagleson of Toronto, to be the largest financial package ever given a player coming into the league.

Eagleson, who represents a number of pro hockey players in negotiations with owners, is also executive director of the NHL Players' Association.

Paiement, a native of Earlton, Ont., was the Scouts' first pick in the amateur draft. Last year, his third with the Black Hawks in the Ontario Major Junior - A circuit, the right winger scored 56 goals and 67 assists while accumulating 134 minutes in penalties.

Eagleson said Paiement also had an attractive offer from Vancouver Blazers of the World Hockey Association, but Will wanted to play in the National Hockey League and Mr. Edwin G. Thompson (Scouts president) was very generous to my client."

One-stroke Lead For Larry Nelson

COLUMBUS, Ga., (AP) — Larry Nelson, 28, of Acworth, Ga., shot a 67 Friday for a two-round total of 135, giving him a one-stroke margin over Don Crenshaw in the $160,000 Southern Open golf tournament.

Nelson, who only took up the game five years ago, sank two birdies over his last three holes to go ahead of Crenshaw over a course made soggy by rains which delayed play nearly two hours.

Crenshaw, a 22-year-old who is in his first full year on the tour, tore up the par 70 course with a 65 for a two-day total of 136.

Yet Crenshaw insists he's in a slump, even though he has earned more than $60,000 this year, including a second-place finish at New Orleans.

"I don't care how much money I've made," said Crenshaw. "I feel my golf game has backward since college. That is why I feel I am in a slump."

He had six birdies and a bogey in his round which was the best of the day for the leaders.

Along at 137 after a 69 was Jerry McGee, last year's Southern runner-up. Forrest Fezler, left a group at 138 in the battle for the $20,000 first prize. Fezler had a 68 Friday.

Also at that figure were Bert Yancey, Mike McCullough and first-round co-leader Jim Ferree. Yancey and McCullough had 68s and Ferriel a 71.

A group of 19 golfers were at 139, including J. C. Snead, Brien Crampton and Lynn Lott, who shared the lead with Fezler after Thursday's action.

Third leading money winner Hubert Green had a 73 for 140, while veteran Sam Snead, 62, was at 146 after a 71.

Best is Not Good Enough For Stumbling Red Sox

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Boston pitcher Luis Tiant says the Red Sox have been taking their best, but lately that isn't good enough.

Friday night the reeling Red Sox lost their eighth game, dropping a 2-0 decision to Milwaukee Brewers, and slid lower in the pennant race in baseball's American League East.

"We're playing good baseball but we just can't get any runs, man's all," said Tiant, the loser pitcher, after the Red Sox had dropped 1½ games off the pace of New York Yankees.

The Yankees held onto first place with a 6-3 decision over Detroit Tigers in the rain-shortened, 5½-inning first game of a scheduled doubleheader.

Baltimore Orioles blanked the Cleveland Indians 4-0 and Oakland 3-0, recording their fifth straight shutout for an American League record. Baltimore moved into a tie with Boston for second place.

The Red Sox led their division by seven games as recently as Aug. 6.

"I can't get mad at anybody," Tiant noted, characteristically puffing on a cigar stub. "Everybody is trying to do their best. That's all you can do."

In other American League games, California Angels defeated Chicago White Sox 4-3 and Texas Rangers nipped the Yankees' A's 5-4 in 11 innings.

Ken Berry and George Scott hit run-scoring singles and Milwaukee's Jim Slaton and Tom Murphy combined on a four-hitter, carrying Milwaukee over Boston. For the Red Sox, it was the fourth time they have been shut out in their last five games.

Slaton, 11-14, was helped to a 1-0 lead when Don Money took off the game with a double off the left field wall in the second. Berry's single, Tiant, 20-13, then stopped the Brewers until the eighth, when singles by Pedro Garcia, Don Money and Scott produced the insurance run. Since winning his 20th game on July 28, Tiant has lost his last three starts—by 3-0, 1-0 and 1-0 scores.

Otto Velez, playing for the first time in more than three weeks, singled home two runs off Mickey Lolich in the first inning and New York went on to beat Detroit in a game ended by rain after 5½ innings.

The nightcap of the scheduled doubleheader was postponed and rescheduled as part of a doubleheader today.

Velez, hitless in 15 times at bat since his last hit July 18, also singled to help set up two more runs in the fifth inning.

New OHA Rule Enforced Early

TORONTO (CP) — Two players were ejected for a second period fight Friday night in the first game played under a new Ontario Hockey Association rule calling for expulsion of players penalized for fighting.

Drew Brown of Seneca Flyers and Bart Jarrett of North York Rangers were handed fighting majors by referee Doug Cowen of Brampton during a Provincial Junior A exhibition game, believed to be the first played this fall under OHA jurisdiction.

Introduction of the rule calling for automatic game misconducts for players handed fighting majors was announced Wednesday.

The rule was introduced in the aftermath of a provincial government inquiry chaired by Toronto lawyer William McMurtry, who recommended automatic ejection for hockey fighters.

Cowen assessed a total of 80 minutes in penalties, including another game misconduct, handed a player for protesting too strongly a referee's call and 26 minor penalties.

For Canada's Champions

Big Letdown Follows Victory Celebration

From Toronto Bureau of The Intelligencer

TORONTO — For Paul Wannamaker and the rest of Oshawa Tony's, the Ontario Football League playoffs are rather a come-down from the Canadian championship in Victoria.

Tony's won the national title with a last inning victory over British Columbia in the final game. The jubilant squad returned to a rapturous hometown welcome, coast-to-coast recognition and Toronto Globals aspiring to kill giants in the OFL semi-finals.

"Everything was a let-down for us," explained Wannamaker before the best-of-three series with Toronto opened, "even coming home. Out in Victoria, the weather was wonderful with lovely senators in the 80s and 90s every day. Then we came back to rain and cold."

The lanky Trenton product pitched two games to the week-long championship. He allowed Newfoundland a single hit through six innings in winning Ontario's third game, but Manitoba forced him out in the third frame under a heavy attack in a later start.

"It's been that kind of a season — up and down — for me," said Wannamaker who finished with 13 wins and 10 losses in league play compared to a 15-3 record a year ago.

"A number of pitchers this year didn't do as well as last season. It was the first year of the league then, and I guess the hitters were a bit tight not knowing what to expect in pitching."

Most Oshawa players, naturally, are still replaying the championship and the majority feel their rallying point followed by necessity a disappointing and unexpected setback in the opening match.

"After the loss against Yukon in the first game, we had to buckle down. That hurt us because they were really a bad team," recalled Wannamaker, 24, who is playing his fourth season at Oshawa.

"That's the way we usually start tournaments — by losing."

Oshawa qualified for Victoria by winning a provincial tournament at Kemptville. They beat Globals twice in crucial games, each time by a narrow margin, to gain the national berth.

"They'll be looking to knock us off," Wannamaker said. "If we're still thinking about Victoria, we're going to get hammered."

Tony's obviously were not distracted by a champion's complex in the opener at least. Peter Landers, billed as "Canada's Mr. Fastball" on a banner outside the Toronto College ball park, was touched for a run in the first inning and Oshawa coasted to a 9-3 win.

Left-hander Barry Timbers pitched a splendid three-hit shutout. Wannamaker rested for action on the weekend.

Two classic pitchers' duels in the Ontario Tournament matched Wannamaker against Landers, the OFL pacesetter with 27 wins and seven losses this season. Oshawa's ace won them both — by 3-2 and 1-0 scores.

"I want to beat Landers again," grinned Wannamaker. "That gets me going in this series."

Landers joined Tony's for the national championship, along with Ed Kendert of Niagara Falls, and played a key role in his sixth appearance at a Canadian final.

Of his first, Wannamaker said, "It was an honor to be there. A lot of good ballplayers never get the chance."

Away from the diamond, the bachelor slays well considered through his job at Vic Tanny's in Whitby where he now lives.

Gis Mir, seven-year-old bay mare, guided by trainer-owner-driver Rejean Bolly of Cap-au-Corbeau, led the field in the finale race at Quinte Exhibition and Raceway, Friday. Groom is Fred O'Brien. Gis Mir was listed at $4.30, $2.60, $2.80, covering the mile in 2:00.1. Taking second place was Wee Sam, driven by Sam R. Mudgland, and owned by Walter Hamilton, Picton. The exacter, 2-6 paid $26. Coming in to take the show position was Kurt's Tuxedo with Tom Riley in the sulky. Next week's final racing card of the season is presented as part of the Quinte Exhibition and features the Bud Zebedee, R. Yankee Wann Memorial Pace with a purse of $750.

Out Went the Lights, In Came No. 2, Gis Mir

By MARK SKEET
Sports Staff

It was a one-man show in the featured ninth race at Quinte Exhibition Raceway last night.

The show starred owner, driver and trainer, Rejean Bolly and his horse Gis Mir, of Concecom.

The pair captured the night's feature for their performance time of 208.1. This was the night's fastest time for the mile.

The race was for preferred trotters and pacers. Trotters are usually the slower of the two and can only be entered with pacer with the owners consent.

All the horses got off to a good start, going into the first corner four abreast. The leader going down the back stretch was the No. 3 horse, Bar Side Marty owned by H.F. and M.L.B. Stables of Belleville. Gis Mir the eventual winner was in second place with Minastrop owned by Albert Defasse of Trenton and driven Ed Weeks in third place.

Going into the far turn, Minastrop had raced into the first place and in the middle. Coming to the half it was still Minastrop in front with Gis Mir right on his tail.

Gis Mir and Minastrop fleeted all along the back stretch going into the final turn. Just as the leaders entered the turn however the track lights went out and left every body in the dark.

As they came into the lights for the finish the four horses were close. Gis Mir was the winner, with second place going to No. 6 Wee Sam owned by Walter Hamilton of Picton and driven by Sam Mudholland. Kurt's Tuxedo who had moved up from the back ranks came in a nose in front of the fourth place finisher Minastrop. Kurt's Tuxedo is owned and driven by Tom Riley of Roseneath.

Driver of the fourth place finisher Minastrop, Ed Weeks felt that the lights going out on the final corner had no effect on the finishing but that "the best horse won."

Next week will be Fair night at Exhibition Raceway and the final racing card of the season. The night's feature will again be the ninth race for the Bud Zebedee and R. Yankee Wann Memorial Pace with a purse of $700 for the winner.

Billie Jean King Advances

Rain Stops Semi-final With Evonne in the Lead

FOREST HILLS, N.Y. (AP) — Billie Jean King moved up within a step of her fourth U.S. ladies tennis title but rain gave Chris Evert a reprieve in the record of 38 straight winning matches carried by the 18-year-woken Friday in the Open tennis championships.

Evonne Goolagong of Australia led Miss Evert 6-4, 4-3 before a steady rain scrubbed the centre court.

A crowd of about 15,000 saw Mrs. King and Miss Blanchard called the game's two worst stars off the slippery grass.

Earlier, Mrs. King, 30, lost shades of an early lethargy to a 2-6, 6-3, 6-1 triumph over unseeded Julie Heldman.

After the first set, it appeared that history might be repeating itself as Mrs. King was thoroughly stifled off the court—including Shown—while trailing Miss Heldman 4-1.

Mrs. King did not move properly in the early games of Friday's match. She missed easy overheads. Her normally sharp strokes came out long or behind wide of the marks.

With the score 2-2 in the second set, Billie Jean came back from love 40 on Miss Heldman's service to the fifth game to score a break, putting her ahead 3-2.

Billie Jean said she got in a psychological lead when she blew the opening game after leading 40-0 on Julie's service.

The centre-court gallery was scarred when Miss Goolagong scored through six straight games in sweeping the first set from Miss Evert, who had not swept to 15 straight tournament victories since losing to Italian and French Opens and Wimbledon—and had dropped only one set in amassing a string of 38 consecutive match victories.

But she was lost when the top seeded Miss Goolagong opened the lid to her marvelous steady cushing repertoire.

With Miss Goolagong leading 4-3, after clinching the sixth game with an ace, the rains finally arrived and the players walked on the court to confer with the players.

"Is it too slippery to play?" Blanchard, who has full authority, asked.

"I slipped once," Evonne said, "but I think it is all right to play."

"I am losing and I can't say anything," Christie replied.

Blanchard gave the signal for the match to continue but the two women, managed to play only one more game, won by Miss Evert on service before conditions were declared unplayable.

The men's semi-finals are scheduled for today.

Burnaby Sizes Up The PCOs

NEW WESTMINSTER, B.C. (CP) — Burnaby coach Don Mattinson thinks Peterborough PCOs might be a little overconfident as they prepare to face his squad in Sunday night's opening game of the best-of-seven Minto Cup lacrosse final.

The Ontario Lacrosse Association Junior A champions do have good reason to believe their quest for a third consecutive Canadian championship will be successful.

The PCOs went undefeated through 42 regular-season and playoff games, scoring 668 goals while allowing only 246.

Mattinson said the Peterborough team plays typical eastern-style lacrosse.

Juniors Make It Close

Team Canada '74 Learns While Players Shape Up

BRANDON, Man. (CP) — Team Canada '74 got the biggest it came by Friday night when it came close to getting beaten by a crew of aroused juniors from the Western Canada Hockey League.

The World Hockey Association pros chosen to go against Russia struggled defensively most of the way but won 8-5 when Frank Mahovlich scored with 30 seconds remaining.

"It was an excellent lesson," said Team Canada coach Billy Harris. "It would have been a much better lesson if we lost but I'm not unhappy with our progress.

"You have to remember we've only been on the ice since we opened the training camp on Sunday—that's just five days."

Harris repeated earlier statements that the four-game exhibition is objective—"getting the shots."

The five-game exhibition series resumes Sunday in Calgary.

The tour also is exposing weaknesses in Team Canada, which meets Russia in an eight-game series beginning Sept. 17 in Montreal.

Playing without stellar checkers like Bryan Hextall and Ralph Backstrom, and with brilliant back Bobby Orr sidelined, Harris and J.C. Tremblay on the bench, Team Canada looked iffy at times.

Ron Chipperfield of Team Canada, playing with the Juniors, had two goals and an assist. His first goal trickled off the arm of netminder Don McLeod after only eight seconds.

Other marksmen for the juniors were Ralph Klassen, Mike Rogers and Rick Blight.

Bobby Hull, Johnny McKenzie, Gordie Howe, Tom Webster, Paul Schurye and Mahovlich scored for the pros.

Junior goaltender Ed Staniowski blocked 46 shots compared to 14 saves for McLeod and Gerry Cheevers.

Same Old Story For the Wheels

Detroit Wheels brought their World Football League road show back home to Ypsilanti, Mich., on Friday night, but there was hardly anybody there to greet them.

Only about 1,500 spectators were in the stands to watch the hapless Wheels run their record to 0-13 by dropping a 19-7 decision to Southern California Sun.

It was Detroit's first appearance in Ypsilanti since they played Toronto Toros there game on Oct. 6, against the Portland Storm, a game scrapped by Portland owner Bob Harris, a London resident.

The announced paid attendance at Ypsilanti was 6,361, but the actual crowd was much smaller than that.

Tony Adams clipped a six-yard touchdown pass to Chuck McAllister with four minutes remaining to give the Sun the win, preserving Detroit's winless record.

In Friday's other WFL games, Florida Blazers downed New York Stars 17-15 before a New York crowd of 3,830 and the Storm defeated the Birmingham 13-8 before an announced paid attendance of 15,551.

Tommy Reamon carried the ball 13 times for 179 yards on a field muddied by rain and scored one touchdown for the Blazers, who broke out of a first place tie with the Stars in the WFL East Division.

Rufus Ferguson bolted for touchdown runs of 44 and 56 yards to spark the Storm to its second win in a row, after managing only a tie in its first eight games.

No doubt football fans in Ottawa and Montreal will be looking for a little more excitement this weekend when the Eastern Football Conference swings back into action.

Last week's two games produced a total of 64 points as Ottawa Rough Riders lost 11-18 in Hamilton to the Tiger-Cats and Montreal Alouettes edged the Argonauts 12-11 in Toronto.

The Rough Riders will have a chance to avenge their loss when they play host to Hamilton in a game to be carried live on the CBC television network starting at 8 p.m. EDT.

The Alouettes, who lead Ottawa, Toronto and Hamilton by four points, meet the Argonauts in Montreal Sunday. That game will be carried by the CTV eastern affiliates and will get under way at 2 p.m. EDT.

Coach Marv Levy of the Alouettes has said that familiarity with a pitch results in defensive-type games, so a low-scoring affair is a good possibility Sunday.

"That type of familiarity contributes to a better defence," Levy said. "You learn how to stop people better."

The Alouettes have placed import wide receiver Brian Baima on the 21-day injury list along with offensive lineman Pat Bonnet.

Baima has a groin injury and Bonnett a sprained ankle.

Guard Dave Braggins, who has been out with tendinitis in both legs, has been activated as has Doug Brown, back earlier this season by Hamilton.

Glen Steven will replace Baima at split end.

The Argos will be playing their first game under interim coach Joe Galat who took over after John Rauch was fired Wednesday.

Eric Allen will not play for Toronto. He has little flanker underwent exploratory surgery this week on his left knee.

Allen will be replaced by either James Davis or Chuck Herd, two cuts from the National Football League.

Don Jones, newly-acquired quarterback from Winnipeg Blue Bombers of the Western Conference, will make his debut with the Tiger-Cats.

The Riders will have Gene Foster in their backfield to replace the injured Art Green but it is not known which of the Rough Riders quarterbacks—Jerry Keeling and Nick Castaris—will get the starting call.

Highbaugh Speaks Up

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Larry Highbaugh appears to be the daring Winnipeg quarterback Ralph Brock and newly-acquired Chuck Exley to throw at the right side of the Edmonton defensive backfield when the Blue Bombers and Eskimos meet in a Western Football Conference game Sunday.

"In our first game, Saskatchewan threw seven to our side and I intercepted," says Highbaugh, right cornerback who teams with right defensive halfback Dick Dupuis.

"In the second game, Calgary didn't throw to our side. In the third game, Saskatchewan threw three, one of which Dick knocked down and one of which I intercepted.

"In the next one, Ottawa threw one but one was a quick out and one was a screen and they aren't real pass patterns. In the last two games, there were no passes to our side."

British Columbia Lions meet Saskatchewan Roughriders in Vancouver tonight in the only other weekend WFC game.

Pressure Cooker

By DOUG GRAHAM
Peterborough Examiner

PETERBOROUGH, Ont. (CP)

A lot is expected of Peterborough PCOs.

The club goes into its fourth straight Canadian Lacrosse Association junior Minto Cup final Sunday at New Westminster, B.C., with a little added pressure.

A win this year—one that would be their third title in a row—is expected. What eastern Junior fans don't expect is a long series.

PCOs in four or five games of the best-of-seven series. Anything more would be an upset in the prevailing feeling among their fans.

What else can be expected from a club that rewrote the Ontario Lacrosse Association's Junior A record book this year?

Losing is unknown to the Peterborough PCOs this season. They have won 42 consecutive games, to the last three years, the PCOs have lost twice in 84 regular-season games.

Taylor Finds the Handle In Time for Redskin Win

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Charley Taylor bobbled a pass from quarterback Billy Kilmer several times Friday night before he finally got a firm grip on it and scored the touchdown that gave Washington Redskins a 14-10 win over Baltimore Colts in a National Football League exhibition game.

The 15-yard scoring play came in the third quarter, four plays after defensive tackle Dennon Talbert intercepted a screen pass by Marty Domres on the ruin at Washington.

Domres' pass was intended for Bill Olds, a second-year man, but the ball bounced off his shoulder and into the arms of Talbert, who waded 15 yards with it to the Colt 21.

Baltimore was leading 4-0 on a pair of first-half field goals by Toni Linhart.

In Friday's other NFL exhibition, Green Bay Packers downed Cincinnati Bengals 28-24, Buffalo Bills defeated New York Giants 32-17 and Kansas City Chiefs whipped St. Louis Cardinals 31-16.

Chester Marcol kicked a 47-yard field goal with no time left on the clock at Milwaukee to give Green Bay its victory.

The Bengals, down 25-3 in the third quarter, rallied for a 24-13 lead with 31 seconds remaining in the game on a 36-yard touchdown pass from reserve quarterback Wayne Clark to rookie John McDaniel.

Rookie Clark made two short touchdown runs to account for the rest of Cincinnati's scoring.

Rookie Wayne Mosley, making his only carry of the game, scampered into the end zone for fourth quarter. A 56-yard Fergenson pass to Ahmad Rashad and a touchdown in the second period gave the Bills their win at Buffalo.

Buffalo forced the game into overtime when quarterback Joe Ferguson threw a six-yard touchdown pass to tight end Paul Seymour midway in the third quarter.

Dan Pastorini scored on a two-yard quarterback sneak in overtime period to give the Oilers their win at Houston.

Kansas City's defence with a surprise pass and Len Dawson and Mike Livingston each threw a pair of touchdown passes as the Chiefs whipped the Cardinals.

or up to $2,000 cash for being runner-up . . . in each of 5 regions across Canada.
Winners will be selected from the Maritimes, Quebec, Ontario, Prairies and British Columbia. Coughlin Aiming for Blues

By MARK HERTT
Sports Staff

A 22-year-old product of the Belleville Minor Hockey Association appears to have all the credentials for making it in the pro leagues this season.

Brian Coughlin, 5-foot-9, 190 lb. defenceman played last season with the Peterborough Jets of the North American League.

This season Brian will be trying to crack the National Hockey League St. Louis Blues lineup.

Brian recently received a phone call from Blues' coach Lou Angotti who wants established shape giving the younger players a fair chance this season.

Brian was Blues' ninth round draft choice two years ago and since then has signed two one year contracts with them.

He played with Denver Spurs of the Western Hockey League last year. Denver is the number one farm team of St. Louis.

With almost a year of professional training under his belt Brian is optimistic for the upcoming season and feels that he can make it.

Brian doesn't consider himself a fighter but he feels that even if you don't go looking for trouble in today's brand of hockey it's hard to avoid.

Last year he racked up a total of 200 minutes in penalties.

"The only edge that you have going into the training camp is to be in better shape than the other guy," observed the Hitchkon Catholic College grad.

Playing tennis and hockey throughout the summer has kept Brian in shape. Training camp opens September 11.

Brian played Junior B hockey for Belleville when he was 18 and in his only season here, he won the Buck, Ebbler Memorial trophy as the Rookie of the Year, a feat that is rarely accomplished by a defenceman.

From Belleville, he went to the Cornwall Royals for a year and one-half before being traded to the Verdun Maple Leafs and then on to the St. Louis organization.

Brian Coughlin – Off to Camp

David Jeffs – Tough Break

Hockey Must Wait

STIRLING — Selected in the draft of graduating midget hockey players by Trenton Knights of the Ontario Hockey Association Major Junior A series, David Jeffs couldn't keep his September 4 date with the club for the opening of training camp.

The 17-year-old defenceman has been playing hockey for 10 years with Ontario Minor Hockey Association teams representing the Legion.

But it was a Summer sport which cost him a chance to attend the Junior A team's training sessions.... for the time being at least.

David has a hairline fracture below the elbow in his right arm.

During an Ontario Amateur Softball Association playoff game at Odessa, Jeffs, a pitcher, suffered the injury during the eighth inning of a 6-5 loss which put Stirling on the sidelines.

He says that when he fielded a ground ball, checked the runner back at third, and threw to first, the arm hurt.

David pitched to one more batter and then had to give it up. He was over at first base for the rest of the game.

The arm was X-rayed at Belleville General Hospital that same night. The next day, he learned the bad news.

The cast is to come off Monday. His immediate hockey future will be decided at that time.

Education Comes First

TRENTON — An education, or a try at a career in the sports world?

That's a question which has set more than one young head whirring over the years.

But it was never a serious problem for one area sports enthusiast who has combined ability on the ice, the football field and basketball court while maintaining a high degree of excellence in his studies.

And all the while, Don Armstrong has put his education first.

The 19-year-old, 6-foot, 190 pound Trenton product has had pro hockey scouts hunting for the past few seasons.

But when the high scoring centre was asked concerning a career in hockey, he always came up with the same answer .....'Don't draft me, I'm not interested" are words to that effect.

Now that he has graduated from Trenton High School, (an Ontario Scholar with a percentage of 80) the talented young man is still not about to take sports too seriously.

But he has accepted a hockey scholarship at Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute at Troy, New York.

Sure, he'll play hockey But as always, he'll be concentrating on his studies while he takes a general science course with subjects related to medicine.

While helping Trenton Bit'n Handy Stand Juveniles capture Ontario Minor Hockey Association Juvenile AA titles under coach Charlie Dyke the past two seasons, Armstrong proved he could score goals and set them up as well.

In the 1972-73 campaign, he clicked for 148 points (74-74). Last season, he rattled in 127 goals while earning 116 assists for a point total of 231.

To Your Good Health

Breath-holding Is Not Harmful

By G. C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My daughter, 27 months, holds her breath. She convulses and passes out. These are called breath-holding spells. Is she like her mother, who was told at times, except that with a fever the "jerking" lasts longer.

She sleeps for an hour or so after these breath-holdings. This happens every day, sometimes several times. This has happened since before I brought her home from the hospital.

Her doctor seems to think I am worried needlessly, perhaps over-reacting because our son has had grand mal seizures over the last four years. His seizures, thankfully, seem to be well controlled).

Our doctor also says medication wouldn't help. He seems so uninterested that I haven't even mentioned it to him for over a year.

I don't believe she does this for attention, as she gets none during or after this happens. Other tricks I have heard of, blowing in her face or using cold water—do not help either. I've tried it a couple of times, but she seemed to be too far gone.

Do these attacks really not hurt or damage her?—Mrs. D.D.

Breath-holding is a fairly common trick with some youngsters, while it may be why your doctor has not seemed more concerned. Again, you haven't mentioned it for a year, so he may think it has all passed by.

After all, about 4.5 per cent of children adopt this breath-holding trick between the ages of six months and three or four years. But usually it is a manifestation of anger following a fall, spanking, reprimand or childish frustration.

There are some other aspects to look for, though. An iron deficiency anemia is seven times as common in breath-holders as in other children, as a blood test for a possible anemia wouldn't be amiss.

The fact that your son has had grand mal epileptic seizures could be significant. Not all epileptic seizures are alike, and breath-holding can be confused with such convulsive seizures. The chief differences that can be observed are that some surprise event precedes the breath-holding but not an epileptic attack; the breath-holder grips hard, and dunkners of the skin occurs early. In epilepsy the child is not crying and the dunkness occurs only late in the convulsion.

An electro-encephalogram (EEG, or "brain wave test") will be normal if it is purely a matter of holding the breath; usually will show well-recognized abnormalities with convulsive seizures.

Breath-holding usually disappears as a child gets older, although it would suggest use of your daughter's case—if that is it. There is no treatment for it, and it does not harm the child, however much it alarms a mother. All a mother can do is ignore it.

In rare case I would want a blood count (to rule out anemia) and an EEG which, if abnormal, would suggest use of anti-convulsant drugs. Such drugs, however, are of no value in a true breath-holder.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Is there any alteration in hormone production following total hysterectomy? One would think Mother Nature would soon catch on that the uterus was not receiving ova, unfertilized or otherwise, and react on the body some way.—Mrs. R.O.

It isn't the reception of an ovum (or lack of it) that affects the uterus. It is influence of hormones. They are not affected by total hysterectomy.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Are sneakers good for your feet? My mother and father won't let me wear them (except for gym) and I like to wear them.—J.L.S.

No harm in wearing them if it's pretty much similar to going barefoot.

British Company Receives Good Reviews in Toronto

TORONTO (CP) — The Royal Shakespeare Company's production of Edmond Rostand's revival of the 19th century comedy of mistaken identity and matrimonial intrigue by Dion Boucicault opened the Royal Alexandra Theatre's subscription season Wednesday and one critic said "the remarkable performances turned in by a marvellous cast made it an auspicious beginning to the new season."

The company's inaugural North American engagement runs here to Sept. 28 before playing limited runs in Detroit (Oct. 1 to Nov. 2) and in Washington (Nov. 5 to Nov. 30).

Critic John Fraser of The Globe and Mail also said the leading man, Donald Sinden, making his first visit to North America, "has taken the role of Sir Harcourt Courtly and invested it with a lifetime's experience of the stage and a historian's impeccable knowledge of detail."

He said that Sinden provides "the very definition of an aging rake: transcendent as a flamboyant fop."

"He is a sterling actor of the old school and enhances the Royal Alex and this city by per-opera on Broadway in early December."

Fraser adds that Elizabeth Spriggs, co-star, "wields her expansive girth around the stage as Lady Gay Spanker with all the authority of a cavalry regiment."

"She is splendid and awesome to behold, until Boucicault makes her repent her ways at the end and the contrition, framed with the newly-acquired husbandly authority of Sydney Bromley, is unacceptable and unbelievable."

McKenzie Porter, writing for The Sun, said London Associate "gave promise last night of a long and successful run on this continent."

"Donald Sinden . . . is very funny in a highly-stylized, almost unique manner. This is good, . . . middle-brow entertainment."

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Fat Man was willing to pay Sam Spade $10,000 to find the Maltese Falcon in 1941. Now it is missing again.

Officials at the county art museum discovered Thursday that the gold-plated statue used in the Humphrey Bogart private-eye film The Maltese Falcon is missing.

It had been loaned to the museum by Warner Brothers studio for a special display.

The statue of Falcon never turned up in the movie. The one which a dying ship captain mysteriously delivers to Bogart's Sam Spade was found to be a fake.

The 14-inch-high statue displayed in the museum was gold-plated plaster of paris. Investigators said they are unsure how it was created. It was given as a collector's item exception-

Hogg, who made more than 150 motion pictures, most of them westerns, was often seen playing a guitar or banjo. He also appeared on television with the Grand Ole Opry.

Ghosts and Speed

By ALLEN SPRAGGETT

There have been some very credible ghosts and ghosts left, so far as I know, only a couple of hauntings have been even tacitly recognized by a court of law.

The sloth legally certified ghost was in London in 1866.

In the summer of that year, 20-year-old Bill Haywood, a married man, came up before a magistrate's court because he had been in trouble with the car four different times. His lawyer asked for a fine instead of a jail sentence on the grounds of extenuating circumstances. Haywood, said the lawyer, had been under peculiar emotional stress.

"The house he lives in is haunted," the lawyer told the court.

"A local clergyman has attempted to lay the ghost. Haywood's wife is terrified of seeing the ghost and of living in the house by herself. She is also expecting a baby."

The ghost, argued the lawyer, had made Haywood so nervous that he was unduly accident-prone in his car.

Valerie Haywood, the accused man's wife, testified under oath that she had seen the ghost several times.

"He's an old man dressed in rusty... black... Victorian clothes," she said. "And he has a gold stud at his collar."

The ghost, she added, "appears in a bedroom at seven or eight o'clock at night. He has gray hair and he just stands there in the room. He doesn't look evil but he terrifies me. Even our spaniel, Lassie, won't go into that room. She whimpers when she passes the door.

"I am not usually a superstitious person," Mrs. Haywood told the court, "but I'm having to be ironical for nerves since we've lived in this house. We were warned by people who had lived here before not to take it over but we laughed at them.

"We were told that a man went insane in that bedroom years ago and it's his ghost that haunts it."

William Haywood, the nervous driver, supported his wife's account.

"I've seen the ghost too," he told the court. "I call him the man in black. We don't use that bedroom now."

After hearing the Haywoods' story, the court let the accused off with a fine because of what the magistrate called "the very special circumstances in this case".

Convention Convictions Upheld

CHICAGO (AP) — A U.S. federal appeals court upheld Friday contempt convictions of a lawyer and three of the Chicago 7 defendants in the 1968 controversial trial resulting from street disturbances during the 1968 Democratic National Convention.

The defendants, David Dellinger; Abbott (Abbie) Hoffman, and Jerry Rubin, and lawyer William Kunstler, were convicted of the contempt charges Dec. 4, 1972, by Judge Hubert I. Gigenot of U.S. District Court in Portland, Me., who was later pulled to preside over the case in Chicago.

Gigenot did not impose any sentences and held that such penalties would be vindictive. The defendants could have been sentenced to six months in prison. Attorney Kunstler and the remaining four defendants were acquitted of the contempt charges.

A spokesman for the Center for Constitutional Rights in New York, which represents Kunstler and the defendants, said the case will be appealed to the U.S. Supreme Court.

All defendants and the two lawyers were cited for contempt in February, 1970, by Judge Julius Hoffman of U.S. District Court who presided at the stormy 4½-month trial.

Dellinger, Hoffman, Rubin and Ronald Davis and Tom Hayden were convicted at the conclusion of the trial of crossing state lines to incite rioting at the time of the convention. They were acquitted of conspiring to do so, two other defendants, John Froines and Lee Weiner, were acquitted of all charges.

Later, an appeals court reversed the trial convictions and the government declined to retry the case.

Cognac Ruined In Cellar Fire

COGNAC, France (AP) — About 12,000 barrels of cognac and alcohol, representing about 7½ million bottles of the liquor, went up in flames at the Martell distillery here Friday.

The fire consumed three aging cellars but no injuries were reported.

Pierre Cordier, the Martell director, said the fire represented a loss of about $54 million to $60 million.

"In that they were young cognacs, we came out pretty well," he said. "It is not catastrophic. It represents only 10 per cent of our stock."

Firems in asbestos suits, volunteers and crews from a nearby French air base fought to control the fire in intense heat, but were unable to stop the flames from eating through most of the 1,500-foot-long, 50-foot-wide building.

At the height of the fire, flaming cognac spread through the distillery's sewage system and into the Charente River which was covered with blazing slicks of alcohol. Firemen were posted at several points to contain the emerging flames.

Firemen said the blaze was believed to have started when alcohol from a barrel spilled on the motor of a forklift.

Martell is the oldest of the French cognac distillers. It was founded in 1715, employs about 1,000 persons in its distilleries and produces about 100,000 barrels a year.

Hospital Approves Wage Increase

SARNIA (CP) — The Sarnia General Hospital commission has approved wage increases of $300 a month or 24.4 per cent for about 120 non-union employees.

Hospital executive director E. Z. Redden said the increases for administrative staff, nurses, technicians, lab technologists, department heads and registered nurses are in line with earlier increases granted to registered nurses.

Non-union personnel affected by the increases will receive an additional $200 a month if currently earning more than a $647 mark. Those earning less will receive the 24.4 per cent.

Olympic Village Finds Backing

MONTREAL (CP) — Construction of the Olympic Village project could start next week, a month behind schedule, following an announcement Friday that financing has been found for the $30-million project.

Joseph Zappia, president of Terrasses Zarzaglia Inc., a construction company responsible for the project, said financing has been "95 per cent" finalized.

He said the project now needs a guarantee of the loan from Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation (CMHC).

CMHC officials talked at the financing of the project in July because they said the $22-unit project, housed in twin pyramids, did not fit its programs aimed at increasing low and medium-cost housing. A spokesman for the federal agency said it could endorse a loan if the group found acceptable backers.

Work Week Still Stable In Canada

OTTAWA (CP) — Standard work-week for non-office manufacturing employees has shown virtually no decline in recent years, says a study released Friday by the federal labor department.

Increasing productivity has made reduction in hours possible, the study says, but employees seem to prefer taking advantage of the benefit through higher pay.

The study shows that 40-hour work-weeks have been normal in the industry since the average number of hours worked dropped substantially in the late 1940s.

The report, Trends in Working Time, was prepared by the department's economics and research branch and based on 1972 data from 7,791 companies employing 873,000 non-office workers.

Indians Fear Loss of Land

GARDEN RIVER, Ont. (CP) — Indians at the Garden River reserve east of Sault Ste. Marie are reluctant to give up any more of their reserve land because of past grievances, Chief Noel Jones said Thursday.

The federal government wants land for a proposed four-lane highway route to be announced soon.

Chief Jones told John Rhodes, provincial minister of transportation and communications, that Indians will not consider the highway route proposals until all past grievances are settled or some assurance of settlement is reached.

He said between 1868 and the 1920s, the size of the band's reserve went to the present 28,563 from 130,000 acres.

Board Hearings Draw Criticism of Policy

OTTAWA (CP) — Fears of natural gas shortages within the next few years have prompted sharp criticism of the National Energy Board as it prepares for one of the most important hearings in its 15-year history.

Some gas suppliers and consumers predict the shortage could come in eastern provinces after 1978 and one member, Max Crowe, chairman of the NEB, has said there may be a shortage of Alberta gas by the end of the decade.

Status of the country's gas supply will be clarified later this fall when the board holds hearings on the supply and demand between now and 1985.

But, meanwhile, the threat of possible reductions in supply hangs over the heads of eastern consumers. Many blame the allocation of gas to the federal energy regulator for authorizing exports of natural gas.

Critics point out that while eastern consumers fear shortages, almost half the gas produced in Canada now is exported to the energy-hungry United States market under contracts ranging from 20 to 25 years.

Eric Kierans, a former federal cabinet minister and long-time critic of national energy policy, says the board has allowed as much gas to be exported that there will be shortages in southern Ontario by the next two years.

In briefs filed with the board in preparation for the gas hearings, a formula used to determine whether a surplus exists was described as inadequate.

Briefs from the Ontario and Manitoba governments point out that any recovery in January, the board had found surplus of gas that it licensed for export in the form of ethane, a petrochemical building block. Yet only a few months later consumers are facing the threat of shortages.

Many of the briefs filed with the board suggest no further export licences be granted and that exports be cut back or shut down on exports already authorized.

However, Energy Minister Marcy McKinnon of Ontario says a reduction in exports to the United States should be a last resort. He says that such action could draw American retaliation in other trade negotiations between the two countries.

In the meantime, Ontario is working on contingency plans for allocating natural gas among customers if shortages occur.

The province also plans a provincial energy corporation which will invest in exploration of natural gas as well as other energy forms.

Cancer Risk Drops Among Miners

TORONTO (CP) — A study commissioned by the ministry of natural resources says the risk of lung cancer for uranium miners starting work now is no greater than that for the general public.

However, the study, carried out by a health industry doctor and a statistician from the Workmen's Compensation Board, says miners exposed to uranium radon in the past are three times as likely to suffer lung cancer as the general public.

The study says that unpublished data indicates "that the concentration of radon (a radioactive gas) . . . has substantially decreased in the last two decades."

Figures used in the study included a comparison of the deaths among uranium miners—309 between 1955 and 1966—and the provincial mortality rates.

Appeal Court Denies Mother Custody of Child

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario Court of Appeal dismissed an application Friday by a 17-year-old London-area high school student to obtain custody of her 14-month daughter she has given up for adoption.

The court ruled in London today was not the proper last January when he refused to allow the young mother, said the London Judge disposed of the case on written material submitted to the court and gave no written reasons for his decision to refuse the mother's request.

Waldheim Asks For Cyprus Aid

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — The United Nations appealed Friday for $22 million to help care for 240,000 refugees on Cyprus until the end of the year.

In an appeal to "all men of good will," UN Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim said the $22-million figure was compiled by the Cyprus government, agencies of the Red Cross and the UN high commission for refugees.

her mother."

Mr. Dickie said, the couple were raising the boy in better than a foster home.

"To take this child out of the only home he has ever known is to risk some psychological disturbance," Mr. Dickie said.

R. G. McCaig, counsel for the natural mother, told the London Judge disposed of the case on written material submitted to the court and gave no written reasons for his decision to refuse the mother's request.

Canyon Spares Stunt Rider

TWIN FALLS, Idaho (AP) — Stuntman Evel Knievel says a weakness in the metal holding the parachute system in place was responsible for his rocket ride into the Snake River Canyon rather than over it.

"There was a metal failure," Knievel told a news conference Sunday night just less than four hours after he was lifted by helicopter from rocks at the base of the 626-foot canyon.

"To lose to a beautiful river and canyon like this to me is not a real loss," said Knievel, the cuts on his right cheek and lip standing out as red lines on his tan face.

The chutes began deploying even as the red, white and blue Sky-Cycle cleared the launch ramp Sunday.

The vehicle was halted before it had travelled half the needed distance, and seconds later Knievel was on the canyon bottom, the bloodied survivor of yet another stunt.

Despite the failure of the stunt, Knievel was assured of $6 million — and stands to earn much more from proceeds of a five closed-circuit telecast and related deals.

Promoters of the telecast had been predicting the total take might reach $20 million, but they said Sunday evening that it would be at least 24 hours before theirs and other figures were compiled.

Knievel was asked what he responded: "I don't know what I'm going to do. I sat on it and guess it's my best."

In a telephone call to television station KUTV in Salt Lake City, Knievel said that, "Overall, I failed — period, baby, holding a canister containing the parachutes in front of him when the engine fired, sending the chutes spilling out behind.

The surprise call from Knievel's motel room here was to a talk show, Tales That Twisted, videotapes of the abortive leap.

During the conversation, Knievel stressed that he did not inadvertently activate the parachute system — one explanation offered for the mishap.

Earlier, just after the rescue, Knievel walked back toward the launch ramp and said: "The machine was going sideways on me. I tried to steer it, I just don't know what happened."

The steam-powered Sky-Cycle was to have travelled 3,000 feet at 400 miles an hour, enough to carry it well beyond the opposite canyon rim, 1,600 feet away.

Eighteen seconds after launch, Knievel was to have thrown the lever deploying the chutes to carry the missile earthward. Instead, the vehicle lurched upward for nine seconds and veered to the right. Then, 1,500 feet in the air, it turned downward and began the twisting, nose-first descent.

Pushed by a brisk north wind, the cycle glanced off a canyon shelf and came to rest about 20 feet from the Snake River, where it came to rest right side up. Knievel said that piece of gear saved his life.

In his telephone call to KUTV, Knievel cautioned adventurous children: "Maybe because I made this jump, young children will realize that even with the best help in the world, maybe this is not the thing to do."

Promoters of the stunt had consistently predicted a turnout of 20,000, but that half that number appeared to be on hand. Sheriff Paul Cardner estimated the crowd at 15,000.

Lost Touch with Boat

Toronto Youth Drowns On Lake Ontario Swim

YOUNGSTOWN, N.Y. (CP) — The search has ended for a 17-year-old Toronto youth believed to have drowned Saturday in his bid to swim Lake Ontario from here to Toronto, officials said today.

The Toronto Harbor Police, which had three boats hunting for the youth Sunday, called off the search today on instructions from Superintendent Gordon Ragan, a police spokesman said.

Neil MacNeil was last seen about 4:30 p.m. Saturday after he lost sight of an accompanying pace boat which developed engine trouble about seven miles offshore in United States territory.

Air-Sea Rescue at Trenton, Ont., and the Rescue Co-ordination Centre in Cleveland, Ohio, both called off the search Saturday night for the youth. Both said today they had no plans for continuing the search.

The five-foot six-inch, 145-pound youth, a strong swimmer with experience as a lifeguard, was accompanied by his coach Alex Romanowski, 29, a navigator; Britain Ragan, 19, a reporter, and Chris Cornwell, 25, all of Toronto.

The engine conked out on us," Mr. Romniowski said. "We got it started again but couldn't make it. We got it to get it moving.

"We started screaming to them (MacNeil and Ragan) to stop but they wouldn't.

"Neil answered that he would do it himself. We tried to row over to them with the two paddles we had in the boat but couldn't reach them.

"They were swimming in the wrong direction by this time. We said them this but they still wouldn't listen."

Mr. Romniowski and Mr. Cronwell were rescued by Mr. and Mrs. Herman Spiegel of Niagara-on-the-Lake, Ont. The Spiegels were sailing their yacht when they spotted the boat.

When the group reached shore, they told the coast guard station, the landing group for the major guerrilla organization, said the call was a hoax and a "Zionist fiction" to discredit the Palestinian cause.

Greek Orthodox marine ministry said an Alitalia plane reported seeing the 707 "plunging steeply into the sea with one engine on fire" shortly before noon. Search pilots flying over the site soon after said all they saw were "remnants of wreckage and bodies floating on the surface.",

TWA Jet Crash Claims 88 Lives

ATHENS (AP) — All 88 persons aboard a TWA jetliner that crashed Sunday in the Ionian sea are believed dead. At least one of the 79 passengers was a Canadian.

The Boeing 707 jet was en route from Tel Aviv to Los Angeles with stops in Athens, Rome and New York. It plunged into a stormy sea 60 miles west of Kefallinia Island 40 minutes after leaving Athens.

Airline officials said there was one Canadian among the 79 passengers who boarded the plane in Tel Aviv for Rome and the United States. The Canadian was not identified.

By mid-morning today, about 46 bodies had been recovered from the sea by freighters and ships of the U.S. 6th Fleet. Helicopters from the carrier Independence dropped flares during the night to help the ships locate bodies and wreckage from the plane.

A telephone caller in Beirut reported that an organization called the Nationalist Youth for the Liberation of Palestine, had sabotaged the plane, But the Palestine Liberation Organization, the leading group for the major guerrilla organizations, said the call was a hoax and a "Zionist fiction" to discredit the Palestinian cause.

Hurricane Moderates Only Two Lives Lost

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Hurricane Carmen has dispersed from Louisiana and Texas after leaving two dead and ravaging the Louisiana sugar cane crop. But the storm did far less damage than officials had feared.

Authorities said about 14,000 refugees remained in evacuation centres early today. But thousands of others returned home as the storm disappeared inland.

Carmen, packing winds gusting up to 150 miles an hour, had been heading straight north for New Orleans. But it stalled for five hours early Sunday, then veered westward through marshland and hit Lafayette about dawn.

It was downgraded to a tropical storm soon afterward.

Nixon's Pardon Splits Parties

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford's unconditional pardon of Richard Nixon has pushed his fledgling administration into the backwash of Watergate, ruptured his rapport with Congress and led to the probable abandonment of a top aide.

Ford's announcement Sunday of "a free, full and absolute pardon" for Nixon for any criminal conduct during his presidency was followed within minutes by a Nixon statement of remorse as "my mistakes over Watergate."

and, in the ensuing hours, there were these major developments:

—Jerald terHorst, Ford friend and adviser, quit as White House press secretary.

—Many Democrats and some Republicans in Congress voiced dismay at the pardon, contending it set a double standard of justice. But other Republicans, including Vice-President-designate Nelson Rockefeller, hailed it as an act of compassion and courage.

—Lawyers for former Nixon aides and associates began reshaping their strategy for the Watergate cover-up trial, and at least one defendant, H. R. Haldeman, planned new efforts to delay the trial now set to begin Sept. 30.

—Ford aides made public an agreement they had reached with Nixon to preserve his White House files for at least three years in case a subpoena was. But the agreement allows the former president to destroy any White House tape recordings after September, 1979.

Although Ford's announcement caught the nation by surprise, it was preceded by 19 days of legal deliberations and negotiations with Nixon and special Watergate prosecutor Leon Jaworski.

It also represents a reversal of Ford's previous public statements. During his vice-presidential confirmation hearings, Ford said: "I do not think the public would stand for a pardon. And at a news conference Aug. 28, he said it would be "unwise and untimely" for him to commit himself until "any legal process has been undertaken" against Nixon.

White House counsel Philip Buchen said Nixon faced likely indictment prior to the pardon. He said it was granted without strings attached, but acknowledged Ford knew in advance Nixon would submit a statement of remorse for his actions.

White House counsel Philip Buchen said Nixon faced likely indictment prior to the pardon. He said it was granted without strings attached, but acknowledged Ford knew in advance Nixon would submit a statement of remorse for his actions.

The first sign of the gist of Nixon's follow-up statement.

Three hours after he knelt in prayer at early-morning communion services, Ford summoned a television crew and a few reporters into his Oval Office to announce his pardon prohibiting any federal criminal prosecution of Nixon "for all offences against the united States" during his 5½ years in office.

"I feel that Richard Nixon and his loved ones have suffered enough," Ford said, speaking slowly and glancing often at a 926-word statement.

"My conscience tells me clearly and certainly that I can do no less than to exercise the grant of executive clemency power to finally shut and seal this book."

He said it is "common knowledge that serious allegations and accusations hang like a cloud over our former president's head and threaten his health as he tries to restructure his life. . . .

As Ford delivered his decision, his spokesman for a month stood in the rear of the Oval Office, grim-faced and silent. Later, it was learned that a half-hour prior to the statement, terHorst, 52, told Ford he was resigning.

"It was . . . after a great deal of soul searching that I decided that my usefulness as press secretary depended upon my relationship with the public and the confidence support the president's decision . . . even though I knew he took that action in good conscience," terHorst said Sunday night in an interview with The Associated Press.

He noted that former Nixon aides are either in prison or under indictment for Watergate-related offences, and said: "Justice, justice, must also be even-handed."

Democrats led the parade of congressmen disagreeing with Ford's action, and they were joined by some Republicans.

"A serious mistake," said Senator Edward Kennedy (Dem. Mass.). "It raises very real questions . . . about whether we have a double standard of justice in this country."

Nixon Voices Anguish At Harm He Did U.S.

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — Former president Richard Nixon, newly immune from Watergate prosecution, acknowledged "mistakes and misjudgments" in handling the scandal.

"That the way I tried to deal with Watergate was the wrong way is a burden I shall bear for every day of the life that is left to me," Nixon said Sunday of the scandal that led to his resignation.

The former chief executive made his remarks in a statement released less than 18 minutes after President Ford announced he had granted Nixon full pardon for any offence he may have committed in the White House.

"I have been informed that President Ford has granted me a full and absolute pardon for any charges which might be brought against me for actions taken during the time I was president of the United States.

"In accepting this pardon, I hope that his compassionate act will contribute to lifting the burden of Watergate from our country.

"Here in California, my perspective on Watergate is quite different than it was when I was embattled in the midst of the controversy, and while I was still subject to the unrelenting daily demands of the presidency itself.

"I look back on what is still in my mind a complex and confusing maze of events, decisions, pressures, and compromises, one thing I can see clearly now is that I was wrong in not acting more decisively and more forthrightly in dealing with Watergate, particularly when it reached the stage of personal involvement and grew from a political scandal into a national tragedy.

"No words can describe the depths of my regret and pain at the anguish my mistakes over Watergate have caused the nation and the presidency—a nation I so deeply love and an institution I so greatly respect.

"I know many fair-minded people believe that the circumstances and actions in the Watergate affair were intentionally self-serving and illegal. I now understand how my own mistakes and misjudgments have contributed to this belief and seemed to support it. This burden in the heaviest one of all to bear.

"That the way I tried to deal with Watergate was the wrong way is a burden I shall bear for every day of the life that is left to me."

Portugal Sends Troops Against Whites

LOURENCO MARQUES, Mozambique (CP) — The Portuguese government today ordered troop reinforcements to move toward this capital where white rebels set up a headquarters and took over the airport, radio station and postal centre.

In the seaport of Beira, two hand grenades blasted a demonstration by several thousand whites protesting against the transfer of power to the black majority.

The grenades burst as Portuguese troops fired over the heads of the crowd and then charged them with batons.

The city's main square was strewn with wounded civilians after the explosions, baton charge and shooting.

Sporadic outbursts of firing and explosions echoed through Beira after the incident.

Men, women and children filled the streets shouting abuse at the troops.

Army officers said troops were not equipped with grenades. They blamed civilian extremists for the violence.

Most of the estimated 60,000-strong Portuguese army in Mozambique is concentrated in the northern part of the territory where it fought a 13-year guerrilla war. Lourenco Marques, the capital, is in the far south less than an hour from the South African border by car.

Double Hitching

When John George Dawkins married Cheryl Scott at Christ Church on Saturday, that wasn't the only hitching of the day.

Awaiting outside the church was a surrey-like affair, a pony team to take the bride and groom to a reception at the Legion. The idea came from Carl Brooks of Wallbridge who owned the team of ponies and said he always wanted to do something like this. The best-man and matron of honor also left the church in a surrey drawn by a single pony owned by Basham Dawkins.

Schools Offer New Courses To Attract Student Interest

The meat and potatoes of education is embellished in secondary schools today with dessert offerings to tempt the taste of the most jaded student.

The new courses being offered in Ontario schools are designed to provide students with knowledge and skills of a more practical nature and to enrich the standard academic fare.

All are introduced gradually, after being given on an experimental basis in a few selected schools for two or more years.

One course, offered at North Hastings High School in Bancroft for the first time, was originated and planned by Jo Bancroft, teacher of physical education, and Belleville city hall assistant department employee, has drafted a course on municipal law. It is designed to give students an understanding of municipal law, property and land tenure and the rights of citizens as intellectual component with which to fight city hall if it ever becomes necessary.

Centre Hastings is also offering a credit course new to Hastings County and one planned by its teacher. Ron Powell initiated outdoor education when he moved to the Madoc school from Brighton where he originated it. The course includes, among other things, lifesaving, natural resources management and recreational skills.

Centre Hastings also offers a bachelor living credit course for the boys and girls on the grades 11 and 12 levels, designed to equip them to live on their own more successfully when they leave school.

Since Ontario schools were founded, history classes have been confined to the study of the ancient world, Europe and Canada. The East, now of increasing importance on the world scene, was ignored. Now, Asia studies are being offered, still on an experimental basis, in this part of Ontario. Trenton High School has offered the course for the last three years while Moira Secondary in Belleville introduced Far Eastern studies for the first time this year.

Quinte is experimenting this year with a credit course approaching the "human-scene" concept. It is a scheme by which 18 selected students are allowed to choose a subject and set up an independent year-long study, supervised by a teacher. The students meet turn in assignments and give a report of their work to their class.

Centennial, already known as a school of special interest during its early periods. It will have a full-time teacher in its reading lab for the first time and is offering an English course at the grade 10 level for "varied extraordinary problems in written English identified in grade 9." Centennial offers the world religions credit course, being swiftly in popularity throughout Ontario.

BCI, the county's oldest school, has revolutionized its timetable with the introduction of the semester system. The school day comprises five 70-minute periods (one of them for lunch), instead of the conventional eight. Students will complete four credit courses between September and January and another four between February and June.

Bayside, the only other county school on the semester system, is beginning its third year of operation. For the first time, it will give a compulsory two-month course on use of study time for grade 9 and 10 students.

Four Belleville schools — Centennial, Bayside, BCI and Moira — have co-operated in setting up the most innovative program of all — a four-credit community involvement course on the grade 13 level. It is designed to develop an awareness of social problems in the community, provide experience in solving the problems and give a knowledge of the agencies dealing with the problems. The students, about 10 or 13 from each of the four schools, will spend part of their time in school and part working in Belleville social agencies.

Charge of the Chariots

Twentieth century chariteers tear around Shannonville's dirt track to the applause of 600 attending the Saturday fall fair. Winners were Blaine Way of Milford in the small pony class, Teddy Sidor of Roblin in the medium class and Laverne Way of Milford on the large class. About $1,500 was given in prizes to all fair competitors.

Weekend Accidents Claim Six Lives on Quinte Roads

The Quinte area accounted for six of the 13 accidental deaths recorded in Ontario this weekend. All were automobile fatalities.

On Friday, Gary Woodcock, 25, of Campbellford was killed when he was thrown out of his vehicle in a single-car accident on the Burnbrae Rd. near Campbellford.

On Saturday, Melvin George Sanderson, 30, of RR 1 Wellington was killed when his car struck a tree on Highway 33 about four miles north of Wellington.

Also on Saturday, Robert Glenn Walker, 26, of RR 3 Madoc, died after his dune buggy went out of control on a township road and hit a tree about seven miles north of Madoc.

William Frederick Ditchburn, a 27-year-old Trenton man, died Saturday when his car rolled over on County Road 4 (Talbot St.) 3½ miles north of Picton. A passenger, Douglas Brooks, 49, of Trenton is in the intensive care unit at Belleville General Hospital with chest injuries.

A Toronto man, Isaac Habberington, 66, died Sunday of injuries suffered in a two-car accident Saturday on Highway 7 near Kaladar, 40 miles northeast of Belleville.

An occupant of the second car, Ann Thompson, 30, of RR 1, Cannington was transferred to Toronto General Hospital. Treated and released from Belleville General Hospital.

Early today, Belleville provincial police report a Quebec man was killed on Highway 401 west of Trenton. The accident occurred about 3.35 a.m.

Future Shock Author to Address Local Educators Next Month

The man who has coined the future and wrapped it up in a best selling book — Future Shock — will be in Belleville in October, the guest of local educators.

Alvin Toffler will be brought to Centennial Secondary School auditorium Oct. 9 by the Hastings County Board of Education and District 19 comprising Hastings, Lennox and Addington and Prince Edward Counties) of the Ontario Secondary School Teachers' Federation.

Mr. Toffler was an editor of Fortune magazine and a Washington correspondent before he wrote the bestseller that made his name a household word. He began his career as a "futurist" by teaching "the sociology of the future" at the New School for Social Research in the U.S. He serves as advisor to organizations such as the Rockefeller Brothers Fund and IBM. Mr. Toffler has just completed a book on schools and the future of education.

ALVIN TOFFLER

Julie Carty, Centennial teacher and president of Hasting Division of OSSTF and Alvin Toffler is a pioneer in future studies and as such, one of North America's best-known men."

"The board and the federation are delighted to have him in Belleville," she said.

Jim Cox, president of OSSTF District 19 said he sees the Toffler visit as no cause for the Quinte area's future.

"The board-federation cooperation in this venture is indicative of the fine relations in Hastings county, and I look forward to continued relations of this quality," he said.

Tentative plans call for Mr. Toffler to deliver a lecture Oct. 9 to an audience of secondary school teachers trustees and their guests. Representatives of trustees and teachers will meet with Mr. Toffler the next morning at the Ann St. Education centre for an informal question and answer session.

Fair Has Flavor Local Folk Like

SHANNONVILLE (Staff) — Many local fall fairs have either fallen by the wayside or have geared up to fullsized exhibitions — over-stuffed with out-of-town midway talent and lacking in local charm.

None of this can be said of the Shannonville World's Fair which drew 600 persons this weekend.

Unlike other communities which have hammered their fairs in hyped up rides, demolition derbys and dare devil drivers, Shannonville's fair is 100 per cent homegrown.

Fair organizers have put orderly as baked goods, home craft competitions, livestock showing and candy and games for the youngsters.

Leslie McLaren, a member of the fair board said he felt that this year's fair was a good one.

"We're not out to make money on it — though we generally make a little bit to get us started next year," he said. "We're just out to have some fun."

There were a few new wrinkles to the fair. Glanmore House (County Museum) had a booth and home-made apple cider sold for 25 cents.

Bingo, fiddle contests and step dancing duels all made their way into the fair, along with hot dogs, candy floss and a greased pig race.

Because the fair emphasis was on having fun and not on a show, polished production, it didn't matter that game lots were a little shabby or that a new coat of paint was needed here and there.

Veterans Rejoin For Celebration

For the last 55 years, men who fought in the 21st Battalion during the First World War have met each year in a spirit of comradeship and friendship.

This weekend about 50 members of the outfit gathered here for the 56th annual reunion which, this year, also marks the 60th anniversary of their mobilization in 1914.

Activities began Saturday with registration at the Royal Canadian Legion, Branch 59, followed by the annual meeting.

Bill Gray of Cleveland, Ohio, was elected president of the battalion's association, succeeding Vic Fraser. Elected first vice-president was Bill Mickael of Belleville while Jim Mcintosh of Dartmouth, Nova Scotia was voted second vice-president.

Following was the cenotaph service officiated by Padre Ken Taylor of London, Ont.

Saturday's activities ended with a dinner in Legion. Guest speaker was J. W. D. Broughton, Order of Hospitaller, a member of the battalion.

Mr. Broughton brought back some of the atmosphere of the First World War days through his jokes and in leading the audience in singing songs popular in that time.

Sunday morning, a church parade was held on the armory lawn. Padre Ken Taylor led the gathering in prayer.

He told the 50 people who gathered that the spirit of wartime comradeship is never lost but is always with us. He added that one must never forget the sacrifices paid by those who have fought in wars even in today's "easy going, pleasure loving society."

The Sea Cadet Band played a selection of hymns and military music while small groups stopped to observe the ceremonies.

Economic Contradictions

Britain's soaring inflation — twice that of the United States according to one observer, and still climbing — offers some odd contradictions compared with North American economics.

While Pan American Airways is complaining it is getting deeper in the red and wants government assistance, British Airways has reported a $38.5 million profit for the fiscal year ending March 31. It was three times as large as that of the preceding year.

But even as these figures were released the future is clouded by the problem of increasing fuel prices and a falloff of passenger traffic. And BA chairman David Nicholson is forecasting, not a profit in 1975, but a loss of as much as $48 million.

Again, in the realm of clothing, and in particular children's clothing as the young people begin another school year, the picture is of increasing costs. That is, here at home in Canada. But a CBC report the other day revealed that a woman brought home a complete school outfit from Britain, for her grandchild, which was cheaper than it would have been here. The same applied to clothing purchased in Buffalo, N.Y.

In Britain however the overall spectre of inflation is serious and people are coming up with a variety of suggestions to beat it. Among them, as offered by a Brighton (Sussex) man in a letter to The London Times, is a suggestion that friendly neighbors form four-family urban communes, to share everything from the lawnmower and garden produce to the family car.

Of course the warning signals are out in Canada too, although nobody, least of all Government, seems particularly concerned. John Diefenbaker has said Ottawa's failure to act is leading Canada toward a depression within six months. It is one of those predictions which, spanning only half of a year, will be easy to keep track of. Look out for the economic climate next March. Remember too . . . the Ides of March.

President Attends Prayer Meetings

Invoking The Almighty Remains A Factor in Politics

By JOHN D. HARRISON
Foreign Affairs Analyst

The prayerful politician was supposed to have been a victim of the permissive society of the 1960s, but gone like the dods is an unseen reverend he had assumed himself was there.

In Canada he was a phenomenon of our Western 1930s protest political parties. William Aberhart, the founder of the Social Credit Speaking through the Prophetic Institute, the weekly socialist J. C. Woodsworth preaching the social gospel of Methodism through the CCF instead of its church.

And in America, prayers and politics were supposed to be as untended as William Jennings Bryan and mid-west populism.

In fact, in neither country has the prayerful politician stayed in the wings. In Toronto, the embossed invitation from an Ontario premier to a prayer breakfast used to go out to hundreds, maybe still does.

Former prime minister John Diefenbaker responds to that public populist tradition of the politician relying on the deity for help and guidance. And not unlikely, in that tradition, Mr. Diefenbaker remains a tantalizing, semi-secret Baptist.

But who should be seen in Washington amidst a quiet, apparently political strategy meeting but President Gerald Ford who met in fact Saturday to make a congressional prayer meeting on time.

The prayer breakfast was just a star-studded congregation of prominent senators and congressmen in the weekly prayer meetings in which he has taken part for many years.

The prayerful personality of politicians in the neighborhood and only recently Watergate-besmirched capital of the United States is an important and a continuing part of politics now more prayer meetings than ever before, as the conservative Senator Mark O. Hatfield, whose name came up a few days ago as a "notable possibility for Ford's vice presidency, and democratic senator John C. Stennis of Mississippi.

Their religious persuasion seems to be more fundamentalist than liberal with several conservative politicians having undergone the lives of inner Washington politicians over the years as well as during their more recent sojourn in that city.

This does suggest a renewal of so-called "Middle America" social and economic values, the values described by attacked by Richard Nixon before the years of the White House tapes and Ford now's shocked to find that Nixon had been using the deity's name more often in "expletives deleted" than in prayer.

Many Americans won't take kindly to more politicians with prayer meetings by their politicians. Far no other reason than Nixon's cynical religiosity still staggers many in the public.

Even his resultable resignation speech could not be delivered without the use of the name of the deity by the outgoing president.

"Dear, I think he was referring to draft-dodgers."

Economic Development Theme At Premiers' Conference

By DON O'HEARN

TORONTO — The annual premiers' conference which meets here next Thursday and Friday is held behind closed doors.

But the premiers and their secretariats are in on the preconference. Hints the word.

Which this year of all years is too bad.

For there could be some lively sessions at the conference. Some real laughs. In contrast to the I-love-you-you-love-me exchanges of the prevailing mood of most such conferences in the past.

It has been announced that the theme of this year's meeting will be "Provincial Cooperation for Economic Development."

This is a theme that could open up at least a half dozen good fights.

At the top of the heap of subjects could be and should be energy.

And what do we have here? Alberta and Saskatchewan, mainly Alberta, with the cream in the form of gas and oil. And with Alberta trying to beat it to, as much of it as possible, as it can to a new, home petrochemical complex.

Then Ontario looking for big new power projects and big new markets for its manufactured goods.

Premier Robert Bourassa of Quebec with his hydro-electrical and other projects looking for expansion already underway.

Nova Scotia can also taste the boost that petro-chemicals can give an economy and reportedly has been talking to Dow Chemical.

While at the other end of the country British Columbia has been having the same itch.

How do you "co-ordinate" these and other directly opposed ambitions.

It would at least be a great fun thing to see the 10 premiers giving it their try.

Then what does Ontario do about the old question of selling to the rest of Canada but buying from the U.S.?

This has been a sore point with the provincial Tory party.

Quite some time ago we threatened to attempt to at least try and do something about it by setting up an inter-provincial selling organization.

But nothing has developed with that idea.

So what do we say if we are asked about it.

That we've been too busy to care.

Further Belt-rightening Ahead for the U.K.

As Britons return to work after their traditional August holidays, they face the grim economic situation in their country's postwar history.

(Actually, tens of thousands of Britons did not even get away on holiday, because one of the biggest British tour wholesalers collapsed with their money—as a direct result of the latest economic crisis).

Some of the problems besetting the United Kingdom are much the same as Canada's, starting only in August 1972 in order to help end the government's incomes freeze—including a big jump in the balance-of-payments deficit is nearly double that of a slump in British exports and the sky-high cost of material imports of oil.

Inflation has been given virtually free rein in Britain, as in Canada. Rapid price escalation is thus slashing the purchasing power of consumers, and undermining the only reason for the gradual inflation—that is, to keep unemployment from getting out of hand.

Latest figures show an imminent rise in British unemployment, and predictions are that more than one million men and women may be looking for work during the coming winter.

To a great extent, Britain's best hope of reversing the economic downtrend and creating more jobs is that Germany and the United States will overcome their own economic problems.

Both of the industrial giants have been hit by serious slowdowns in economic activity this year, curtailing the trade which Britain, German hints of forthcoming West German tax changes are a good omen for the British—as President Ford's aid fund's promise to fight U.S. inflation vigorously could (if successful) help the British economy over the brink and into recovery.

Prime Minister Harold Wilson's Labor government cannot be blamed entirely for the country's economic crisis. The sharp rise in the cost of oil imports, for example, was not of Labor's making.

But the Laborites show no sign that they are ready to prescribe the strong, fair leadership necessary to stimulate production and half-inflationary price and wage increases.

Instead, the government's attitudes—as described by one major newspaper—seems to be, "whatever they can." It is busily enacting legislation to outlaw price-fixing in the area of trade—boldbreaking and the like—while blandly ignoring the noticeably restrictive practices of some labor unions.

The current economic decline is expected to lead to a new general election in October. Yet neither Labor nor the Conservatives appear willing to bite the bullet and apply tough, unpopular policies—wage restraints and higher taxes—to business and to individual savers.

It's true that the British have always muddled through in the past. It is true that neither Britain nor any other democracy has ever had to deal indefinitely with constantly rising inflation.

Man And Nature

The young wife of a Vancouver geologist who spends summers in the wild and beautiful country around Haines Junction in the Yukon close to the Alaska border, once told us of the hunters who come in by air to bag the magnificent moose which frequent that part of the world.

She was not impressed by these intruders into the stillness and beauty of that wilderness country, which is the Yukon kingdom. In another letter from the Yukon recently she spoke again of the animals and the mountains in this dramatic region of Canada's remote northland.

It was to be reminded of what a visiting bishop once said of Ceylon: "Where every prospect pleases and only man is vile."

And yet she met with these guns still come to such regions, not for the peace and aesthetic qualities they offer, but in quest of game and the dubious pleasures afforded by the kill.

We learn for instance in an article by John D. Moorhead in The Christian Science Monitor that a former U.S. air force pilot and Californian entrepreneur, Keith Larkin, has two reconditioned FBY-8s (war time Catalina amphibians) which he wants to use in a passenger and cargo service reaching some of the remotest parts of the world.

Moorhead continues: "His plans envisage one of the aircraft swooping down on some giant moose caught onto an isolated lake in British Columbia with a load of hunters and fishermen. Or scouring thousands of miles of ocean with a team of experts hunting for oceans oil."

Well there is ample scope and need for undersea oil and Mr. Larkin's ideas in this regard are admirable. But our remote mountain fastness where geologists go about their tasks and the wild animals that are in no fear of them roam . . . these are places that are spiritual as well as physical, rare landscapes which if not sacrosanct at least are the better without man's uncouth touch. That is not to say visitors should be barred — far from it. Only that both the environment and the wildlife be respected for what they are: part of earth's last natural realm.

Waste Ministerial Responsibility

Brantford Expositor

Once, waste was anything cast aside that was worthless. Now British Silk a Minister of Waste whose job is to organize the retrieval of discarded materials that have become valuable through shortage and scarcities, and to preserve the 55 million countrymen to stop throwing things away. Results are doing at around 18 million tons a year, if everyone cooperates, which is doubtful, they could yield, recycled or reused, an estimated 81 billion a year. With a balance of payments deficit currently running at $18 million a year, Britain could every saved penny it can get.

Actually, the new Minister of Waste is in a way the lofty successor to a humble scavenger of early 19th century called the rag-and-bone man. He made his rounds pushing a small cart down back streets and alleys, calling out to delight children swarming to trade empty bottles, jam jars, tins and rags for toys, or even for the colored balloons floating above the carts.

The exchange rate, so it seemed to his clients, was to rigged heavily in his favor. How often that can be paid only with a couple of candies. To get a balloon you had to hand over several bags, and they were nothing like as plentiful then as they are in these days of childhood and parental affluence. Sometimes, by pooling resources, enough bottles were produced to get a balloon. But how do grown children share a balloon? In the subsequent squabble it had a short life. Finally the rag-and-bone man took his collection and how much money he made was a mystery. But apparently there was a living in it.

Now, when waste paper in Britain has doubled in a year to $24 a ton and metal scrap is in strong demand, there are small fortunes to be made. With the recent rise of unemployment to nearly 700,000, the Minister of Waste should have no lack of collectors. But he will. Collecting junk is harder work than collecting jobless pay.

Driving Habits Under Fire

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

How much longer do we have to risk life and limb whenever we go on the road at the dictates of speed addicts who cross solid lines at bends, and on rises, weave in and out at 80 mph in built up areas, tailgate, drive at such speeds along four-lane highways that they have become uncontrollable and in many cases actually leave the ground?

How much longer do we have to listen to the excuses that every holiday weekend such as we can look forward to? Excuses? Is it impossible to control the minority so that the reasonable majority can travel in safety unharmed?

It is not the careful and considerate driver and they constitute the great majority on the road, who cause the accidents. It is the speed addict who is just as badly hooked on speed as anybody can get hooked on drugs or alcohol.

It is time steps be taken by such these drivers who read minimum every time they see the highway, who take chance after chance simply to get ahead of the car in front which might cut in at 60 on a two-lane highway. Every year we pass yet at 80.

These are the people who must travel a nightmares of nervous strain and all too often are involved in accidents. They should be curbed, so that citizens can live out their lives in peace.

Editor,
The Intelligencer:

I have been driving cars in this province for 44 years and have always tried to drive through the left side of the road the rules. Lately I have come to the conclusion that I am a real "odd-ball" because when I drive within the legal speed limit, whether in town or on the highways most of the other cars go by me. Sometimes I think though there was no enforcement.

I also read in the papers that there were laws prohibiting unnecessary noise, but the young people to-day with their "souped-up" cars, equipped with loud mufflers and high revving three, seem to be completely unaware of any such laws and could care less about the public. I live in a town and enjoy some peace and quiet, especially after 11:30 at night. The ambulance is not restricted to the car drivers but is also evident in these who own motorcycles — the more noise they can make, the better, or so it would seem.

Perhaps we require more law-enforcement officers, or perhaps those we have don't feel that they can be severe with the offenders. Whatever the reasons, we never see any driving by the law and many of the rules are broken every day. Maybe the answer is all fault and if more publicity were given to the increase terrorized and the amount of fines levied, it would serve as a deterrent.

Thank you for allowing me the space in your newspaper to express my thoughts on the matter.

"Concerned"

Editor's note: The media are not at fault in this connection. If there is one subject which this and most newspapers have dealt with consistently it is the matter of speed, careless driving, highway fatalities and the need to curb them. Every publishing the name of every speeding driver would act as a deterrent is another matter. One thing is certain: nothing seems to halt the upward trend in the accident statistics.

Memories of Mark Twain Country

Kingston Whig Standard

In his Life On the Mississippi Mark Twain wrote his unforgettable description of the process of galvanizing his iron compound. In a frantic action, the sleepy mid-day atmosphere of Hannibal, Missouri, was disturbed by the call: "Scamboat a - comin'!" Followed by the dusty main street of Hannibal, the hamlet suddenly joined the world activity.

It didn't take so very much in those ancient days (just after the American Civil War) to bring people of a town into the streets. Contented enough in their day-to-day torpor, they didn't require much to disturb their lot. When it was hot - and it generally was "scamboat hot" in Hannibal - people simply stayed inside or loafed in the shade. Even the dogs didn't move around much in Hannibal. They lay under the tilted chairs of the loafers who adorned the store-fronts, "chawin" unwisely and very occasionally exchanging a liquid word or two.

But when that high-pitched yell — usually delivered by a Negro boy — was belched on the waterfront - tore its way through the heat haze it was different. The tilted chairs abruptly hit the ground. The dogs were pinged and in the t'e jetty. The loafers displayed surprising reserves of energy, leaped to their feet down the straggling, dusty street, were joined and slammed abut with an alacrity which an observer from the Antipodes would hardly have thought could ever be shown by Hannibal citizens under any conditions.

And then the whole of Hannibal — the loafing dogs, the resurrected loafers; the storekeepers with their aprons untangling their flying legs; the old ones of both sexes, eyes gleaming with a fierce determination and the eruption from their own particular nowhere of children whose feet never really touched the ground - all fled to welcome the Great Goliath.

It must have been fun down there - at least when the steamboat came in. It didn't cost a dime - hardly anybody in Hannibal had a dime anyhow - you didn't need transportation, you knew everybody, and you shared everything.

Citizens Bureau

Editor,
The Intelligencer:

I was dismayed to learn that the Citizens Bureau is to become part of this years United Appeal.

This agency, which has cherished when up the culprits on behalf of the underdog and the exploited, now appears to be opting for the comfort and respectability associated with the other agencies of the appeal.

Hitherto the bureau has been relatively unshackled in its efforts for the citizen. Now it is to be severely encumbered in the dismal chain of intrigue and platitudes of the United Community Services.

I do not expect the bureau to receive enough money to pay any staff. After all most of this finds its way into the coffers of the YMCA and the UCC.

Perhaps the Citizens Bureau for past services — I think your new partnership will see them severely crippled.

City and Illegal Dumping

Editor,
The Intelligencer:

I must correct the impression conveyed by Mayor Robin Jeffrey that Belleville city council is doing all that they can to prevent illegal dumping in the municipality.

Mayor Jeffrey infers that the city council has been remiss in dealing with violators except the negative action taken to date.

Nothing is further from the truth. In 1976, bylaw 6653 was passed. It being a bylaw specifically aimed at dealing with the dumping of refuse, etc. Action provided for contained in the bylaw to deal with violators and the penalties that may be provided for.

"After a first warning, me bylaw and institute proceedings."

It is not the bureau of PACE or any other community organization to "educate" continual violators of our local municipal regulations. It is plainly the duty of our elected representatives.

Picton Fair Draws Record Crowd

PICTON — A record crowd of 13,000 persons passed through the gates of the Picton Fair this weekend, reclaiming it a model fall fair.

Past provincial president of fall fairs and exhibitions Phil Dodds, said he had attended more than 200 fall showings but has "never seen anything equal to the effort in Picton".

"Many fairs concentrate on midways and other forms of entertainment but we are trying to keep this an agricultural fair and believe this is the reason for its ever-widening success," he said.

The fair officially opened Friday night, drawing 2,000 persons. Saturday, 7,000 passed through the gates with an attendance of another 2,000 Sunday. This surpasses last year by at least 2,000, said fair secretary Arthur McCormack.

Mr. McCormack said attendance increases were not confined to people.

"We had a record number of horses showing . . . up 10 percent over any previous year," he said.

The three-day event, officially opened Friday night by Prince Edward County Warden, J. Keith McDonald, also featured speakers Judson "Jay" Hyer, MPP for Prince Edward - Lennox and mayor of Picton, James Bird. Welcoming them present at the opening was President of the Agricultural Society, Creighton Carr.

For the second consecutive year, Picton Fair's Grandstand Show enjoyed a capacity crowd. Attraction this year was Nashville recording star George Hamilton IV and his back-up band North Country, from his Canadian television show. For the country and western singer it was his second Picton Fair appearance, playing before an estimated crowd of 2,000 fans.

The Saturday night performance was also highlighted by Lyon Jones, Arpegio recording artist and native of Bancroft. For the Canadian singer, this was her first Picton appearance, and along with North Country provided entertainment during the first afternoon of the show.

Ralph Banbury, former agricultural representative for Brighton, assumes this year's segment of the 146-year old fair as "sequel to the Royal".

Youth Hurt In Mishap

BRIGHTON — William Sills, 18, of Elgin St., Brighton, remains in satisfactory condition in Trenton hospital today with neck and possible head injuries after being thrown from a car on Highway 30 less than a mile north of here early Sunday.

A passenger in a car driven by Charles Wilson, 16, of 198 Ontario St., Brighton, Sills was thrown from the vehicle when it struck the ground after being airborn for 60 feet.

Brighton provincial police said the Wilson car was southbound when it crossed the roadway and travelled 223 feet before rolling over and coming to rest.

The car catapulted into the air after hitting a culvert, police said.

Police have charged Wilson with careless driving.

Scouts Plan 21-mile Walk To Raise Money for Camp

TRENTON — An expected 300 scouts will be walking the highways and byways west of here, in two weeks, with each step adding pennies and dollars to the coffers of the Trenton District Council.

Scout-A-Thon '74 organizers now are beginning to count-down for a 21-mile march to raise funds for scouting activities in Trenton.

Public relations officer Cecil Paul said he plans to tour the 21-mile route by wheelchair and is shooting for sponsorship totalling $10 a mile.

Mr. Paul said he has set a goal of $60,000 for the event.

If his wheelchair doesn't get a flat, he said Friday, he'll make it all the way.

Mr. Paul, who is normally confined to a wheelchair, says he expects to have a little help along the way of the Saturday, Sept. 21 Scout-A-Thon.

District commissioner Clem Whitman will also be walking.

He emphasized that all walkers are welcome, though he added the majority will be scouts — from the six-year-old Beaver to 25-year-old Rover scouts.

The walk-a-thon is aimed at refilling the scout council's coffers, steadily dwindling since the last such effort five years ago.

Funds will be used in its leadership training program and in support of Camp Alyra, a scout camp at Stoney Lake, 60 miles north of Trenton.

A new project also will be paid for by the coming walk. Plans are set to erect two 1976. It is estimated the project will cost $2,000.

Walkers will start from the Trenton Community Gardens between 7-8 a.m. Sept. 21. The route moves into Carrying Place, past the Brighton Speedway, and back to the Gardens along Highway 2.

Crash Injures Two

COLBORNE (Staff) — Two people remain in Trenton Memorial Hospital's intensive care unit with possible head injuries following a single car, accident Sunday on Highway 401 near here.

In satisfactory condition are Linda Chow, 19, and Chan Chow, 23. Addresses of the two injured persons were not released.

Details of the mishap are sketchy as police continue investigation.

Lions Club Donate Truck

MARMORA — A $5,000-emergency rescue unit donated by Marmora and district Lions Club will be presented to the Marmora volunteer fire department at the Canadian Legion parking lot at 8 p.m. today following the Lions Club dinner meeting.

The presentation will be made before an audience of civic officials and local residents by the chairman of the Safety Committee, Norman Wilson, and fire chief Cecil Neal.

The truck will be equipped with a resuscitator, hose, power saws, air packs, first aid supplies and eventually short wave radio.

Some of the articles are already part of the fire department but other equipment such as a bodyjack will be added as the money is raised by the Lions Club.

Total value of the truck and equipment will reach $10,000.

Trucks Taken

TRENTON (Staff) — Brighton provincial police are investigating today the theft Sunday of two pickup trucks from a federal government garage and the subsequent burning of one in a barn east of Wooler Rd.

Police said they are still searching for the other truck, a 1974 tan-colored Chevrolet.

A police spokesman said Sunday the two trucks were stolen from a department of indian affairs and northern development garage on the east side of Highway 33, just north of here.

Authorities said the thieves may have gained access to the fenced-off property by canoe.

Two canoes were found upriver, at Lock 1 of the Trent River. Police said it appears an effort was made to sink one canoe.

The theft and what police described as "considerable" vandalism to the garage was discovered by a patrolling officer at 3:40 a.m. Sunday.

Later Sunday, police discovered the burnt-out barn of Carl Crewe, of RR 3 Trenton with one of the government trucks inside.

Authorities said they believe the truck was set afire and then driven into the barn.

No value has been set on the damage to the barn or the garage.

HAVING HOSPITAL INSURANCE IS FINE...BUT WHAT ABOUT WHEN YOU'RE LAID UP AT HOME?

MEN AND WOMEN, AGES 18 TO 59: YOU COULD GET UP TO $800.00 INCOME EACH MONTH FOR AS LONG AS 5 FULL YEARS

WHEN YOU ARE UNABLE TO WORK DUE TO ANY COVERED ACCIDENT OR SICKNESS
whether you are In Hospital or NOT.

You don't have to be in hospital to collect
This plan guarantees a cash income when you're laid up and can't work due to any covered accident or sickness . . . whether you're in hospital or not. Of course, we'll pay you while you're in hospital, but that isn't the point at all. Many times people are laid up due to an accident or sickness and never even go to hospital. Others may be hospitalized for a week or two and then laid up at home for a month, six months, or even years. We'll pay you for any covered disability, for as long as five full years; or until age 66, whichever occurs first.

Could you afford a disability that laid you up for months, even years?
You've heard and read how much it costs these days to be laid up when you've had an accident or get sick. Suppose you can't work and your income stops or is severely cut — what then? You'll have all your bills, all your obligations, all your money going out . . . but how much will be coming in?

Even if you already have some type of company coverage for sick pay or disability income — how long will it cover you, a few months, maybe even a year? Besides, there are usually some expenses your regular insurance will not cover . . . part of your hospital bills, doctors' bills, prescriptions and drugs. Also a housekeeper or extra help at home is often needed. That's why you — and just about everybody — could use a plan that provides a cash income when you can't work.

A cash income paid directly to you
Benefit cheques are paid directly to you. You can use the money any way you please. Benefits are tax-free-paid only if you change from your present job to one classified by the Company as more hazardous; or in the event of over-insurance, that is, if your benefits from this and similar disability policies were to exceed your normal income. We'll pay you over and above any hospital benefits you may collect, including those from your provincial health insurance.

Guaranteed renewable until age 65
Rates never go up because your age does
As long as you continue to pay your premium on time, the Company cannot cancel your policy. And rates do not increase as you grow older. Your quarterly cost cannot be changed unless there is a general adjustment up or down affecting all policies of this type in your province. You'll never pay more because of a change in your health or because of frequent claims or the amount of money you collect.

Here's the plan: Sickness & Accident Coverage when you're sick or hurt, in or out of hospital
With this Sickness and Accident Plan you're protected for all sickness, even nervous and mental illness, that begins on or after the day your coverage starts, or six months after in the case of cancer, coronary insufficiency, occlusion of coronary artery, tuberculosis or hernia. Pregnancy or childbirth are not covered. Pre-existing conditions (a condition you had before your coverage starts) are not covered for the first 24 months. This plan also covers all disabilities that occur within 30 days after an accident except those caused by suicide, attempted suicide, intentionally self-inflicted injury, war or military service in wartime and riot participation.

You choose the amount of benefits you'll need — and you decide when you want your benefits to begin
You can choose the amount of benefits you'll need and want — from $200.00 up to $800.00 each month. And you decide when you want your benefits to begin. Accident benefits are payable from the first day of disability; sickness benefits from the fifteenth day. However, if you prefer, this plan is also available at lower premiums, with benefits payable from the 29th, 181st or 181st day of disability for both accident and sickness. With these options, you can make your Commercial Travelers Disability Income fit with any other coverage for sick pay or disability income that you may already have. Even more important, these options let you determine how much you'll spend. Naturally, the longer the period before benefit payments start, the lower your premium will be.

Optional $10,000.00 accidental death and dismemberment protection
You can also add a $10,000.00 lump-sum benefit for accidental loss of life occurring within 100 days after an accident. The cost for this valuable option is the same regardless of your age.

If you're 18 to 59, man or woman, fill out the coupon now. It's too important to put off.
You spend no money now or when you apply — we'll protect you while you decide.

Flagler—Hopkins

The July 13 wedding of Lynn Bernice Hopkins and Mark Bernard Flagler took place in St. Mark's United Church, Carrollton, in a service conducted by Rev. John Morrison.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Hopkins, RR1, Corbyville, and the groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Phil Flagler, RR3, Belleville.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a square-necked organza gown edged with wide Alencon lace around neck, waist, and bentline flounce. The long sleeves were bepaled at the top with lace and then banded out in two more bands of lace. The bride's train and veil were attached to a large organza bow trimmed with lace and rhinestones, and she carried pink and red roses with baby's breath and white lace.

Matron of honor was Rosemary Conroyres, the bride's sister, in a capped-sleeved gown of flocked yellow swer taffeta with brocaded pink and blue flowers. She wore a white picture hat with yellow velvet trim and carried pink roses, white mums and baby's breath.

Bridesmaids were Lynda Hopkins, the bride's sister-in-law, in blue, Sandra Flagler, the groom's sister in pale green, and Sherri Hopkins, the bride's sister in pale pink as junior bridesmaid. Their bouquets were like that of the matron of honor.

Bobbi Ann Courneyes, the bride's niece was flower girl, and Dennis Hopkins, the bride's nephew, was ring bearer.

Serving as best man was Don Sinclair and as ushers Steve Cavalier, Reg Phillips, the groom's brother-in-law, and Phillip Flagler, the groom's brother.

After a reception at the Belleville Skating Club, the newly-married couple travelled east on their honeymoon. They now live at 346 Sidney

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Goodmurphy

Goodmurphy—Broomfield

Barry Lyent and Rev. Stephen Spurrel officiated at the service.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Broomfield of RR 1, Consecon, and the groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ross Goodmurphy of RR 2, Consecon.

Given by her parents in marriage, the bride wore a gown of organza over taffeta with a wedding ring collar, a sheer bodice insert bordered by a ruffle, long sheer sleeves with deep cuffs, an empire waistline and a skirt trimmed with two rows of lace, featuring a chapel train. Her fourtier illusion shoulder-length veil edged with daisy lace was caught by a daisy lace headpiece and she carried yellow roses and white carnations.

Judy White was matron of honor in an ice-blue Swiss dot organza halter-style gown. The neckline was bordered by daisy lace as were the skirt and self-cape. She carried a nosegay of white button daisies.

Bridesmaid was Darlene Hindley of Toronto who wore a similar gown but in pink. Her bouquet was also daisies.

The groom's niece, Angeline Healey was flower girl in a yellow gown with ruffled neckline and shoulders. She carried a miniature nosegay of daisies.

Brian Scott of Frankford served as best man and Edward Broomfield was usher.

The reception was held in the church hall, decorated for the occasion. After a trip to the eastern seaboard, Mr. and Mrs. Goodmurphy have made their home in Wooler.

Quinte Cuisine

Loreen Ellis is an active member of the St. Julien chapter of the IODE, the Women's Study Guild, and the executive of the Belleville Presbytery United Church Women. Now that the season for groups and clubs is opening again, Mrs. Ellis suggests this tasty casserole for taking to autumn potluck suppers. She's been asked for this recipe many times, and says that it will serve as many as 16 people.

Beef Casserole

six slices bacon
two large onions, chopped 1½ lbs. ground chuck
one cup chopped celery
one green pepper, chopped
one can mushrooms
one pkge. medium noodles
one can creamed corn
two cans tomato soup
salt, pepper, mustard to taste
Worcestershire sauce to taste
grated cheese to cover

Cut the bacon in pieces and fry until cooked but not crisp. Take out of pan and drain.

Then fry the onions in the bacon fat. Remove from pan.

Fry the ground chuck, and add to it the celery, pepper and mushrooms. Mix well, and place in a large heavy casserole.

Boil the noodles until done, about ten minutes. Drain well, and add to the casserole. Then add the corn and tomato soup, and mix all together while seasoning with the salt, pepper, mustard and Worcestershire sauce.

Top with grated cheese, and bake in a moderate oven (325-350 degrees) for one to two hours.

Baked in individual foil dishes, this can be frozen for family use as well.

Ann Landers

The Problem Girl in China

By ANN LANDERS

Your Problem Girl is in China as a member of the American Medical Association's delegation. There is so much to tell. I could become a crashing bore on the subject. But I'd like to share some insights about the human side of these incredible people.

Do the Chinese like Americans? Indeed they do. One need only say to a stranger on the street, "How how! "How are you and he gets a big smile and an extended hand. The Chinese love to "press the flesh". They are eager to demonstrate their friendship with a warm handshake. But don't try to give a child a coin or an adult a cigarette. They will politely refuse. What a welcome contrast to Hong Kong where begging on the street is the very young, the elderly and the handicapped is commonplace.

What are the cities like? Well, it depends. Shanghai is as different from Peking as Las Vegas is from Boston.

A great many Chinese smoke cigarettes and no one asks if you mind. I inquired of a chain-smoking Chinese doctor if he had heard of Surgeon-general's report. He replied, "Yes, but we do not believe it contains any conclusive evidence."

Cancer is the second biggest killer in China, after heart disease.

At formal dinners where the men wear no ties, one could there is frequent "toasting" with mao-tai. Dr. Jan Wood, internist from Indianapolis, described it as "rocket fuel." I substituted with orange pop which showed up at every meal even breakfast. If I barr or seen another bottle of orange pop it will be too soon. The same goes for overstuffed arm chairs with antimacassars. Love dailies.

There are no Jews in The Peoples Republic. "They were here, mostly physicians and merchants," I was told. But when Mao came in, the Jews left. Some went to Israel, others to America, but most of them went to Hong Kong and Canada."

Also conspicuous by their absence were blacks. When I inquired: "Why" I was told: "There are very blacks here, mostly from America." I kept looking, but I never saw a single one.

Every member of our delegation was delighted with the variety, artistry and quality of the food. It was magnificent! P.S. It isn't true that you're hungry in an hour. The tea was superb, but difficult to cope with because they serve it with the leaves floating around. You need a hole in your tooth to drink it. We were pleasantly surprised by the modern, air-conditioned trains, but appalled by the archaic plumbing. Ming Dynasty, no doubt, even in the best hotels.

Chinese women have no interest in style. They wear no makeup and no jewelry, except the standard stainless steel wrist watch. When I saw no wedding rings I asked why. The reply: "Wedding rings have not been worn here since the revolution in 1949." "How then," I inquired, "can a person tell if a woman is available for marriage." The answer caused a roar of laughter. A Chinese physician replied: "It is impossible to tell from the outside."

I asked a young interpreter what impressed him as most unusual about the visitors he had met from our country. His response was beautiful. "All you Americans look alike."

Successful Living

Love Blows Hot and Cold

By DORIS CLARK

My boy friend tells he a lot of his friends want to take me out and that I should go. He wants to spend a lot of time with his boy friends. This is something he could never do when he went out with his ex-girl friend - who was once pregnant by him.

I want to believe him when he says it's just a phase he is going through and he wants me to wait for him. I think he would go back with his ex-girl friend if she would let him, but fortunately I don't think she will because of her money and conceit.

Somehow I felt I was used - I was just someone he could fall back on to cover his hurt when that friend ran over.

I'd wait forever for him because I love him. Love at First Sight

Dear Love:

Your dear love blows hot and cold. In a part of your letter which I did not have room to publish you indicate his bad temper as well as that lightning-fast courtship of five days which resulted in a ring.

I'd say he was caught on the rebound of his previous heartbreak. He may still grow up, but there have been times when a good restored and loving person like yourself has married such a human bit of turmoil only to have it worsening situation, resulting in divorce several years later.

If he wants to break your engagement, do it and point out that both of you are free to go out with others and so that, too.

(Talking it over helps. Write to Doris for help with your dilemma, care of this newspaper.)

OASA Senior B Playoffs

Devolin Gets By Kingston

KINGSTON (Special) — Devolin Motors of Belleville had, just about everything going right here Saturday in an Ontario Amateur Softball Association Senior B playoff contest.

About all that was lacking as the visitors wrapped up the set in two straight, was enough runs to make things interesting for pitcher Larry Griffin.

But as it turned out, Griffin didn't need much. His mates on the one run his mates got him stand up as he recorded a two-hit, 11-strikeout shutout.

His walked four.

Given excellent fielding support by his mates, Griffin twice saw a rumor advance to third base but each time, he got out of the jam.

Devolin reached off a pair of twin killings to help the cause.

In the third, with Millen on third and Jack Lynch on second and only one out, first baseman Eric Maher hauled in Chestnut's pop fly and fired to shortstop Rick Rosebush to double up Millen.

It was Devolin second sacker Ray Lumsden's turn in the eighth.

Kingston's Lynch reached first on the game's only error but was quickly erased as Lumsden took on third strikes while walking three.

Don Turner and Clarence Brockman each slammed a homer and drove in a pair of runs for SACO. Brockman also had a single to his credit. Jerry Rosat supplied a double and a single while Ron Begley, Darrell Gutman and John Hersey each had two singles. Rounding out the Belleville hitting were Bob Hodge and David Gee with one single apiece.

Only five Cedar Hill players managed to solve Golab's shots. Scott McMaster collected a double. Singles went to Jeff McGibbon, Steve Hastings, Grant Balden and Conroy.

In the provincial semi-final, Golab will meet the winner of the Grantham-Sarnia playoff.

Thompson's roller, got the tag on the runner and fired to first to complete the twin killing.

The only scoring took place in the top of the fourth.

Jim Horwood opened with an infield single and moved to second on a Rosebush sacrifice. John Burnside's chitchat single plated Horwood.

Charged with the loss was veteran Duke Van Hooser who went the distance on an eight-hitter, handing seven and walking only one.

Bruce Hickin hammered a triple for the winners' only extra-base hit. Checking in with a pair of singles each were Griffin and Burnside. Horwood, Rosebush and Maher had the others.

Kingston's safeties, both singles, went to Thompson and Paul Hanna.

OASA Peewee

SACO Advances To Semi-final

Backed by a solid fielding display and plenty of support at the plate, Tim Soule pitched Belleville SACO Peewees to a berth in Ontario Amateur Softball Association semi-final action, Saturday.

Matched against Cedar Hill in the third and deciding game of their quarter-final series, SACO said it with a 13-hit attack on three Cedar Hill pitchers as the Belleville youngsters scored a 9-3 win.

On the way to the win, Soule struck out four and walked two while limiting the visitors to five hits, only one for extra bases.

Dave Gordon, Jim Martindale and Mark Connor shared the Cedar Hill pitching. They managed to retire one batter per two batters while walking three.

Mark McDonnell, secretary-treasurer of the Belleville Minor Baseball Association, presents Ty MacEachern Memorial Trophy to Johnny Trudeau who represents J. J. Trudeau team, champion of the tadpole division. At left, is team coach Barry Strathern. Looking on is John Trudeau. Presentation of awards and crests took place Sunday at Parkdale as BMBA officially wrapped up the 1974 season.

Junior A Series Tied

Ellis Juniors Bounce Back

The Ellis Juniors lost 4-3 to Scarborough Saturday, but bounced back on home round Sunday to defeat Scarborough Electro-Comp 2-1 and even their best-of-three Ontario Amateur Softball Association quarter-final series at 1-1.

After a three week lay-off the local Juniors found themselves off track in the opening innings of Saturday's contest. John Spracklett doubled and Jim Richardson singled to account for the only hits Belleville got.

Rick McKenzie was on the mound for the winners. He struck out 15 and did not walk a man.

John Spracklett took the loss, fanning five, walking one and allowing 10 hits.

Bill Van Ditmarsch led the way for Scarborough, with two doubles and a pair of singles. Phil Enlgish was next with four singles.

Industrial Softball

Lenders Lead Final 3-2

Quinte Leaders moved one win away from the playoff championship of the Belleville Industrial Softball League, Sunday, recording a come-from-behind 7-5 win over Black Diamond to take a 3-2 lead in games in the final set.

Down 5-3 after four innings, Leaders clicked for a pair in the fifth and staged a three-run rally in the sixth to wrap it up.

Terry Murphy and Mark Sheridan shared the pitching duties for the winners, Sheridan came on in the fifth to pick the win, handcuffing the one run his mates got in the set in two straight, was enough runs to make things interesting for pitcher Larry Griffin.

Given excellent fielding support by his mates, Griffin twice saw a rumor advance to third base but each time, he got out of the jam.

Devolin reached off a pair of twin killings, to help the cause.

In the third, with Millen on third and Jack Lynch on second and only one out, first baseman Eric Maher hauled in Chestnut's pop fly and fired to shortstop Rick Rosebush to double up Millen.

It was Devolin second sacker Ray Lumsden's turn in the eighth.

Kingston's Lynch reached first on the game's only error but was quickly erased as Lumsden took on third strikes while walking three.

Don Turner and Clarence Brockman each slammed a homer and drove in a pair of runs for SACO. Brockman also had a single to his credit. Jerry Rosat supplied a double and a single while Ron Begley, Darrell Gutman and John Hersey each had two singles. Rounding out the Belleville hitting were Bob Hodge and David Gee with one single apiece.

Only five Cedar Hill players managed to solve Golab's shots. Scott McMaster collected a double. Singles went to Jeff McGibbon, Steve Hastings, Grant Balden and Conroy.

In the provincial semi-final, Golab will meet the winner of the Grantham-Sarnia playoff.

An Ace For Don

Though he's only been golfing for two years, Don Douglas recorded a hole-in-one at Bay of Quinte Country Club Sunday.

Douglas sood the 12th hole with a five iron. He didn't do quite as well on the remainder of the course, however, as his golfing buddies, Jack Stewart, Rod Coyne and Earl Fawcett will testify.

Douglas finished the 18 hole, par 72 course with a 97.

Australia-U.S. Tennis Final

FOREST HILLS, N.Y. (AP) — Evonne Goolagong, in her heyday, and Ken Rosewall in the twilight of their careers, were left battling to retain Australian supremacy of the United States Open Tennis championship, after Sunday's semi-final play.

Miss Goolagong toppled Chris Evert, and won the right to meet Billie Jean King of the United States. Rosewall defeated defending champion John Newcombe and set up a rematch of Wimbledon, where Jimmy Connors needed only three sets to take the title—the only major crown to elude Rosewall in his long career.

Miss Evert, the favorite among the women, came back from a two-day break caused by bad weather and gave Miss Goolagong a good run. But Evonne, with a 6-4, 4-3 lead when the day's action was halted, won Miss Evert, 6-4, 6-7, 6-3, and kept alive Australia's hopes of a sweep of the women's last year by Margaret Court.

Mrs. King was well rested for today's final. She hadn't played since Friday when she beat Julie Heldman, 2-6, 6-3, 6-1 in a match as dismal as the weather.

Connors, Chris's fiancee, protected his No. 1 seeding against a tough Tsvetanovan, Rosecoe Tanner, 7-6, 7-6, but after Rosewall eliminated Newcombe, 6-7, 7-6, 7-6.

Connors said his nerves failed him but both he and Tanner were returning well. In the tie-breaks in each set, Connors was best.

Both Miss Goolagong and Miss Evert were unhappy about the long delay in their match.

"If we had stayed on, I could have won in two sets and Miss Goolagong, who beat Chris for the Australian Open title last January, "I just didn't have the same feeling today."

Miss Evert came from behind and won the second set in a 10-point tiebreak, leveling the sets at one-all. But she said it hadn't helped her confidence.

"I was kind of emotionally drained," she said after losing the match," she said. "I really think I squeaked through the second set.

It was the first setback for the 19-year-old since Mrs. King beat her in an indoor tournament in New York last March.

Since then, she had won 38 straight matches and 10 tournaments including Italian, French and Wimbledon championships.

Rosewall got another crack at Connors, 17 years his junior, when he broke Newcombe's service at 5-3 in the second set.

Mrs. King has won five Wimbledon titles but was thwarted in 1971 when Evonne, on the shortest of tennis stardom, stunned her before she reached the final. Their over-all record is 4-1.

Another Save for Hore

Whitley Goalie Robs Cobourg

TRENTON — What happens when the league's most proficient scoring machine's team is the top performer in the 16-team Bay of Quinte Soccer Association?

It happened at Centennial Park here, Saturday, and before it's over, there'll be plenty of heads left shaking in amazement.

Trenton Whitley's Terry Hore who went through the 13-game regular season in scorching fashion while recording a goals against average of 1.00 and chalking up nine shut outs, stood Cobourg off in their high-powered show on he ear.

The Trenton side needed extra time before pulling out a 2-1 victory in the Bay of Quinte Challenge Cup play.

Tony's averaged very close to five goals per game on the season. The league's top snipper, Jim McDonald had it Nimself. Team captain Alex Ewart had 10.

After saturday's twitch, Van Balen praised Hore's outstanding effort.

"Without Hore, we best then in three ..... maybe five goals," he said.

Van Balen didn't get much of a chance to look back on this one. Whitley coach Ray Bateman had young Mike Roach covering the Cobourg ace.

Roach did his job and did it well. And he found time to set the play in motion for the game's first goal, early in the match.

Intercepting a Cobourg pass, Roach sent the ball to Terry Blight who relayed to Jim McDonald. That speedster had the ball in the net before Tony's defenders had time to react.

It wasn't until late in the second half that Cobourg managed to break through for the equalizer. Steve Miller got his bode-in shot back on a cross from Ben Veenhof and it was 1-1.

Hore saved his best stop for Van Balen.

With regulation time running out, referee John O'Neill awarded the visitors a penalty shot when Blight prevented a sure goal by calling off a catch when the ball was about to go into the net.

Van Balen is dangerous from any position, once he's within range. From the penalty spot, he's a sure thing.

Did not this time.

Hore got a first to the ball, timing his dive perfectly, as the Cobourg ace picked the corner.

And what a lift that play gave Whitley's.

In the 36-minute overtime, Whitley's came up with a sure thing of its own. And this one didn't fail.

A foul in the penalty area gave the home side the opportunity it was looking for.

Bob Arsenault got the call. For the third time this season, he clicked from the penalty spot, and the Cobourg side was out of Challenge Cup play.

Switched from the wing to midfield, Chauncey Soderberg was a Trenton standout as was Len Hart, who moved from the half line to fullback for this one.

Orioles Closing In

Yanks and Sox In Showdown

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Boston Red Sox and New York Yankees can forget about the first 155 games of the American League baseball schedules.

Only the last 17 games count now, starting tonight when the two teams tied for second place in the AL West meet in the first game of a two-game series at Boston.

The Red Sox downed Milwaukee Brewers 8-6 Sunday to move into a first-place with Baltimore Orioles, who took an 11-3 rounding from the Tigers at Detroit.

Baltimore Orioles stayed a game out of the lead despite a 7-4 loss to Cleveland Indians. The Orioles open a two-game series with the Brewers.

In Sunday's other games, Texas Rangers clipped Oakland A's 5-1, Minnesota Twins beat Kansas City Royals 8-4, and Chicago White Sox shaded California Angels 1-0.

On Saturday, the Orioles edged Cleveland 3-2, the Red Sox shaded Milwaukee 4-3, the Rangers trounced Oakland 8-2, the Royals blanked Minnesota 1-0, the Angels tripped Chicago 3-1, and the Tigers whipped New York Yankees to end the nightcap 14-3.

Bill Freehan had a grand-slam homer and three singles and drove in seven runs as Detroit slowed New York's pennant drive. Joe Coleman, 15-12, held the Yankees to seven hits.

The Tigers are 9½ games behind, last in the East.

Freehan's homer capped a five-run, two-out, third inning against Dick Tidrow, 11-12. Gary Sutherland singled in the first run. Al Kaline followed with an infield hit and Ben Oglivie walked to set the stage for Freehan.

Dwight Evans hit a two-run homer, Dwight Evans had a key double and Dick Pole clubbed sparkling relief ball to lead Boston over Milwaukee.

Tiebreaker for starter Juan Marichal after Milwaukee scored two runs and had the bases loaded with one out in the first. Pole gave up a two-run single to Tom Johnson, but was in command until the eighth inning when the Brewers scored their final two runs.

Cleveland used home runs by Leron Hendrick, Tom McCraw and Charlie Soltes to stop the Orioles' 10-game winning streak. Hendrick's homer put the Indians in front, 3-0, in the first inning and McCraw's belt made it 3-0.

Baltimore set an AL record in its Saturday win when it ran its shutout string to 54 innings before Cleveland touched Ross Grimsley for two runs in the ninth.

The Orioles, who had five shutouts in a row, topped the rookies-inning streak of 47 set by the 1967 Indians.

Lee Richard's third-inning double was only hit off Andy Hassler—led to the only run of the game as Chicago beat California.

Fezler Finally Wins One

COLUMBUS, Ga. (AP) — Forest Fezler fired a five-under-par 65 Sunday for a 271 total to capture the $100,000 Southern open golf tournament by one shot over veterans Bruce Crampton and J.C. Snead.

Fezler, 34, who in three years on the tournament trail has been a runner-up five times but never winner, said: "I began to think maybe I would never win."

But Sunday he took the $20,000 first prize with his nine-under-par total over the par-70 course.

Snead had a final-round 67 and Crampton a 68.

Fezler increased his 1974 earnings to $98,153. He won more than $100,000 last year and had second-place finishes in the Southern, Gleason and Canadian Open.

This year, Fezler was second in U.S. Open and the American Golf Classic.

Mike Hill—took fourth place with a 278 after a 67 while Ben Crenshaw, Phil Rodgers and Jim Ferrell tied for fifth at 277. Crenshaw had a 72, Rodgers a 69 and Ferrell a 68. Tommy Aaron, with a 73, was at 278.

Snead, Crenshaw and Aaron were Saturday's co-leaders.

Bobby Hull—Knee Problem

Hull Injured In 3-2 Loss

CALGARY (CP) — Team pros. Canada "It lost the first game of its eight-day history, Sunday, but club officials were more concerned about Bobby Hull's injured knee.

team Canada, made up of players from the World Hockey Association, lost 3-2 to juniors from the Western Canada Hockey league.

Hull, sparkling of the club since it opened practice Sept. 1, hobbled off the ice late in the second period and returned a few minutes later. However, he did not play in the third period.

Dr. Gerry Wilson said Hull had aggravated an old injury to his left knee.

Hull said he is certain to play Sept. 17 in the first game of Team Canada's eight-game series with Russia. The series begins in Quebec City and ends Oct. 6 in Moscow.

Hull was hurt when he collided with a junior defenceman and the pain kept him out of the rink while Don Ashby scored the first junior goal at the other end.

Repeating that the scores in this five-game exhibition series are unimportant, Team Canada coach Riley Harris said he will discontinue using the five defencemen who saw the most ice the first three games.

"I can't say enough in praise of the juniors," said Harris. "With their reinforcements, they're a great hockey club."

Most promising again were rookies Dennis Sobchuk and Pat Price, who signed with WHA clubs after illustrious junior careers.

Harris said there is no provision to take any juniors into the Russia series unless there is injury or illness "or unless we change our policy."

He would not elaborate but manager Bill Hunter said the final make-up of the team will be discussed again after the exhibition series ends.

Throughout the final period of the hard-fought contest, a crowd estimated at 8,000 in the 6,800-seat Stampede Corral cheered every move by the juniors and booed some of the

Australia Challenges

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — Millions of dollars have been spent trying to unbolt the America's Cup sailing trophy from its glassed-in pedestal at the New York Yacht Club.

Beginning Tuesday, Australian real estate baron Alan Bond will get some idea whether the estimated $5 million he has put into the latest challenge will accomplish what 21 other foreign boats could not do.

Bond believes he has a winner in Southern Cross, an all-aluminum, cigar-shaped beauty that mounts 1,311 square feet of sails, measures 87 feet, three inches from tip to stern and carries a working crew of 11—the least of which weighs in at 200 pounds.

Southern Cross, the fourth challenger from Australia in recent America's Cup history, goes against the United States' defender, Courageous, in a best-of-seven series.

The arena for what many U.S. yachtsmen believe will be the toughest defence in years is a triangular, 21.4-mile Olympic course located seven miles offshore in Rhode Island Sound.

Peterborough Takes Opener

NEW WESTMINSTER, B.C. (CP) — Burnaby Cables went into the opening game of the best-of-seven Canadian Junior lacrosse final with the same lineup that captured the Pacific Junior A Lacrosse League championship.

However, after just one meeting with Peterborough PCOs, the eastern representatives say that Minto Cup series, the Burnaby manoeuvrings in wondering a rapid about-face.

"We will have to make certain changes on defence and allow our offence," coaches coach Dan Matthews said after watching his team lose 14-11 to the PCOs.

Peterborough had a 3-3 lead after one period and went ahead 13-6 by the second intermission.

Steve Pinskett led the way for the PCOs with four goals. Team-mates Ken Myers and Paul Evans added two each while singles came from Dave Green, Jim Johnston, Bob Watson, Terry Hughes, Gord Duncan and Randy Bryan.

Kelly McLaughlan was Burnaby's leading scorer with four goals and a pair of assists. Mike Holden added three goals while John Kopovich scored twice. Burnaby's other goals came from Dan Perreault and Bill Kirkland.

A four-man defence with another player switched at centre proved a successful floor setup for Peterborough. The system created opportunities for several breakaway passes which resulted in four of the PCOs' goals in the first period.

Peterborough was assessed 35 minutes to penalties against 18 by Burnaby and the PCOs scored six times when they had an extra man on the floor.

The game threshhead to turn into a rout when Myers scored early in the third period to give Peterborough a 13-5 margin, but Cables scored six of the game's seven remaining goals.

Tim Bernie was the distance in goal for Peterborough, stopping 36 shots. Burnaby goaltenders Richard Zecchel and Garry Greer combined for a total of 37 stops.

The PCOs have not been defeated in 44 games this year and the Burnaby management is hoping the reinforcements for the second game of the series Tuesday.

Trevino, Player Go at It Again

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — Lee Trevino and Gary Player, tide at the end of the regulation 36 holes, struggled through five playoff holes to no conclusion Sunday and will return for more sudden death play today in the World Series of Golf.

Trevino and Player were to return at 10 a.m. EDT, in the showdown for a $50,000 first prize.

"I'd like to be able to call it a tie and not come back," said Player, the little South African who won the Masters and British Open titles earlier this season.

"I agree," said Trevino, the Professional Golfers' Association champion. "We've both got things to do, but it would be a big disappointment for the people who went to see a winner and for the sponsors who put up the money."

The loser will receive $25,000. Trevino, who once trailed by six strokes, caught Player at the end of the regulation 36 holes with a one-under-par 69 and two-round total of 138.

Player, a three-stroke leader at the end of Saturday's first round, had a closing 71, two over par on the 7,180-yard Firestone Country Club course.

Host pro Bobby Nichols, the Canadian Open champion who got into this event as the first alternate, managed a 72 for 143 and United States Open champion Hale Irwin was last in the four-man field at 72-148.

The World Series of Golf normally brings together the winners of the four major tournaments—the U.S. and British opens, the Masters and PGA—but Nichols became eligible after Player took two of the qualifying events.

Boersma Paces Liverpool

LONDON (CP) — Liverpool attacked fiercely for 90 minutes Saturday to defeat struggling Tottenham Hotspur 2-0 and remain undefeated at the top of Division I in the English Football League.

Phil Boersma scored three goals for Liverpool, which has now won five of its first six games, and drew the other for 21 points. Boersma's goals made him the top First-Division scorer with four.

Ipswich retained their unbeaten home record with a 1-0 win over Everton and remained in second place with 18 points.

Manchester City drew with Coventry 2-2 to stay in third place with nine points.

After its defeat, Tottenham dropped to last place with four points.

Coventry took an early 2-0 lead on goals by Brian Alderson and Chris Cattlin, but Manchester United came back with goals in the last 20 minutes by Rodney Marsh and Lou Macari.

Stoke City moved above Carlisle United and Everton into fourth place with a 2-0 win at Carlisle.

Alan Hudson and John Ritchie scored for Stoke City.

Leeds United drew with Luton 1-1, with Barry Noble tying the score for Luton after Allan Clarke put the division champions ahead 1-0.

Derby now is the only First Division team without a win, following Birmingham's 4-0 win at Queen's Park Rangers. Centre half Joe Gallagher scored the goal after an error by the London club's defenceman Richard Teale.

In Division Two, Manchester United had its perfect record when Nottingham Forest held

McLEOD UNCLAIMED

LOS ANGELES (CP)— Defenceman Jim McLeod, of the World Hockey Association, announced Saturday that goaltender Joe Gallagher of Houston Aeros has become a free agent. McLeod had had the lowest goals-against average last year in the WHA, was released by the Aeros when he and Houston's management could not come to contract terms.

Cables are allowed to pick up five players from other teams in the FJAL for the national final and team manager Jack Crosby said forward Ray DeMarco of Richmond and defenceman Rick Boucher of Surrey will join the lineup.

The Cables also carry pick up high-scoring Victoria forward Kevin Alexander and Norm Baker and Richmond goaltender Jules Lund.

As for the pickups, Peterborough coach Ben Flegel was confident following the Sunday victory.

Als Whip Argos, Riders Clawed

By GLENN COLE
The Canadian Press

While Montreal Alouettes managed to amass 38 points against Toronto Argonauts, most of the credit for Sunday's 38-0 Eastern Football Conference win should go to the defence.

Montreal defenders limited the Argos to a net offence of 112 yards and forced three first-half turnovers which the offence converted into 24-0 lead early in the second quarter.

"It was our defence's best game," said Rod Rust, Montreal's defensive coach.

In EFC action Saturday, Ottawa Rough Riders lost 16-10 to Hamilton Tiger-Cats. The Riders failed to score a touchdown and have managed one major in the last four games.

A field goal by Don Sweet got Montreal rolling in the opening quarter.

Then the defence went to work. Dickie Harris picked off a Mike Rae pass and rambled 39 yards to the Toronto 13. That set up a 13-yard toss to tight end Peter Dalla Riva from quarterback Jimmy Jones for Montreal's first TD at 10:25.

Just 73 seconds later, Skip Eaman caught a 15-yard pass from Jones for the second Montreal touchdown which was set up when Glen Weir recovered a fumble by Toronto running back Ed Shuttlesworth.

Before the second quarter was a minute old, Jones hooked up with Johnny Rodgers for a 36-yard TD strike just after Marv Luster had picked off a Rae pass at the Toronto 33.

Jones ran for a 16-yard TD in the third quarter and Dallas Rae clubbed his second TD pass later in the quarter to combined with Jimmy Wade, making a rare appearance at the helm of the Montreal offence.

Sweet converted all five Montreal TDs. Zebon Andruszkyn kicked two field goals to account for the Toronto scoring.

Joe Moss, Argos interim head coach following the dismissal of John Reuch after last week's loss to Montreal, said his team was upset by the coaching change. "It's like taking the steering wheel out of a car."

Ottawa coach George Brancato said his offensive unit showed a complete lack of effort Saturday against the Tiger-Cats and added he would go with "whoever I can find them."

At one point the Riders had a first down at the Hamilton 16 but quarterback Jerry Keeling had two passes intercepted. Ottawa had to settle for three field goals by Gerry Organ who also added a single.

Ian Sunter accounted for all of Hamilton's points with five field goals and a single.

Richard Petty Breezes to Win

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Richard Petty, driving the last eight or 10 laps on a right front tire that was going flat, breezed to an easy victory Sunday in the Capital City 500 Grand National stock car race.

The veteran—winning for the eighth time in the last nine races at Fair-grounds Raceway—was more than a lap ahead of Benny Parsons at the finish.

Quebecois Get Back In Series

MONTREAL (CP) — Montreal Quebecois outscored Rochester 8-1 in the third period en route to a 10-11 win over the Griffins in the third game of their National Lacrosse League semi-final playoff series.

The Griffins lead the best-of-seven series 2-1. They will resume here Tuesday night.

John Davis of Rochester, Dave Litzenberger, Dave Tasker, Dale McKenzie and Eddie Sparks each scored a pair of goals for the Quebecois, who had a 46-39 edge in shots on goal.

Rick Beasley, Yvan Blanchard, Rob Kimberley, Sandy Lynch, Bill Bradley, Jim Lynch, Brandon Rowe-Sherman and goaltender Dan Crocker got the other Quebecois goals. Crocker's goal came while the threat was killing a penalty in the second period.

Tom Phair and Dave Wilfong each scored twice for the Griffins while Jan Magee, Len Powers, Graeme Galz, Gaynor Conner, Gary Neuman, Larry McCormack, and Kevin Parsons added single goals.

TIED AFTER ONE

A crowd of 7,000 watched the teams battle to a 6-6 sawoff in the first period and Montreal outscore the Griffins 6-4 in the second.

Referees Bill Dicks and Carm MacMillan assessed 71 minutes in penalties, including game misconducts to Gord Galechuk of Montreal and Brian Wilson of the Griffins.

Wilson was ejected from the game in the second period when he failed to go to the penalty box after receiving a misconduct for disputing a possession call.

Galechuk was tossed when he interfered in a fight between Brian Brennan of the Griffins and Montreal's Davis.

'49ers Double Losers

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

San Francisco '49ers, who have become accustomed to losing National Football League exhibition games, will be out one Sunday and their starting quarterback as well.

Defensive ends Fred Dryer and Jack Youngblood teamed up for a 54-yard third-quarter touchdown play, leading Los Angeles Rams to a 17-7 win over the '49ers.

Steve Spurrier, scheduled to open the season as the '49ers' No. 1 quarterback, will be out of action about two months after suffering a right shoulder separation.

Atlanta Falcons downed Denver Broncos 30-14 and New England Patriots stopped Philadelphia Eagles 27-17 in Sunday's other exhibition games, winding up the pre-season schedule.

The regular schedule opens next weekend.

In Saturday's games, Oakland Raiders trounced New York Jets 31-6, Miami Dolphins whipped Chicago Bears 28-7, Detroit Lions downed Cleveland Browns 21-7, New Orleans Saints topped Houston Oilers 24-16 and Minnesota Vikings rolled over San Diego Chargers 42-0.

Winners in West Share the Lead

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Saskatchewan Roughriders and Edmonton Eskimos moved into a first-place tie in the Western Football Conference during the weekend after victories over British Columbia Lions and Winnipeg Blue Bombers.

Ron Lancaster threw the Roughriders to a 38-16 win over Lions Saturday while the Eskimos humbled the Blue Bombers 24-2 Sunday.

Edmonton and Saskatchewan now have 16 points each, but the Eskimos have played one less game and have a 5-2 won-lost record compared with 5-3 for the Roughriders. The Lions (4-5) remain third, Winnipeg (3-6) and Calgary Stampeders two.

Commenting on the Saskatchewan win, fullback Geoerge Reed said the offence "didn't do anything differently in the second half (when they scored all their points). It's just that the defence gave us good field position.

"In the first half we had to march 100 yards, which is tough. Getting the field position makes things easier."

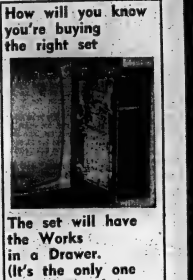
The Lions led 13-8 after the first half before a crowd of 36,187, but the Roughriders scored five second-half touchdowns, three of them on passes from Lancaster. Two of them were to Tom Campana and the other was caught by Steve Mazurak.

George reed scored on a six-yard run while Ron Lancaster added another touchdown with a 32-yard return of an intercepted Karl Douglas pass. Brian Berg kicked a field goal and five converts.

Lou Harris scored the lone British Columbia touchdown while Ivan MacMillan kicked three field goals and a convert.

The sellout Edmonton crowd of 21,346 almost saw something which has been missing from Canadian football for at least 25 years—a drop-kicked field goal. Calvin Harrell, Stuart Lang and Roy Bell scored touchdowns for the Eskimos who held quarter backs of 7-0, 14-0 and 17-1. Dave Cutler kicked a 37-yard field goal, and three converts to round out the scoring. The Winnipeg points were three wide field goal attempts in the third and fourth quarters by Walt McKee.

WINS TITLE



LOS ANGELES (AP) — Bobby Chacon unloaded a right uppercut to the chin of Venezuelan Alfredo Marcano in the ninth round Saturday night to stop the veteran South American and win the World Boxing Council's featherweight championship.

Chacon, 2, from the United States, used his superior boxing ability to build a lead and then landed nine straight punches in the ninth before putting the 27-year-old Marcano down. The fight was scheduled for 15 rounds.

Ethiopian Mob Demands Emperor Be Hanged

ADDIS ABABA (Reuter) — Thousands of people chanting "hang the emperor" swarmed into the centre of the Ethiopian capital Sunday in a new display of public fury against the monarchy.

The second demonstration against 83-year-old Emperor Haile Selassie in the space of a week lasted only 15 minutes.

Witnesses said troops and members of soldiers quickly converged on the square where the protest was held and urged the crowd to go home.

Officers told the crowd to "sit in the armed forces committee," now in control of the country, to redress grievances and injustices.

The crowd dispersed quietly after the demonstration was prompted by newspaper reports Saturday accusing the monarch and members of his family of hoarding billions of illegally acquired dollars in Swiss bank accounts.

The Sun says 82 reporters bought food, household items and cleaning goods. When identical brand names items were not available, the closest possible item was substituted.

The results of the survey show Canadian prices fared badly, with only two items cheaper in Toronto than in Niagara Falls, N.Y.

One dozen Grade A medium eggs cost 74 cents here and 73 cents across the border and Toronto lettuce was 35 cents compared to 49 cents in the U.S. The Sun says.

But a five-pound bag of sugar cost $1.79 across the border and $2.69 in Toronto, a difference of 78 cents.

Miss Welch's portrayal of a heroine but believable member of King Louis XIII's court is a highlight of the 20th Century Fox release.

There is no shortage of swashbuckling action as director Richard Lester built a reputation for pace in Beatle films A Hard Day's Night and Help.

And there is no shortage of talent.

In addition to the well-endowed Miss Welch, the cast includes Charlton Heston as the power-hungry Cardinal Richelieu, Fay Dunaway, Richard (Dr. Kildare) Chamberlain, Oliver Reed and Geraldine Chaplin.

With showings at 7 and 9.10 p.m., "Musketeers" is an adult entertainment feature that appeals to the widest range of audience ages and tastes.

Your Horoscope

By BERNICE BEDE OSOL

Tuesday, Sept. 10 —

ARIES (March 21-April 19) — Be sure to follow through on promises you've made to your mate's partner. Half-measures will awaken resentment you can do without.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) — You may feel you'll have time for both your responsibilities and your pleasurable pursuits today—but you won't.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) — You're apt to jump at the first price offered you for something you want. Do. Move decisively and bargain a bit.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) — In order to sell your ideas to others today, it's going to take more than just a light presentation. Know your subject thoroughly.

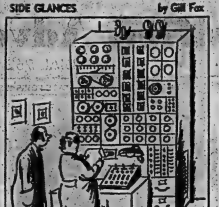
LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) — A kind sense of yours toward another will go unappreciated. This will anger you more than is reasonable.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) — This is not a good time to get too involved with friends where money is concerned. Something misled is wrong and hard feelings could result.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) — You're normally a very sharing person—but today you're likely to place your interests far above your teammates.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) — If you keep looking for ulterior motives in everything another does, you're bound to find something that will cause you undue distress.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) — Success in your group of friends has been rubbing you the wrong way lately. You may cross swords if you run into each other.



CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) — Rest you double check to be sure that one you think is in harmony with an idea of yours really is.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) — Don't attempt any task that is beyond your talents or capabilities. The result could be a big fiasco.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) — Even though the grass on the other side of the fence may be greener to you, you'll find out it isn't if you stray from your own back yard.

Re-refined Oil Said Top Quality

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — For Cameron L. Kerran, that dirty, sludgy stuff drained from an auto crankcase is the beginning of a cycle that not only eases the energy shortage, but is helping the environment, too.

That waste motor oil is the raw material for Kerran's Double Eagle Refining Co., one of the few oil re-refiners left in the United States. And Kerran says if restrictive laws on refiners aren't changed, the shortage of lubricating oils will make the gasoline and heating oil shortage look like a potentate's feast compared with a backyard picnic.

Kerran takes that dirty oil, runs it through a refinery and says the finished product is as good, or better than it was the first time around. And re-refined oil sells at only 60 to 70 per cent of the cost of new lubricating oil from a major oil company.

The waste oil comes from service stations, garages, truck lines and airports within a 600-mile radius of Oklahoma City. And, for Average Joe Motorist who changes his own car oil, Kerran has even placed barrels at fire stations where the old oil can be dumped.

But Kerran is worried about the future supply of lubricating oil.

"I've been to meetings where people who know a lot more about it than I do have presented papers saying that the lubricating oil in the last part of the barrel of oil that is going to be in much greater demand than anything else because the grade oil in the world today's not of lubricating oil quality," he said.

To add to the problem, Kerran said that "when the energy crisis got critical last winter, many of the industrial plants in the north and east began to use waste motor oil for fuel oil for industrial burners and boilers.

"Once it's burned, you've done—you'll never recover it."

The Double Eagle plant has been here since 1931 and started out as a service to garages which had to find a way to dispose of the oil they drained from customers' cars.

Kerran said that for each 100 gallons of waste motor oil, the re-refining process removes an average of 70 gallons of water, 10 to 15 per cent dirt and additives and five to 10 per cent gasoline or kerosene that have been poured in.

"From that 100 gallons of waste motor oil, we end up with about 55 gallons of good lubricating oil," he said. "And it's just as good, if not better, than the first time it came out of the refinery."

PROTECT DRIVEWAY

OTTAWA (CP) — Driveways and garages can be protected against salt damage next winter with coatings of linseed oil and kerosene, says the Consumers' Association of Canada. The first application should be a 50-per-cent mixture of the two and a second can be up to 100-per-cent linseed oil.

No Real Growth

Canada's gross national product grew by 3.6 per cent during the second quarter of 1974 to an annual rate of $137.8 billion, However, Statistics Canada said there was no real growth in the economy since the increase was due entirely to higher prices. The gross national product is the total of all goods and services produced by the economy. (CP Newsmap)

Baffin Island National Park Is for Experienced Hikers

OTTAWA (CP) — A new national park has no road access nor formal campsites and officials there discourage visits by the inexperienced.

Baffin Island National Park is located 100 miles north of Frobisher Bay, 1,300 air-miles northeast of Montreal. It is the first national park located above the Arctic Circle.

Its area of 8,300 square miles is more than three times that of Banff National Park and it certainly isn't overcrowded.

Parks Canada officials say they expect 300 visitors this year compared with 125 last year.

Baffin Island National Park offers no bed of roses. The terrain is rocky and rugged. Temperatures can hit the 80s during a summer day or fall below freezing at night.

But tourists hardy enough to get there are treated to some of the most spectacular terrain in the Canadian Arctic. The landscape is interspected by valleys carved out by glaciers—the scene can be seen there—from millions of years ago.

Vertical cliffs 3,000 feet high dominate fjords up to 30 miles in length. In the centre is Penny Ice Cap, the second largest continental glacier in the Northern Hemisphere.

Pangnirtung Pass is a glacial valley which extends 60 miles across the fjord from Cumberland Sound to Davis Strait.

Bill Cheffins, a planner with Parks Canada, travelled 50,000 miles before settling on the Baffin Island site for an Arctic national park.

"It is definitely for the experienced backpacker, mountaineer and hiker," he said.

"The mountains are some of the best climbing mountains in the world."

Mount Asgaard, The Peak and Mount Alab, just west of the Pangnirtung Pass, are between 6,000 and 7,000 feet above sea level.

Although smaller than mountains in the Rockies, Mr. Cheffins says they provide the same challenge.

The rock faces start at sea level while in the Rockies, the faces begin at 6,000 feet.

Polar bears, arctic foxes and barren ground caribou are there, to watch but to hunt. Whales, narwhals, seals and walruses frequent the fjords and arctic char can be caught in Cumberland Sound, south of the park.

During the summer, the slopes of Pangnirtung Pass are covered with wildflowers, ferns and multi-colored flowers.

Jumping Jacks for the park are Pangnirtung, south of the park, and Broughton Island, to the north.

Both are Eskimo communities and handicraft centres. Pangnirtung specializes in weaving, carving and printmaking and Broughton Island in carving.

From Pangnirtung, visitors travel 18 miles along a fjord to the entrance of Pangnirtung Pass. The trip can be done by car or by local freighter canoe, a 21-foot boat with square back and outboard motor.

The 120-mile return trip through the pass takes two to three weeks and can be dangerous.

The weather conditions are another problem, said Mr. Cheffins.

"It can be perfectly calm in the morning and you can have winds of 120 m.p.h. by 5 p.m."

For a safeguard for hikers, Inuit park wardens are stationed at three locations through the pass. They monitor weather conditions and radio for assistance if necessary.

The summer camping season lasts from early June to mid-August. By August, snow starts to fall on the floor of the valley.

Baffin Island National Park is accessible from Montreal by air. Return fare is $380 but five-day excursions brings the price down to $294.

Mr. Cheffins emphasizes that his trip is for experienced hikers who have equipment designed for arctic conditions.

Architect of Habitat Designs Arctic Towns

MONTREAL (CP) — Moshe Safdie, the Israeli-born whiz kid who dazzled the world with Habitat at Expo 67, has donned a pair of snowshoes to revitalize architecture in the land of the midnight sun.

At age 32, the internationally acclaimed architect is now designing a new city in Canada that became the basis of the Habitat modular building system, a revolutionary approach to urban housing and a mini-example of the Safdie architectural city.

Now, at age 36, the Montreal-based Mr. Safdie hopes to develop a style of housing which will turn Arctic communities "that look like construction camps" to esthetically-pleasing environments that southerners will not be in such a hurry to leave.

Mr. Safdie has been commissioned by the Northwest Territories government to design 61 housing units for government personnel — and 60 units for natives in Frobisher Bay on Baffin Island.

His plans are still incomplete, but in an interview in Montreal he said he expects the outcome will be clusters of inter-connecting units covered with the contours of the landscape.

"Before, all that was built in the North were matchboxes on a flat gravel pad," he said. Slopes will not be covered with Mr. Safdie's project.

While the units will be inter-connecting, Mr. Safdie does not want a project that will give inhabitants the impression of all being under the same roof.

"In the American self-bess, where self-contained communities were built under one roof, the atmosphere was depressing," he said, "and degenerate in a place like that."

Walkways connecting various units will be largely constructed of glass.

He said he saw in the North a completely metal pedestrian tube that people refused to use.

Southerners "have the impression people in the North are in a hurry to walk outside . . . to see their landscape. That's not true."

In the Frobisher Bay project, there will be no blatant distinction between housing for government employees and natives, as is evidenced in many northern communities.

The project, also, will not be a suburban ghetto contrasting to the rest of the town. Instead, Mr. Safdie hopes to blend his housing project throughout the town so existing buildings containing essential services will be physically close to the new homes.

Eskimos have been consulted on the plans, he says they want.

Their units will contain four or five bedrooms in consideration of some large Eskimo families.

"The location of the home is very important."

Eskimos, he said, want to be facing the water, or the neighboring hunting grounds.

"The white people are more concerned about being close to schools.

"The indigenous igloo may be reflected in domed roofs with skylights, which would have a glowing effect at night.

Large, central living areas, with rooms of adjustable size branching off them—an extension of the igloo philosophy of one, large living room—may be included in some of the units, he said.

The totality of Mr. Safdie's project must create an atmosphere of permanency, he said. Too many northern communities built haphazardly, look temporary and make it difficult for new residents to want to live there indefinitely.

Because of the short summer season for construction in the North, Mr. Safdie wants his housing project to be of a prefabricated nature.

He expects the units to be assembled in Frobisher Bay next July. Similar housing projects across the North might follow, he said.

If Mr. Safdie could have his own way, he would be building complete towns and cities, not just housing projects.

In his latest book, For Everyone a Garden (Tundra Books of Montreal, $25), excerpts are contained in a letter written to the magazine Avant Garde, that Safdie requested Mr. Safdie's ideas on the development of the binational of the United States in 1976.

Mr. Safdie's suggestion was to build a city like earth has never been before.

"A city which is urban and non-urban, which is building and non-building; a city which is a region; a city where you are one of 30 million, and you are also one of 30,000, and you can be with your family, and you are one.

"A city which is urban and non-urban, which is building and non-building; a city which is a region; a city where you are one of 30 million, and you are also one of 30,000, and you can be with your family, and you are one.

Hospital Workers Settle

NORTH BAY (CP) — About 1,600 northeastern Ontario hospital workers have accepted contracts with 18 local hospitals, Terry Zahara, chairman of the northern bargaining committee of the Canadian Union of Public Employees (CUPE), said Sunday.

The new agreements, retroactive to Jan. 1, 1974, give workers an average $1.38-an-hour increase, bringing the average wage for the non-professional to $4.83 an hour.

Open Space To Be Required

TORONTO (CP) — A consultant's report suggests that every new development in downtown Toronto be required to provide an area of public open space equal to the total size of its building site.

The 118-page report, which must be approved by city council, was prepared for the Toronto planning board by Counsil Smalley Concepts Ltd.

It criticizes the past practice of considering open space only in terms of form and design. It says developers should provide space that can be used by office workers, pedestrians and shoppers.

Co-op Housing Report Critical

TORONTO (CP)—The Globe and Mail says a confidential federal government report on the construction and financing of several student co-operative residences expresses concern at the interlocking directorships of the developers, architects and contractors who worked on several of the buildings.

In a copyright story, the newspaper quotes the report as saying construction costs of the buildings, built with loans of more than $27 million from Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. (CMHC), were controlled by architects who were also on the boards of the development companies.

It says a company controlled by the architects and another company controlled by their wives secured the ground-floor commercial rental rights at three of the residences.

The report was prepared last year for Ronald Basford, then minister of urban affairs, but was never made public despite several attempts by opposition members to get Mr. Basford to table it in the Commons, the newspaper says.

Prefer Ford

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — A majority of men in the United States would choose President Gerald Ford over Senator Edward Kennedy in a trial heat for the presidency, the Gallup poll indicated Sunday.

Of the sample 1,560 people polled, 57 per cent would vote for Ford, 33 per cent for Kennedy and 10 per cent were undecided.

The figures contrast sharply with those of last May, when the Massachusetts Democrat drew 39 per cent of the vote and Ford 36 per cent, with 11 per cent unsure.

Nixon Pardon Interferes

Ford Puts Off Amnesty Ruling

WASHINGTON (AP) — Pardon for former president Richard Nixon has brought President Ford mounting criticism and has sidetracked a Vietnam amnesty plan he was to have announced today.

Ford trained his own coalition for announcing terms of conditional amnesty for Vietnam-era deserters and draft evaders because he was focusing attention on Nixon's pardon, aides said.

Now no time is set for Ford's amnesty decision affecting about 50,000 men.

The president wants more time to consider the complex questions, said deputy press secretary John Hushen.

Several advocates of amnesty felt Ford's postponing his decision after the Nixon pardon might lead to a broader, less conditional program for the Vietnam group.

But Hushen emphasized that Ford has not changed his view that, unlike the "full, free and absolute" pardon he gave Nixon, Vietnam offenders must be judged case-by-case, category-by-category.

Ford has said his program includes the setting up of a civilian review board to adjudicate individual cases. He favors "earned re-entry" for the exiles and war resisters, who might be required to perform some civilian service for one to two years.

A high White House official said the delay resulted from the need for "getting on a swift bit of complex details put together," not from a change in policy.

The Veterans of Foreign Wars expanded its Ford blacklist not to relate the Nixon pardon to amnesty for draft evaders and deserters. They said the president should leave it to military and civilian courts to decide whether leniency is warranted.

Try to Halt Billion-dollar Drain

Canada Savings Bonds Interest Sets Record

OTTAWA (CP) — Early reaction was generally favorable Monday to a government announcement that Canada Savings Bonds issued this fall would carry a record annual return of 9% per cent.

The rate on the new nine-year series compares to the average annual yield of 7¼ per cent on last year's issue, including the bonus coupons, and the previous record return of eight per cent on the 1968 issue.

Most quarters reacting to the announcement by Finance Minister John Turner said the new rate would make the bonds at least competitive with other forms of investment.

And, while acknowledging the government will be able to sell them, James Gillies (Toronto Don Valley), Progressive Conservative financial critic, said the move "demonstrates how far down the road we are on this dreadful inflationary situation."

Mr. Turner said in a statement the previous practice of paying out bonus interest has been dropped for the new series.

He said this was in answer to "the desire of many Canadian investors for a higher current income from their savings."

Mr. Turner announced the government will boost the yield on previous issues of Canada Savings Bonds to 10¼ per cent. It was the second increase in the yield on outstanding issues.

He had announced in May that bonuses would be paid to increase the yields on all outstanding issues to raise per cent. The latest announcement will set the yield at rates per cent between May 1 and Aug. 31 and at 10¼ per cent from Sept. 1 to maturity.

To achieve the 10¼-per-cent yield there will be bonus payments at maturity and for bonds maturing after 1979 there will be an interim bonus on Nov. 1, 1979.

However, for the new issue there will be no compound interest feature which the bonuses provide.

Douglas Peters, chief economist for the Toronto-Dominion Bank, said the switch from compound interest will put the government in a better position to change the interest rate if it decides to and Forrest Rogers, Bank of Nova Scotia economic adviser, said the higher interest rate should make it more attractive for buyers to keep their bonds to maturity.

Mr. Peters said the new bonds with their higher interest will make them competitive with bank deposit rates although still offering less return than other very long or very short term investments.

Still, it appeared "a reasonable package" to him.

Canada Savings Bonds have come under heavy pressure recently from bank and other investment opportunities that offer higher interest than was available through the bonds.

More than $1.2 billion worth of savings bonds have been redeemed during the last 12 months as investors looked for a better return on their savings.

The new bonds go on sale Sept. 30 with a $50,000 limit to any individual. They are dated Nov. 1 and up to Nov. 15 can be purchased without having to pay extra for accrued interest as those issued 13 days.

Committee Wants Ford Impeached

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

A National Committee to Impeach President Ford is being formed in California, two Ohio lawyers have called for a special presidential election and an estimated 2,000 persons demonstrated in Wisconsin.

The moves came as continuing reaction to President Ford's full pardon for former president Richard Nixon for federal crimes he may have committed while chief executive.

In Cleveland, Ohio, Revs. Richard Carley and Paul Johnson termed the pardon "a slap graft over a cancer" and called for a special presidential election.

"Ford thinks Watergate will go away, but we are far from that," said Carley, executive presbyter of the Presbytery of the Western Reserve of the United Presbyterian Church of the U.S.A., and Johnson, associate presbyter.

Carley told Ford in a telegram that a special election is needed to restore the people's trust in the Ford administration.

Turner Urges Caution In Inflation Fighting

WASHINGTON (CP) — Finance Minister John Turner met Monday with United States Treasury Secretary William Simon and expressed concern that U.S. might adopt overly-restrictive inflation-fighting tactics which could endanger the economics of Canada and other countries.

The meeting was the first in a series of pre-budget session with policy chiefs of major powers through which the finance minister is attempting to map out the basis of a long-term economic program.

The budget is due to be tabled in late October or early November.

Turner told a news conference here Monday he urged Simon not to make nationalistic moves without consulting other countries and without considering the potential impact on other countries.

However, he said he was impressed with the determination of Simon to meet forthrightly with inflation.

Turner's concern is that the expense of fighting inflation in the U.S. might delay investments as businessmen hold up capital spending in anticipation of better conditions and individuals are urged to save.

Meanwhile many Canadian industries have undertaken expansion projects which depend in part on the strength of U.S. markets.

Jobless Number Increases

OTTAWA (CP) — Unemployment rates rose to 5.3 per cent in August seasonally adjusted from 5.1 in July as the economy near unable to accommodate a sharp increase in the proportion of people seeking work, Statistics Canada reported today.

The number of available jobs was higher in August but an even larger number of people entered the work force.

Regionally, Ontario was hit hardest by the increase in unemployment level.

The actual unemployment figures showed a decline to 4.4 per cent in August from 4.6 in July. A year ago the August rate was 4.5 and the July rate 4.8.

Actual total number of 497,000 out of work in August is a work force of 10,132,000.

Seasonally - adjusted figures are intended to even out cyclical chances in job totals and these figures are considered by economists to be better indicators of the performance of the economy.

The participation rate—the proportion of the population working or seeking work—increased to 58.9 per cent from 58.1.

The August participation rate was the highest since Statistics Canada began unemployment surveys in 1953 and an eighttenths of a percentage point increase in one month is unusually large.

White Revolt Beaten

From AP-REUTER

Police occupied a white settlers' rebel stronghold at the radio station in Lourenco Marques, the capital of Mozambique, today and government spokesmen announced that a three-day attempt to seize power in the Portuguese southeast African colony was over.

The whereabouts of the rebel leaders was not immediately known. They had threatened to proclaim a "free Mozambique" in defiance of an agreement between Portugal and the black guerrilla movement, Frelimo, to give Mozambique independence next June.

The government spokesman said the radio station was the only "active centre of resistance" and once it had been occupied the revolt quickly collapsed.

The white settlers announced earlier that they decided to turn over the radio station to police because of a deterioration of law and order in the African suburbs of the city.

Park Head Dies

TORONTO (CP) — Usbo W. (Yorkie) Fiskar, a former bush pilot and the last flying superintendent of Algonquin Provincial Park, died in hospital Monday at age 67.

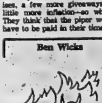
Mr. Fiskar was appointed superintendent of Algonquin Park in 1962, a post he held until his retirement last year.

Canal Open

WELLAND, Ont. (CP) — Traffic on the Welland canal resumed at noon Monday, two weeks after a 25-foot section of concrete rammed and toppled a lift bridge at Port Robinson, about five miles north of here.

Nobody Gives a Damn So Shulman Quitting

TORONTO (CP) — Dr. Morton Shulman, New Democratic Party member of the Ontario legislature for Toronto—High Park, since 1967, said today he is quitting politics because "no one in office gives a damn about inflation, the economy or the law."



The millionaire physician, whose reputation grew uncovering injustice and jolting bureaucracy, had previously announced he would not be a candidate in the next provincial general election. He explained why in his column in The Sun.

Can anyone wonder that the intelligent citizen has given up hope in politicians of every political party?" he writes.

"Canada has reached the point where the elected parties quarrel before any organized force, be it unions, pressure groups or armed Indians.

"The politicians have their chartered freedoms and other perks and thick perimeter of the next election—of re-electing themselves and their party. If this requires a few more promises, a few more giveaways, a little more inflation—so what? They think that the piper won't have to be paid in their time."

Pet of the Week

Siamese cats are turning up at Quinte Animal Shelter in increasing numbers. Reduced adoption fees like this pair sold for $300 each 20 years ago when they were first introduced, but now they can be adopted for $18 each. These five-month old males are lively and affectionate pets.

Little Flame is the newest addition to the Belleville Fire Department. In the coming weeks he will be outfitting fire safety tips that could save your life. If you have any questions or problems regarding fire safety in your home, contact him at No. 2 fire station, Moira St., West, or call 962-3010.

From fire records it has been found that most severe home fires begin in the early morning hours. For this reason, I feel it is important that you and your family have a fire escape plan made out in advance. Then, if fire does strike, you will have a better chance of getting out alive.

When Fire Strikes: Get Out

Remember, if you are awakened from a deep sleep, take alone can waste seconds or even minutes.

Basic Fire Escape Plan:

1. Check each room for possible escape routes from the hallway be filled with fire or smoke.

2. If there is no other exit, check the window, how far it is to the ground. Can you reach another roof or landing from it?

3. Are all hallways and stairs clear of boxes, and furniture?

4. Is the fire department number by the telephone?

5. Agree on a place you will all meet after you are out of the house (a telephone pole, tree or other well-known location.)

6. Remember, once you are out of the building, stay out.

7. If you cannot get out of a room, keep the door closed and put a sheet or blanket under the door to prevent smoke from entering the room.

8. Make sure someone is ready to help children and elderly people out of the building.

Things to Remember:

Heat and deadly gases are the main killers in fires. A small fire may be deadly. The only wise course for you is to get out quickly. Don't try to detect smoke or flame, warn others.

A hot door is a deadly warning, never open a door without first checking for heat. If it is hot do not open it. Leave it and go out by the window, if this is impossible, stay in the room.

Beware of "backfire." In time of fire, the stairs may be the most dangerous part of the home. They can become a chimney of poisonous gases.

Tell the Firefighters if anyone remains in the home, leave room for them to enter them, unless you can safely raise a ladder or help someone down from a window or roof before help arrives.

OHC Outlines Project

TRENTON — Construction is likely to start next summer on 25 rent-geared-to-income Ontario Housing Corporation units behind Quinte Secondary school if senior citizens apartment building proposed for Crescent Dr., now before committee of the whole session learned last night.

Trenton officials told council a modified tender call has already been let for 25 semi-detached bungalows. The winning bidder will receive final approval warnings for the $700,000—project.

Council said it will act on OHC's request for project approval shortly.

The family units, ranging from three to five bedrooms, will be strung in rows behind the 49 - unit senior citizen apartments. The homes will be closed by a carport.

Architect Ernest Cromarty told council tenders have been excluded from the homes. In their place, utility rooms — containing the washery, dryers and furnace — will be built behind each carport.

He said each unit will be built for an estimated $20,000.

Facing houses would be 76 feet apart across the 18-foot subdivision street that will be maintained by OHC. Any default by tenants will come out of federal, provincial and municipal coffers, with Trenton picking up 7½ per cent of the loss.

The extra costs play a major factor in the project, the architect said since considerable fill must be brought onto the 3.5 acre site.

Because the existing soil is not suitable for streets or housing foundations," he said.

Inclusion of basements would be prohibitively costly, he said. Land does not drain well, he said.

Merchants Oppose Town's New Bylaw

TRENTON — In the coming weeks, Trenton retailers will have the opportunity to thrash out their differences over a recently passed town bylaw that permits department stores to remain open till 10 p.m., six days a week.

A notice of motion will be introduced to give chain-store-hard pressed Monday, the first step towards passing a single bylaw regulating store closing hours.

The decision, during the committee of the whole session Monday, came after a petition from the Trenton Retail Merchants Association was placed before councillors for discussion.

Merchants requested council to rescind its three-week-old bylaw that permits department stores to remain open till 10 p.m. The association said it wants to retain the Thursday and Friday late store hours (9 a.m. - 9 p.m.).

Councillors said they are hopeful the introduction of the notice of motion will provide time to bring both sides of the store hour question before council for further consideration.

In the association's petition, retailers' president Lloyd Wells said: "We will be forced to meet competition and this will necessitate the opening to 10 p.m. of downtown stores."

The bylaw in question, permits a large K-Mart department store to remain open until 10 p.m.

K-Mart, a potential tenant in a proposed $2.5-million enclosed shopping mall, was represented by the development firm, Western Realties Ltd.

Discussion revealed council was divided in its support of the new bylaw.

Councillor Robert Wannamaker said, "K-Mart will not come in if they can't stay open till 10 p.m."

Edward Todd reiterated objections he has received from downtown merchants, saying "their objection to long store hours is that they feel that they would have to stay open to compete."

Councillor John Bunn, who proposed the notice of motion, said merchants feel the bylaw was passed in haste, with no consultation with them.

Hobby Becomes Booming Business

PICTON — When 85-year-old Bert Robinson moved to Picton from his northern Ontario home five years ago, one of the trucks carrying his possessions drew inquisitive glances from local residents. Along with furniture and other personal effects more than 116 tons of rocks were deposited at his new home.

But a truck load of stones isn't unusual if you enjoy lapidary — stone polishing. Mr. Robinson has been collecting rocks for 29 years and what started out as a hobby has turned into almost a fulltime business.

Mr. Robinson turns the rocks into bracelets, tie clips, pins, rings and other assorted pieces of jewelry.

In earlier years, Mr. Robinson said he used to accumulate many of his stones himself but because of health reasons, he now obtains them by trading.

"When I have two of one, I trade with someone," said Mr. Robinson.

Mr. Robinson has over 350 varieties of stones, some of which have been from Burma, South America, South Africa and Tibet. The settings on which the stones are mounted are procured through a lapidary supply house.

Bridge Needs Repair

TRENTON — Town council is expected to commission a study to determine the extent of needed repairs on the old swing bridge, on one of two main access roads into Trenton's downtown.

Commission of works Arnie Hoorweg told council's committee of the whole session Monday, a study is needed to discover what is wrong with the Dundas St. bridge, now in need of requiring repairs according to town officials.

Taxes Due

Sept. 30 is the last day for Sidney Township residents to pay their taxes and council Monday night, arranged special additional hours to accommodate the anticipated "last minute" rush.

Township employees will be in the offices during regular hours Friday, Sept. 27 and will re-open the office from 8 p.m. until 9 p.m. Monday — the last day — the office will remain open from 8:30 a.m. until 9 p.m.

If taxes are not paid by the deadline, a four per cent penalty will be imposed. If taxes are still unpaid by Dec. 31, an additional one per cent a month penalty will be charged, said a township spokesman Monday night.

Expert Says Game Requires As Much Skill as Strength

By AL XARAS
Staff Reporter

FRANKFORD — A tug-of-war has often been described as two teams grabbing a rope, each pulling with all his might until one team topples into the dirt.

But Mike Dobos, 54, a former Canadian forces tug-of-war coach, says there is much more to classic sports-man's battle than meets the eye.

Mr. Dobos demonstrated his theory this weekend during the 16th annual Lower Trent Valley Fish and Game Club field day. He coached a children's team — which won twice — and a men's team, which lost — twice.

The Fish and Game Club boys bested the firefighters in a two-out-of-three matchup.

Mr. Dobos said he used to train his army teams by tieing a rope to the back of a car. The driver in the car, he said, would spur the team.

"As they got proficient, we'd start the car moving forward."

He said competition in the armed forces was between companies, battalions and divisions in several weight classes.

"I've seen them pull back and forth for half an hour before someone won," he said.

"Sometimes, its the best that wins.

"That's what happened in this case," Mr. Dobos said, referring to his two losses with the firefighters.

"They had too much beer on the other side."

Mr. Dobos placed his heaviest man, as anchorman, at the end of the rope. He placed the nine men equi-distant along the rope, alternating the direction each faced into it.

The reason? "By staggering them, you maintain a steady balance. The men won't veer to one side," says the coach.

Tactically, he said, a victory is assured by allowing the other team to overexert itself. Hold when they're pulling. If they start pulling right away, dig your heels in.

"When they're off balance then you 'short-step it back,' said Mr. Dobos.

Little Boy Lost

John Donne said it in those immortal lines: "Any Man's Death diminisheth me, For I am involved in mankind. Never ask to know for whom the bell tolls, it tolls for thee."

Death in all the more poignant and embedded in reality when it claims those of tender years, either by natural causes or, as happens not infrequently, in some accident in water or on a highway.

The Belleville area has been witness to such a sad tragedy, among others, in recent days. Perhaps in the midst of this sorrow the rest of us may learn more of the pressing need for greater care: more attention at home and in school to water and road safety, and in particular increased vigilance on the part of drivers.

Park Intruders

Stanley Park has all the hallmarks of a quiet sylvan hideaway. So much so that we discovered it only last year — and then had the picnic interlude spoiled by a couple of young motorcyclists.

This park kept sparing back and forth on the parkway and across the bridge over a narrow creek and into the scrub beyond.

Visiting the park again at the weekend was to find it as unspoiled as ever — except for yet another pair of motorcyclists. Or were they the same ones who were there last year?

They should not have been there, for at the entrance to the park there is a sign noting motorcycles are prohibited and quoting the by-law concerned.

One other thing: last year there was a solitary picnic table in the park. This time it was missing.

Land of Contrasts

Two contrasting items concerning Britain, a land renowned for its unstoppability, its resilience, its strength and stability against all odds.

One concerns the death in Buenos Aires of Sir Donald Hopson, British ambassador to Argentina. Sir Donald, who died of a heart attack, was Britain's man in Peking when Red Guards burned down the British mission at the height of the Chinese cultural revolution.

We recall the reports of Sir Donald's courage in helping protect British and Soviet dependents emplaning for home at Peking airport.

He was a symbol of the career diplomat and of the kind of man that speaks of British at its best.

By contrast, in a day when other influences are gnawing at the gates in Britain as in other parts of the world, there has been news of a riot at a pop festival on the Queen's estate at Windsor Great Park.

Not that we should get excited over a pop festival, the Quinte area having survived its own excursions into this realm some years ago, but in the Windsor affair, set effort by 600 policemen to break it up ended with 230 under arrest and 50 others injured. The ruckus went on for eight hours.

It may be the police over-reacted — there were reports of police brutality. After all, pop festivals are already "old hat" on this continent, and we are back to the likes of Glenn Yarborough, having done the world travels he had promised himself on temporary retirement, getting together again with his old Limeliters group. Nostalgia and all that.

Perhaps the UK pop fans were trespassing, but the punishment do not seem to have come out of the affair covered with glory. They might have taken a lesson from our police up Kenora way when the Indians took over a park. In any event, the incident illustrates one of the contrasts of life in Britain today.

Andreas Papandreou Vacates York University To Return to Greek Political Merry-Go-Round

By JOHN D. HARRION
Foreign Affairs Analyst

Andreas Papandreou, erstwhile professor of economics at York University, when he was there, has returned to his first love — the Mediterranean madhouse called Greek politics.

The controversial and egocentric Greek politician and intellectual who was in power in the mid-1960s when his father was Greek prime minister, has announced the formation of yet another Greek political party, this one to be called the Pan-Hellenic Socialist Movement.

His program is introverted, anti-NATO, anti-developmental in short for a politician who is as good in economics as former Professor Papandreou, one which would reduce an already hard-pressed Greece to a genuine pre-industrial status.

Unfortunately for Andreas Pahandreou who is absolutely convinced no one can ruin Greece better than himself, he is faced with very tough competition from one who can and did.

He is of course, Greek Premier Constatine Karamanlis who also held power before the military coup destroyed Greek democracy in April, 1967, and who directed the best elective government the Greeks have enjoyed since before the Second World War.

Mr. Karamanlis like Mr. Papandreou has also been living in exile, but much longer and more quietly. During his previous administration, he was advised by Papandreous, father and son, for his associations with the international business community and his growing support of NATO.

In the context of history, he used both to develop Greece's international capital and plants to diversify an ailing Greek economy and the NATO base in Greece to maintain that country's commitment to the alliance and from which proved also economic benefits.

Mr. Karamanlis is different from and with alleged interferences by Washington in the Cyprus affair which have led more to do with US geopolitics than the Greek traumas over that island's plight, has withdrawn Greek forces from NATO.

Mr. Papandreou again experiencing his "20-20" political vision about Greece and NATO, has suggested that Mr. Karamanlis pull Greece out of NATO altogether.

The fact is Mr. Karamanlis has upstaged Papandreou on a NATO withdrawal and in fact by becoming Premier again, with a good deal of popular support which it is reported he did not have during his previous time in power 12 years ago.

The record of the Papandreous in power was, to say the least, less harmonious than that of Karamanlis. Father and son fought with the king, intervened crudely in the internal affairs of the Greek military who found from it their chance to deploy Greek democracy because the civilian leaders had lost control.

Though Mr. Papandreou used Canada as his base of operations whether it was his teaching post at York University or his many supporters among the intelligentsia and mass media to embody state his case, he never delineated the real role of his father's government in their feud with the Greek armed forces.

He is unlikely to do so now or ever. But outside specialists of the Greek political scene have stated this interference was the major factor in bringing about the 1967 military coup which was to end Greek democratic processes for seven years.

U.K. Candy Delicacy Goes Behind Iron Curtain

Manchester Guardian

Twenty-nine tons of licorice allsorts are being loaded into containers at Sheffield to go to Czechoslovakia as the first confirmation that the peculiar sweets from Yorkshire have found favor behind the Iron Curtain.

But the mixture that the sweet-eaters of Prague will be able to buy will differ in a notable respect from the standard British allsort available in this country. The red-, yellow-, and green-flavored buttons have been reckoned, after a request from the Czechoslovak authorities, and will be yellow. The reason for the change of color is, according to manufacturer's public relations firm, a mystery.

"Nobody so far has ever actually discovered why it has been made," he said. "But I think it would be very fanciful to put it down to political reasons. It is probably no more than an aim to immediately by changing the color would make the sweets still better.

Color change or not, the Bfiltration of the allsort behind the Iron Curtain is the last few breakthroughs available to a sweet now already in practically every country in the world.

A sample load of 13 tons of allsorts, complete with all the favorites like the military men and mushrooms, was sent to Czechoslovakia last year after consultations at a European confectionery trade fair and then import organization.

They were such a success that it seems as though regular batches will be dispatched — further 70-ton lots are accidental genius of Charlie Thompson, one of the firm's four salesmen in 1898.

At that time Bassett's, the manufacturers, were perusing with selling all the different varieties which now make up the allsorts, individually. Mr. Thompson's idea was to offer to Leicester with his boxes of samples and got them all mixed up.

Winter Hazard
Sloping Sidewalks are Suspect

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

I feel city engineer Joe Angelo's reasons for the sloping sidewalks at intersections leading on to the new downtown portion of Victoria Avenue, as appeared in the Aug. 27 edition of The Intelligencer, lacking in safety features.

It is true that mothers with baby carriages will not have to lip the carriage as much when stepping from the roadway to the sidewalk, and the handicapped in wheelchairs will be able to cross the intersections perhaps with more ease than before.

The real problems with these sloping sidewalks are likely to manifest themselves with the coming of winter and the snowfall that usually prevail. Mothers then would be well advised to pull their baby carriages behind them, and wear spiked shoes to avoid slipping out in front of passing cars.

The handicapped should don their best non-skid tires on wheel-chairs — or have an escort help it up and down these steep slopes.

I certainly have always entertained new ideas that are good for the majority, but find it difficult to agree with these sidewalks until the crazy tilts are safe for anyone walking in any kind of weather conditions that is if ice is not kept off them constantly.

I am not an engineer, but common sense tells me that further the roadway could have been raised to a level slightly above the sidewalk, or the sidewalk lowered to a level slightly above the roadway leaving the sidewalk level and safe for everyone.

Council and Citizen Deputations

Belleville city council has a tendency to view deputations and delegations as an unnecessary nuisance.

More often than not, citizens appearing before their elected representatives are not there for the purpose of handing out bouquets — they usually have a grievance to air.

Probably the most frequent critics and critic is Mr. Clarence Young — the area's most vociferous and outspoken opponent of polluters.

Mr. Young's most recent visit to council was in order to decry the lack of action in the matter of stopping the dumping of refuse at illegal dumps that have sprung up in the city.

Mr. Young was right to castigate city officials and employees for their tardiness in dealing with the situation. Both the Ministry of Environment are showing distressing reticence in taking a firm line with violators.

Mayor Robin Jeffery says that "everything possible is being done to stop this practice."

Everything short of prosecution maybe. That's the reluctance to prosecute after an initial warning!

The various acts have ample provision for prosecution of offenders and I can see no reason why after they have been issued an initial warning that they should not be prosecuted.

As Mr. Young pointed out to council, pollution is not a matter of politics it is a matter of life and death.

Pardon for Richard Nixon Has President on Hot Seat

By CARL P. LEUBSDORF

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford's congressional and political honymoon appears to have ended with his pardon of Richard Nixon, a decision that revived the Watergate issue and complicated the campaign for Republican candidates this fall.

Ford said he acted to write "the end" to Watergate, but the immediate reaction was that he kindled debate over the scandal and the propriety of an advance and absolute pardon for his disgraced predecessor.

The resignation of press secretary Jerald terHorst, who as Ford's first appointee was a symbol of his pledge of an open atmosphere at the White House, underscored the controversy. Terhorst said he could not in good conscience support the decision on Nixon, particularly while former officials of lesser rank face prison or trial.

That judgment from a member of the Ford inner circle seemed certain to heighten criticism of the pardon the president granted Sunday.

There was praise from many Republicans, including congressional leaders. But there also was substantial Republican criticism, along with general Democratic protest against the Ford move.

Some liberal Republicans running for re-election this year expressed reservations about Ford's decision. Senate Richard Schweiker of Pennsylvania calling it "a bad mistake." However others, the criticism, in the long run Ford may have acted at a relatively opportune time in taking a step he seemed likely to take eventually.

Ford's unprecedented move came two months before congressional elections in which it is sure to be an issue, and may prove an added burden for Republican candidates already facing questionable prospects.

But in the months two years before the 1976 presidential campaign in which Ford, the first president to run for office without election, is expected to be a candidate. Had the Nixon case dragged on, it might have proved even more troublesome later.

The short-term political fallout can only hurt Republicans who a month ago were relieved that Nixon's resignation appeared to have eased or eliminated the Watergate scandals and the former president as campaign issues.

Now the issues are back, with Democrats accusing Ford of undermining the principle of equal justice.

Ford's announced intention of standing conditions, such as alternative service, to his proposal for amnesty for draft resisters and deserters may run into the criticisms that Nixon was pardoned without conditions.

In Congress, Democrats already had started to criticize Ford for inaction in dealing with the energy problem. They almost certainly will step that up, particularly those who now seems more vulnerable to criticism.

The New Cars: Expensive But One Can Always Look

By VINCENT EGAN
Business and Consumer Affairs Analyst

It will be somewhat time in the car-dealers' showrooms later this month. Time to kick tires, slam doors, sit behind the wheel — and gasp at the prices on the sticker.

The car-makers enter the 1975 model year with a few new questions on their minds:

— How will the buying public respond to the hefty price increases on the new cars Prices went up sharply in successive stages during the 1974 model year, but the average buyer absorbed them to some extent by consumers' saving (more pronounced in the U.S. market than in Canada) to smaller and cheaper cars financially.

— Will the demand for compacts and sub-compacts continue to leap ahead, or will there be (as some industry experts expect) a shift back to second-best toward standard-size cars.

In the first two months of this year, at the peak of the energy crisis, a third of the new car sales swung heavily in the direction of small cars and away from cars, while sales of big cars slumped.

Since then, big cars have regained some of their previous share of the market, but the compact price changes have further narrowed the gap between the smaller and the minis.

This view of the North American auto industry is expressed in Argus Research Corp. of New York:

"In the space of 13 months, auto prices have risen by more than 30 per cent.

"Even if consumers were in a mood to splurge, the sheer increases of this magnitude would have a negative impact on the volume of car sales, or the product mix, or both.

"While inflation in their 'real' incomes likely to be assessed as the result of the second couple of quarters, consumers are not likely to lift the proportion of their income spent on autos, and therefore the auto industry is likely to be constrained in 1975."

The car-makers themselves are somewhat optimistic about the sales outlook — and they defend their 1975 models' price increases as being unavoidable.

General Motors of Canada Ltd., for example, has announced an average increase of $240 or 7.2 per cent in suggested retail list prices of its 1975 cars and 10.5 per cent for trucks.

It blames the price rises on increases in the costs of labor, materials, components and service.

Among the new models coming from General Motors for 1975 is Buick's luxury version of the design that was introduced in 1971 as the sub-compact Chevrolet Vega. It is designated as the Skyhawk.

But the main thrust of the design efforts at General Motors — which has been criticized by a large segment of the industry — seems to be to trim the weight of its heavy cars by up to half a ton within the next two years.

It is hoped that this will improve the gasoline mileage of the big 1975 models by as much as 50 per cent over comparable 1974 models.

At Ford Motor Co., designers have come up with a new model aimed at buyers wanting a combination of luxury, fairly compact size, and that indefinable something called class.

Known as the Granada in its Ford version, and the Monarch (in old English terms a title of a peasant identical Mercury version, the new car was clearly inspired by the Mercedes-Benz 280. Apart from small nose and dyed-to-the-wool auto buffs, most people will probably have difficulty in distinguishing it from the German luxury car (which costs more than three times as much).

That other well known German car-maker, Volkswagen, is changing its model mix.

This year, when production of the famous Beetle passed the 15-million mark (surpassing by a considerable margin the 15,070,000 Model T "Tin Lizzies" produced by Ford between 1908 and 1927) the small VW plant in Wolfsburg switched over to the assembly of a new model that the company hopes will be just as successful.

It is a front-wheel-drive car with conventional liquid-cooled engine (identical to the Beetle's air-cooled power plant), with a body even smaller than that of the Beetle.

Meanwhile, 1975 Beetles continue to come off assembly lines at VW factories in Germany, in Belgium, South Africa, Mexico and Brazil, descendants of the mile-long Wolfsburg plant continue to produce the familiar Beetle and the VW wagon and the larger VW Fastback, intended for the North American market earlier this year.

There's no decrying that West Germany's auto industry — dominated by VW and Daimler-Benz has run into some marketing problems that nobody had anticipated in the lush, expansionary era of the 1960s and early 1970s. Fuel and energy crisis, rampant inflation and economic uncertainties have combined to put a chill on the car market, and especially on the export of cars to North America.

Yet the picture can never be entirely gloomy in a world that has come to depend heavily upon motorized transportation. Production of motor vehicles throughout the world doubled between 1960 to 1970 (16.5 million units to 33-million) and has continued to grow — to 35-million last year.

Certainly the high cost of gasoline doesn't show no sign of coming down soon — causing some people to curtail their driving.

Many more people, however, don't have the choice. In the city's agreed area, commuting public transit is never adequate to meet purposes between home and work.

This much is certain: Canada still remains a necessity of modern life. The cars of the future will surely be smaller, more efficient, less polluting, more sensibly designed than the garish monsters of yesterday.

But they will still be the mainstay of tomorrow's transportation systems.

World Food Crisis Forecast In 15 Years by U.S. Expert

TORONTO (CP) — A crisis in feeding the world's hungry may come in 15 years unless drastic steps are taken to increase world food production and distribution, a United States agricultural specialist said Monday.

Dr. John A. Hannah, former head administrator of the U.S. Agency for International Development, said the rise in human population is continuing unabated, averaging 1.4 million births a week, about 85 per cent of them in the world's underdeveloped countries.

He said if this rate continues it will be necessary within 15 years for prosperous countries to produce a billion tons of food a year to feed deficient countries.

"This is a closed tab, and it's foolish to even think about it," he told a news conference, adding world communications and transportation facilities are inadequate for the job.

Dr. Hannah was speaking on the eve of a two-day international food conference here, sponsored by the United Nations, which ends here Wednesday.

The conference of about 150 world cereals leaders in agriculture and the farm machinery industry is to prepare for the 1974 world food conference Nov. 7 to 16 in Rome. Dr. Hannah, as agriculturalist and former president of Michigan State University, is deputy secretary-general of the Rome conference, described by promoters as "the most important political meeting on the global food situation ever held."

The conference is being held behind closed doors so as to prevent free-wheeling discussion, Dr. Hannah said. Delegates would try to come up with ideas to tackle food shortage problems for the Rome conference.

They will be working from a 127-page background paper outlining the problems and prepared at earlier meetings in New York and Geneva, he said.

Dr. Hannah said the delegates have will concentrate on determining how poor countries can be encouraged to develop their own agricultural production, and in getting them the technological know-how to do it.

He said he anticipates that surplus food countries will make a commitment at Rome to contribute a fraction of their own food production to an international reserve.

A first step in solving the food problems, he said, would be to increase world production of fertilizer. For example, the scarcity could be resolved if only a quarter of the flare gas lost from Middle East oil fields were converted into fertilizer.

Regional Policeman Criticized

CAMBRIDGE (CP) — Law years at the provincial inquiry into a Grand River flood has also criticized Chief Wilf Herrich of Waterloo regional police for not delegating authority properly.

The lawyers said Monday that the chief had abdicated his responsibility as his staff, and complained that his testimony conflicted with that given by other officers, last week.

Robert Montgomery, an inquiry lawyer, said the police chief did not go to Cambridge until three after the flood.

The police chief's office is in Kitchener.

Mr. Montgomery said the police chief might have been more informed of manpower needs had he gone to Cambridge during the flood.

He also said that if Chief Herrich had known the situation he might not have accused Cambridge Mayor Clarabelle Miller of panicking when she called the chief the night of the flood to discuss calling out the militia.

Chief Herrich said that he did not have to go to Cambridge because he had delegated responsibility to three other officers who were in charge.

The inquiry was told that one of the officers was stationed in Kitchener. One, who was in Cambridge, had no local flood experience and the third thought he was off duty.

Mr. Montgomery told the inquiry that there was a report from another officer which substantiated some of the chief's testimony. The officer is to testify today.

Levy on Eggs Is Imposed

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario Egg and Fowl Producers Marketing Board decided Monday to impose an additional 2½ cents-a-dozen levy on eggs produced by its members as of next Monday to cover Canadian Egg Marketing Agency (CEMA) penalties on over-production.

Board Chairman Jim Johnstone said the levy will bring the board an additional $75,000 a week from Ontario egg producers but will not affect the price consumers pay for eggs.

He said the board is clear of debt as far as CEMA is concerned but will use the additional funds generated by the levy to pay off a $1-million loan used to pay the CEMA penalties.

Uranium Sale OK Expected

TORONTO (CP) — An official of Rio Algom Mines Ltd. confirmed Monday it approves its recently-announced sale of $1B-million worth of uranium yellowcake to two United States electric utilities.

A. C. Turner, company vice-president, said the sale terms appear in conform with export guidelines specified by Energy Minister Donald Macdonald last week.

Rio Algom proposes to sell 28 million pounds of uranium oxide to Duke Power Co. of Charlotte, N.C., and the equivalent of 14 million pounds of uranium hexafluoride to Tennessee Valley Authority of Chattanooga, Tenn.

Mr. Macdonald said uranium exported must be in the most advanced form possible in Canada.

Tennessee Valley's crude will be converted to uranium hexafluoride under a separate agreement between Rio Algom and Eldorado Nuclear Ltd. of Port Hope, Duke Power is negotiating conversion of its concentrated with Eldorado.

The contracts also depend on the federal government's ability to locate uranium reserves, estimates and the stated requirements of Canada.

Mr. Turner said that, "from all statements, it would appear that with the uranium reserves in Canada, there should be some left for export."

Kidney Denies Saying Pools Attacked

REGINA (CP) — Premier Allan Blakeney has denied remarks attributed to him saying that pressure on the Saskatchewan Wheat Pool to end the grain handlers dispute on the West Coast is part of a concerted attack on the system of orderly grain marketing.

The remarks were attributed to the premier in a Canadian Press story sent following a conference in Regina Wednesday, Sept. 4.

"The reporter must have misinterpreted some remarks I made to him, after my news conference had ended," Mr. Blakeney said in a prepared statement.

"While it is true that I believe there are some people and some groups in this country who are making efforts to undermine the principle of orderly marketing, I do not believe the West Coast grain handling dispute is connected in any way with these efforts."

'Nixon Rule' Frees Couple

REAL ESTATE:
A GOOD FLOOR PLAN
Ed. McKinney
A. E. McKinney Real Estate Ltd.
When considering the purchase or construction of a new home, one of the major considerations should be a good floor plan. What do I mean by a good floor plan?
Most importantly, a sound floor plan is one where you can go to the separate areas of the house without going through another area (a mistake most often found in ranch homes). The different areas should be well separated. The kitchen should be easily accessible from the dining room and recreation area.
Proper placement of closets and stairs should add convenience. Bedroom closets are better placed on inside walls to function as a sound barrier between bedrooms. Improperly placed or oversized windows can make furniture arrangement impossible. Naturally, the size of the rooms will vary from home to home, but the living room should be large enough to contain at least one conversation group and allow room for movement and circulation. A good floor plan is only appreciated when you have suffered through a bad one.

SISTER FERN OLSON

The government has made 60,000 Ontarians second-class citizens.
They did it with a repressive law called CECBA (Crown Employees Collective Bargaining Act).
It affects the day-to-day rights of the provincial government's own employees: those in the public service as well as community college employees.
It restricts our freedom to bargain collectively for improved benefits and working conditions.
It denies us the right to settle disputes by choosing between voluntary arbitration and other methods.
It requires that disputes be settled by compulsory arbitration. By a board to which the government appoints two out of three members.
In short, we lose the basic rights enjoyed by other workers. Including other public employees.
Our hands are tied by our own employers. So we're falling behind as inflation surges ahead.
We want this oppressive law changed.
We simply want the same rights as others.
And for second-class citizens, we can put up a first-class fight.
Free the servants!

China's Major Asset—Her Children

This is Ann Landers' report to you from The People's Republic of China as a member of the American Medical Association's delegation.

When I asked a group of physicians how they handled the battered child problem, they looked at me quizzically. "What do you mean?" I was asked.

I explained that in our country some parents become so angry with their children that they beat them unmercifully and the child must be hospitalized. The doctors were stunned. "We have no such problem here," replied Dr. Woo. "The neighbors wouldn't allow it!"

It became obvious early in our trip that China's major asset is her healthy, bright, highly motivated children. As the saying is best, so grows the tree, and we saw the skilful training in which those little twigs were being bent. You can bet that most their "trees" will grow up straight and strong.

The first school we visited was a nursery for children from three to six years of age. Almost all parents work; six days a week, so the children spend only Sunday at home. The cost is about eight American dollars a month for room, board, education, and medical care.

The sleeping quarters were vast halls (dormitory style), the classrooms immaculate, the children bright-eyed, well dressed (no uniforms) and extremely friendly. "Hello Uncle and Auntie," they chanted (in Chinese) as we entered. We were given permission to observe.

Today, we will sing a song," announced the teacher, an attractive woman who appeared to be about 30. "The song is about a little girl who was sent to the store to buy some eggs. The little girl noticed after she had left the store that the clerk had given her one yuan too much change. She returned immediately and informed the clerk of his mistake. Chairman Mao tells us it is wrong to take anything that does not belong to us. He says we must always treat others as we would want to be treated." The children sang the song with boundless enthusiasm.

The second lesson was Pick the Best Solution:

"A little boy comes to his very school. He say threes red, lobby apples under a tree. The wind had blown them to the ground. What should he do? Should he take the apples for himself? Should he take them to school and share them with his classmates? Or leave them there and hope the owner of the tree would find them?" Or is there a better solution?"

One little girl about five years old raised her hand and said: "I think the boy should write a note, saying, 'Please apples fell from your tree,' and place the note with the apples on the side-walk in front of the house. He should not sign his name because Chairman Mao says: 'Good deed done in secret has twice the value.'"

"Very fine," the teacher pondered, "Are there any other solutions?"

A small boy raised his hand and spoke up in a very loud voice as it startled us. "I think it would be best," he said, "if the boy took the apples to the police. We have been told that when you find something that doesn't belong to us we should give it to the police because then the people always go when they lose things."

The teacher agreed that his solution was good. She then asked the children to stand and repeat the moral of the story: "It is wrong to take anything that does not belong to us. We must do everything we can, no matter how small, to serve the state. Every honest act helps our country and makes Chairman Mao proud of us."

Would I like to see grandchildren to be raised in The People's Republic of China? No. But I would be pleased if they could go to school there for a year or two.

Nail Lengthener Causes Problems

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Food and Drug Administration FDA said Friday it is moving quickly to clear store shelves of ... fingernail preparations responsible for a rising number of consumer injuries.

Usually packaged with a bottle of liquid and another bottle of powder, the fingernail kits are designed to make nails harder.

The FDA said the preparations may cause severe allergic reactions to skin tissue, with acute inflammation and lesions often accompanied by burning and itching.

Seizure actions were filed in federal courts in Texas, Michigan and Indiana last month against C.C.E.S. Products Inc. of Chicago and its product Long Nails.

Recalls have begun for Scarlet Nail Lengthener by Cameo Cosmetics, Nail Liquid by Viva Ltd., and Maji-Nail by Maja-Nail Inc.

Dear Ann:

I am 16 and very much in love with my boy friend who I just broke up with. He is mad at me.

The only reason we broke up is because I told him that I...we...are both virgin and he couldn't accept the idea. But I love him very much and I know that he does me a lot, yet.

What could I do to get him back, or shouldn't I? I love him and we were supposed to get engaged. Unhappy.

Dear Unhappy:

Volunteer Career Satisfies Kelly

EL CERRITO, Calif. (AP) — Can a woman lead a satisfying life, working hard for no pay Lavian Gertrude Falconer — volunteer extraordinaire — is sure she can.

"Kelly" Falconer, as her friends call her, has saved beaches, protected wildlife sanctuaries, and raised funds for school libraries. For more than 5 years, she has been rewarded — not with a paycheque — but with the knowledge that she's "filling a public need".

Defending her "career" to feminist critics who charge that women who offer their services free are being exploited, Mrs. Falconer says "If we didn't volunteer, vitally needed services would not be available to the community."

During Second World War, before she was married, Mrs. Falconer worked as an occupational therapist in Washington, D.C. army hospitals. She enjoyed her salaried job, although she didn't like the fact that "everything was so stratified; you know who's the boss", in a volunteer setup, she maintains, "you can be a key person if you know how to move others around".

The California housewife's volunteer commitment began when her oldest child was still a toddler. One morning a week she pitched in at her son's nursery school, "seeing that the kids got to the potty and that they didn't spill the waterpaint". Then she was named nursery school president and became a part-time administrator. She coordinated volunteers and once had "the most unpleasant task of having to fire the paid director".

This cheerful woman of 53 is proud of her ability to organize, a talent she may have inherited from her father, who managed an apple orchard in Vermont in the 1920s. "He may not have known much about apples," she recalled, "but he knew how to hire people who did. Hanging around his office as a child, I must have absorbed some of his skills."

Kelly Falconer's volunteer activities reflect her changing lifestyle and social interests. As a young mother she was involved with the local League of women Voters ("charter member and second president of the Richmond League"), her college (Bennington) alumnae association, and PTA ("I am a life member"). In recent years, ecology projects like the West Coast Conservation League, California Native Plant Society and San Francisco Bay Association have taken up her time.

Mobilizing public support through letters, telegrams and phone calls ("90 one frustration is I can't speak well before groups"), Mrs. Falconer is proud and pleased when her efforts succeed. Husband John Falconer, a successful attorney and corporate vice-president, approves except when Mrs. Falconer and some of the "crusty bunch of ladies I hash out with" march on the California legislature or publish letters in the local paper. Then, she admits, "he's not exactly thrilled".

Ecology and pollution don't seem to concern her children, although the reads that "the younger generation is supposed to care about these things." John, Jr. who is married to a law school graduate, manages a stereo repair shop in Berkeley. Ethan, 27, is studying mechanical engineering. Julie, 19, owns two horses and "is up to her knees in manure". Her mother is convinced she'll be a horse-breeder or handicapper.

"I'm no Lady Bountiful looking for social status and a way to while away my time," says Kelly Falconer. But she concedes "being a volunteer I don't have to work if I don't want to." She does in fact turn down assignments she thinks she won't enjoy.

"I'm very fortunate that I don't need to work for pay," she says, "but you can be sure where there's a local uproar brewing, there's likely to be a free-floating group of us who'll help to stir up the waters!".

Quiet Women

Aileen Speed, Sweet Adeline Director

When Aileen Speed moved from Toronto to Carrying Place with her husband Jim, a watch maker, she knew only the few people she'd met during summers, at their cottage in that area.

But Mrs. Speed is never long without friends, for as she says, "Music is the great binder."

Director of the Sweet Adelines chapter now forming in Belleville, Mrs. Speed has found that participation in barbershop singing has enriched her life immensely.

During her years of affiliation with the Scarborough chapter of Sweet Adelines Inc., Mrs. Speed had, in her words, "really a wonderful time". She was director of the group — sometimes directing as many as 60 women — for nine years.

"One of our great thrills was tying for first at an international competition," recalls Mrs. Speed. "We always worked very hard and loved every minute of it."

Sweet Adelines Inc. is an international non-profit organization for women, who learn to sing four-part harmony and perform for local benefit as well as for competition.

"Women don't need a lot of musical training to join," Mrs. Speed stresses. "As long as they enjoy music and can carry a tune, there's a place for them!

"Beginners, who haven't had experience singing Acapella, start off singing the lead part, the melody line. As their gain confidence, they can change to one of the other harmony parts.

"The age range in a group can spread from 20 to 80. Older women are especially valuable in four-part harmony, since their voices are lower."

Mrs. Speed's love of music started when she was a student at Loretto Academy in Toronto, where she received her musical training. After graduation, she and two school friends went to Montreal, where they sang professionally for a number of years.

Mrs. Speed sang alone with big bands in Del Torredo area during the late 1930s, and on the Percy Faith radio show for two years. After her marriage she gave up her singing career, and then in 1952 discovered the Sweet Adelines chapter, where she's been active ever since.

"I've learned a great deal in my association with Sweet Adelines Inc.," says Mrs. Speed. "We've given courses in directing, chorus singing, arranging music and quartet harmony at music workshops in Canada and the United States.

"The travelling to competitions and workshops was always fun with the Scarborough group."

Mrs. Speed's personal preference is for ballads, which require some emotional involvement from the singers. But, she says every group learns a varied repertoire of songs, to show their versatility in composition, and to entertain audiences well.

"Most Sweet Adeline members would never be individual performers, but a group can be quite talented, and can feel a lot of pleasure and satisfaction in taking part."

The Belleville chapter will meet each Monday at 8 p.m. in Bridge Street United Church. Membership is open to all women who like to sing. Until the group is chartered, the fee to join is 25 cents.

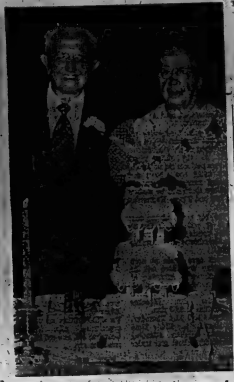
Vilneff — LaBrash

Calvary Temple was the scene of the recent wedding of Sharon Marie LaBrash, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lyle LaBrash, Belleville, and Neal Everett Vilneff, son of Mr. and Mrs. Everett Vilneff, Marmora, who were united in marriage by Rev. C. K. Bean.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a floor length gown of chantilly lace over taffeta. Pink rosettes trimmed the gown and the headpiece which caught a floor length veil. She carried pink roses and white baby's breath.



Mary Ann Keck was maid of honor in a floor length dress of pink finished organza. She carried a colonial bouquet of mixed carnations and roses.

Edna Vilneff, sister-in-law of the groom, Irene Vilneff, Lois Vilneff, sisters of the groom and Shirley LaBrash, sister of the bride, attended. They wore gowns similar to the maid of honor in mauve and blue. Dinnese Benn, flower girl, was dressed as the bride.

Best man Doug LaBrash was assisted by ushers Jim LaBrash and Tim LaBrash, the bride's brothers and Tom Vilneff and Sandy Vilneff, brothers of the groom. Ringbearer was Jimmie MacGinnes.

The couple left on a wedding trip to Scarborough after a reception at the Legion.

They reside in Belleville.

Quinte Ex Has Something To Please Every Taste

By JIM SHELLE
Staff Reporter

It's that time of year again. Time for the Fall Quinte Exhibition which starts today at 1 p.m. and runs until Friday.

This is the time of the year when the harvest is at its peak with pumpkins, corn and tomatoes adding color and flavor to every table.

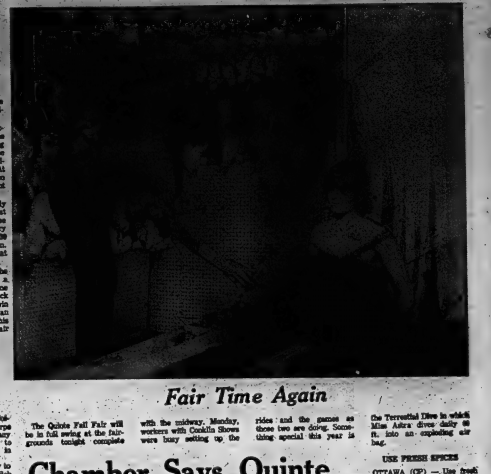
It's the time of year for sisters, chrysanthemums, and daffodil. And last but not least it's the time of warm, sunny and crisp fall days, perfect weather for a fall fair.

The gates open to the general public at 9 p.m. today with all Conklin midway rides and games and all exhibit buildings open and operating. there's a junior fair livestock show tonight at 7 p.m. and a Universal Thrill Show at the Grandstand tonight at 7.30 p.m.

On Wednesday the gates open at noon with horse shows all afternoon in the grandstand and the infield. At 2.30 p.m. there will be a fashion show in the Ben Bleecker Auditorium as well as stage entertainment.

At 2 p.m. Wednesday the Universal Thrill Show will give a matinee at the Grandstand. This is the show where drivers perform stunts driving cars using two wheels and jumping ramps. Besides the matinee there will be a show at 7.30 and 9 p.m. Wednesday night.

The big event of the four days of activities is the official opening at 3 p.m. at the Grandstand on Wednesday night.



Gates open again at noon Thursday and there will be a horse shows all afternoon at the Grandstand and infield. Also on tap is a fashion show in the Ben Bleecker Auditorium at 2:30 p.m.

From 4 to 8 p.m. Thursday, it's time for the Elder Time Special. Children attending elementary school and under are allowed in free and there are reduced rates on the Midway.

Finishing up the list of activities for Thursday is the horse and pony driving contests and the special horse feature shown at the Grandstand starting at 7 p.m. At 7.30 p.m. there is a fashion show and stage entertainment at the Bleecker Building.

Friday the 13th isn't really that unlucky as the days' list of activities Inclide horse shows, the Hastings dairy princess competition at 1.30 p.m., a cattle show at 7 p.m. and harness horse racing at 8 p.m.

Also being offered, for the first time this year, is a chance to win an airplane ride with Hastings MP Jack Ellis. Fortunate visitors will win the chance to go up with an experienced pilot in his Cherokee 140, and see the fair from the air.

Communities Outline Plans for Merger

By COLIN BRUCE
Staff Reporter

Sidney Township will be asked tonight to consent to the merger of two township communities — Frankford and Batawa.

A representative of Batawa met briefly with council Monday night to outline the resolution he expects council to endorse along with the two smaller communities.

"No sense shake up there if something isn't going to take place," said Batawa spokesman Bill Barnes.

The resolution stipulates:

— The Frankford — Batawa area be comprehensively planned as one community.

— Balanced growth of a high environmental standard.

— Growth in housing, broader local employment and all seasonal recreation considered interdependent.

— An eventual total population of 5,000 prospects 3,300.

— A single water and sewage treatment facility.

Members of council said they recognize the speed required for the passage of the resolution, adding "they want to see this included in the new official plan," now being considered by the Quinte Planning Board.

Although it appears the two communities might eventually become one unit, Reeve Lloyd Wilman said this will not be the case now that the resolution is only to affect "planning" for the two municipalities.

The Batawa spokesman said once the resolution has received approval from the municipalities, the Quinte Planning Board will be the last "hurdle".

The meeting will take place Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. in Frankford Village Hall.

Trophy A Tribute To Late Musician

On display at the Quinte Exhibition this week—in the Musicians' Union booth — is a trophy that is a tribute to a former well-known music personality and to the young people who donated it.

The musician, who stayed the lives of many a young Quinte-area talent, is the late Alfred Cooper and the students—now attending university — are Dennis Sharpe and Glenn Pearson.

Former students of Quinte Secondary School and now at Lecrustian and Western Universities, respectively, Sharpe and Pearson contacted many of their fellow students to fund the new trophy in memory of Mr. Cooper.

They presented the trophy to Rotary Club president Bob Graham at Monday's luncheon meeting of the club, for annual competition in the Quinte festival.

In a letter to the club the students said Mr. Cooper had been a valuable music instructor and bandsman for 30 years.

Museum at Fair

From the heyday of exhibitions and kermis, a penny farthing complete with rider. The bicycle is part of the room rabilia of the turn of the century that will be displayed at the Quinte Exhibition this week when the Hastings County Museum — Glanmore House — brings its mini-museumobile to the fair. The travelling exhibit has visited every fair in the county so far this fall with its collection of posters, ribbons and other exhibition memorabia along with a slide show about the museum.

Prison Director Takes New Prairie Post

WARKWORTH — William C. Westlake, director of the medium security prison here, has been appointed first director of the penitentiary service's new prairie region.

Mr. Westlake, 48, has been director of the penal institution here since it opened in 1966 and initiated new programs for rehabilitating young prisoners and first offenders.

The new prairies region is one of two new areas being organized in a decentralization move by the Canadian Penitentiary Service. The second new region is in the Maritimes.

In his new post, Mr. Westlake will be responsible for 12 institutions with an prison population of 1,750 and a staff of 1,150.

A native of Kingston, he joined the penitentiary service as a correctional officer at Collins Bay in 1948. He was later promoted staff training officer for both Collins Bay and the service's Ontario regional staff college in Kingston. He became assistant director for security at Collins Bay and assistant director at Dorchester penitentiary from 1964-68.

Chamber Says Quinte Tourist Business Strong

By COLIN BRUCE
Staff Reporter

Ta been a bristling summer for tourism in the city, says Don Sutton, manager of Belleville's Chamber of Commerce.

Statistics kept at both the downtown chamber office and at the Quinte Mall tourist booth, he says, show a 26-percent-increase in the number of people looking for local tourist information, as compared to a year ago.

Mr. Sutton said more than 1,200 people were provided travel information — plus quite a number of unrecorded telephone inquiries."

The bulk of inquiries, he said, came between July and mid-August — traditionally the heavy tourist season. The tourist booth now is colored and staff member Nancy Weatherstone and Jackie Emerson are returning to college and university.

"They're both personable girls with the local background necessary to provide accurate information," said Mr. Sutton.

The tourist booth is the first thing city visitors see, he said. "It is most important for the staff to be understanding to peoples' problems."

Tourism brings a healthy summer business climate to the city.

"Tourist spending is a cash crop dollar — vital to area businessmen," said Mr. Sutton.

Belleville he said, also receives the tourist business from visitors settled in the many camping grounds around the city.

"Many tourists in both Hastings and Prince Edward Counties are drawn to Belleville shopping areas," he said.

To keep Belleville's tourist appeal growing, a chamber offshoot — the convention bureau — reminds travelling businessmen of future Quinte area holiday opportunities.

"Many businessmen while visiting the city during a convention remember the area and return later with their families," said the chamber manager.

But to keep growing Mr. Sutton warned, "tourist facilities in and around the city must be improved and Belleville needs a convention centre.

"A new convention centre would enhance all the other hotel-motel business," he said.

The Potter property on Highway 2 is another resource Mr. Sutton said he would like to see developed" — as another facet of the Belleville tourist potential."

Club to Hold Golf to Meet

The Belleville Sales and Ad Club will hold is fourth annual golf meeting at the Bay of Quinte Country Club Sept. 18.

Tee-off time is noon with the supper meeting taking place at 7 p.m. President Jack Dickens and committee member Rick Mohan and Doug Bannon have been busy organizing the event.

There will be prizes and a guest speaker.

Sidewalk Opposed

TRENTON — Town council will take no action to build a sidewalk on McGill St. in southwestern Trenton until it receives a police report on traffic volume and its danger to area school children using the roadway.

Council's call for a study came Monday after receipt of a petition from 34 of 38 McGill St. households requesting the proposed sidewalk on the street not be built.

All petitioners live on the south side of the street.

Councillors said residents do not want the 4½-foot walkway to cut into their lawns or the removal of established trees. Trees would be moved at a cost of $600 each, deeper into the individual lots.

Protection Major Issue

TRENTON — Negotiation between Trenton, Frankford and Murray Township will begin before the end of this year to determine the extent of the town's fire protection coverage of Murray township, it was decided during a committee of the whole session here Monday.

Trenton's fire department provides the township with fire protection for $12,500 annually.

Word received by town officials that Frankford is willing to take over coverage of the northeast part of the township prompted the council's move.

Protection of the southern half of the township — whose boundary has yet to be established — would cost Murray the same $12,500 fee.

Council considers the sum too low for the amount of service provided by Trenton's firefighters.

Expressing a similar view, councillor George Greer said "The thing is that we can't have the people of Trenton pay more for their fire protection than the people of the township."

Murray Township has already agreed to renegotiate costs when the current contract expires Jan. 1, 1975.

Israeli PM in Washington Seeking Mideast Settlement

WASHINGTON (AP) — Premier Golda Meir of Israel arrives today in Washington for a three-day visit marking the opening of a more serious phase in the search for a Middle East peace settlement.

United States officials expect his talks with State Secretary Henry Kissinger to clarify prospects for the next move in the settlement with the Arabs.

At the moment, the most likely next step is negotiations either by withdrawal Israeli troops along the West Bank of the Jordan River or to further disengage Israeli and Egyptian forces in the Sinai or to do both at once.

But they stressed in advance of Rabin's afternoon arrival today that the quest for an over-all settlement depends on agreement among the Arab states and Israel.

Kissinger will give Rabin, a former Israeli ambassador to Washington with whom he has worked closely in the past, an assessment on Kissinger's talks here with King Hussein of Jordan and the foreign ministers of Egypt, Syria and Saudi Arabia. Later this month, Kissinger will relay Rabin's views to many of these ministers attending the opening of the United Nations General Assembly in New York.

Indians Given Title To Ancestral Land

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont. (CP) — About 200 non-status Ojibwa Indians, living on land near Batchewana Bay where their ancestors have lived since 1850, have been given legal title to the land and are no longer considered squatters.

Charles Wilfie, band official for the provincial Indian secretariat, said Monday that the ownership of the 40-acre tract has been transferred to the Indian Batchewana Bay, where will divide it among members.

Official presentation of the deed to the Indians is scheduled for next Monday at Batchewana Bay, about 40 miles north of here.

Turning over legal title to the Indians resolves a 20-year land controversy that saw the 41 families threatened with expulsion.

The dispute has its origins in a 1850 treaty under which part of the Ojibwa band agreed to surrender the land to the Crown and to move to the Garden City reserve just east of this city.

But some of the band held out on the land, remaining there after the Crown sold the land to private interests.

By 1951, ownership of the land had fallen to Scott-Misener Steamship Lines of Port Colborne, Ont.

The company became aware of the Indians living on the property when reassessment in 1961 revealed the presence of Indian homes and as a result, the company's tax bill showed a sharp increase.

Mr. Wilfie said a complicated arrangement was worked out in which Scott-Misener sold the entire land in exchange for giving up ownership to the province, which is turning it over to the Indian corporation.

No details were available about how much land Scott-Misener received in exchange for the disputed property.

Murray Sayer, president of the Indian group, said he is very pleased the dispute has come to an end."

He said Mr. Batchewana Bay will give portions of the land to residents upon payment of $100 to cover legal fees.

The land has been divided into 41 lakefront lots of about 25,000 square feet each, with the remainder of the 87 acres left for future development.

New Highway Signs

Several new signs will soon be seen on Ontario highways. Combined, they're displaying a maximum of six numbers, will be erected in advance of the exit ramps at interchanges. Such services are to be shown on individual large green signs. Existing "food accommodation-fuel" legend signs will be replaced by three new symbol signs shown above depicting these services. The symbols for hospitals, airports and campsites are already in use.

Britain's Liberals Prepare

BRIGHTON, England (Reuter) — As a general election looms, the Liberals, Britain's third party, open their annual conference today seeking to get back on the political scene.

The Liberals had a record post-war poll of nearly 20 per cent in the last election in February, and captured 15 out of the 635 seats in the House of Commons. Now they are putting up 600 candidates for the next election, which pundits say may be held Oct. 18.

They are having their biggest revival since their fortunes declined after the First World War and they gave way to Labor as Britain's major alternative to the Conservative party.

But their current prospects may be damaged by a controversy over whether they should join a coalition with one of the big parties after the election.

Mounties Get Drunk To Improve Safety

TORONTO (CP) — Some Mounties are going on drinking binges in the name of traffic safety, but even that tactic is failing to cope with the drinking-driver menace, RCMP Inspector John Hickey of Ottawa said Monday.

Officers undergoing the two-week breath-analyzer training program indulge in "actual social drinking sessions" to provide subjects for testing and so the students can experience alcohol acquaintance, Insp. Hickey said at an international conference on alcohol, drugs and traffic safety.

But RCMP officers are still not sufficiently trained to detect drinking drivers at low but still dangerous levels of alcohol impairment, he said.

They are hampered by laws which require "reasonable and probable" grounds for a breath test, such as slurred speech, glassy eyes, flushed face and so on, said Insp. Hickey.

But many hospitalized drivers show only subtle signs of their condition.

Insp. Hickey said Canadian policemen would be assisted by legislation similar to that in England which requires that any motorist involved in any moving traffic violation take a secret ambient to a breath test.

His opinion was supported by another speaker, Brian Carr of Ottawa, a road-safety evaluator in the transport department, who said the 1969 federal legislation making breath tests mandatory has had no significant impact in reducing traffic fatalities.

Breath tests for blood alcohol levels in Great Britain have been more effective because police officers there have wider discretionary powers, said Mr. Carr.

Insp. Hickey also said RCMP officers taking the breath-test training program "are exposed to some aspects of the physiology and pharmacology of alcohol to make them aware of what is going on in the drinking driver . . ."

He recommended that such an educational program should be considered for all law-enforcement officers at some stage of their career.

However, he suspected that some policemen are becoming more tolerant of drinking drivers.

Firms Have to Pay More To Keep Staffs Happy

NEW YORK (CP) — Corporate managers in the United States are digging deeper into record profits for an attempt to appease employees faced with double-digit inflation.

This year, many companies will offer merit raises, or merit increases plus bonuses, instead of close to 10 per cent, says Business Week magazine.

"As double-digit inflation roars ahead, corporate compensation practices are finding it increasingly difficult—and expensive—to just to make employees happy but to keep them from turning downright hostile," the magazine says in a survey.

The average boost in hourly earnings this year is 7.4 per cent and employers are losing ground because the consumer price index in the U.S. has jumped a standard 11.8 per cent in 1974.

The U.S. labor department says that real earnings of American workers are down 4.5 per cent since Jan. 1 alone.

Last year, a survey by the American Compensation Association of several hundred companies in 32 states found that pay increases averaged 5.6 per cent. This year, the average increase will be 9.3 per cent for the same companies.

Companies that had been giving 10-per-cent to 15-per-cent pay boosts to outstanding workers may be handing out 20-per-cent to 25-per-cent increases in future.

"Companies that make consumer price index adjustments as employees' pay checques add up to give merit raises as well are already handing out double-digit increases," Business Week said.

It interviewed compensation directors of several major U.S. corporations.

Companies which have chalked up record profits are faced not only with the problem of how much to pay in bonuses but how to trim raises back to normal levels in future.

Bruce Thurston, manager of compensation for Celanese Corp., said: "You wonder whether you're setting a precedent. You wonder whether in 1975 you'll have to respond the same way."

Alderman Urges an End to Council's Various Committees

Elimination of all or practically all of the present city council committees has been recommended by Alderman Dr. John Stock as a means of cutting red tape and speeding up council proceedings.

Alderman Stock made the suggestion at Monday's meeting stating that under present procedure, well-meant intentions get entangled in red tape and important matters get "batted about like a ping pong ball".

He said the original plan when the city manager form of government was adopted some years ago, had been to reduce the number of council committees.

The public works committee, fire committee, and certain others had been done away with "years and years" ago, he said, other committees have been formed.

The alderman said each committee likes to feel that it is the most important and therefore a certain amount of "empire building" occurs, resulting in bigger cost to the taxpayer.

The alderman said he would like to see practically all present committees disbanded and have most city business done by "recommendation from the city manager. Council he said, would be better informed and the procedure would expedite matters.

Two committees, formed by council in recent years are the Harbor Improvement Committee, headed by Alderman Ian Mosles and the Special Planning Advisory Committee, headed by Alderman Stock.

Mayor Robin Jeffrey said she already had been giving some thought to reduction of council committees and promised that the matter would be given consideration.

Smoking Ban Passed

Smoking will be barred in Belleville city hall council chambers during council meetings as result of a motion passed Monday.

The motion was approved by a 4-3 recorded vote with Aldermen Jack Ireland, Stu Meeks, Paul Russell, Dr. John Stock and George Segsworth opposing.

The motion was brought to council by Alderman Joe Ost, a non-smoker, who said he is particularly interested in the ill effects of tobacco smoke on non-smokers.

He maintained that nonsmokers have a right to clean air and should be given consideration.

Alderman Stu Meeks felt differently however and said that the motion presented by Alderman Ost is an example of the council "nit-picking" which he has complained about recently.

Mayor Robin Jeffrey noted that the no smoking regulation used to be a council instrument many years ago.

For the benefit of councillors who enjoyed a smoke she learned including — Mayor Jeffrey said, that in the future she would adjourn council for a break in committee room.

Council to Ask Province To Consider Bay Tunnel

The Ontario ministry of transport and communications will be asked to consider the feasibility of the construction of a tunnel or under pass under the Bay of Quinte as the alternative to a high-level bridge between Belleville and Roseacre.

This was the decision Monday of city council as it approved a motion from Alderman Jean Smith asking for a feasibility study.

The alderman's recommendation, presented to council a week ago as a notice of motion, was carried by an 8-3 recorded vote. Casting opposing votes were Mayor Robin Jeffrey, and Aldermen Arthur Keegan and Stu Meeks.

The alderman's motion was presented to council following an announcement from Transportation Minister John R. Rhodes that his department would soon commence plans for a new high-level bridge across the bay.

Council members voting against the motion said they feel a "full" investigation into the feasibility of a tunnel might unduly delay construction.

In speaking to her motion, Alderman Smith submitted that the idea of a tunnel or underpass to Prince Edward County is one which should be given serious consideration.

People today, she said, now are realizing the benefits of underground wiring rather than the clutter of overhead poles and wires which a few years ago were taken for granted.

With the current growth in world population, all people must be made aware that the environment in its natural states is a precious commodity, she said.

Referring to possible advantages of a tunnel as compared to a high-level bridge, the alderman said that all boat traffic using the bay were shallow craft while masts and superstructures can be over 80 feet in height.

"It seems more logical to me to drive below than over them," she said.

The alderman said there are more people using the roadway than the water and therefore preference should be given to road passage.

She asked if road traffic should be required to drive up and down a high wind-swept bridge every day to accommodation which caters to pleasure watercraft for four to five months of the year.

The alderman submitted that a tunnel would require little or no land acquisition, would require no relocation of major highways, would reduce marine obstruction, allow better flow of bay water and would not detract from parks in the area.

The alderman submitted that a tunnel would cost less than a bridge, would require less maintenance and would provide a safe roadway across the bay under all weather conditions.

Alderman Smith said her motion is intended to provide food for thought before there is a pre-conceived notion that a high-level bridge is the only way of spanning the Bay of Quinte.

Director Resigns

Lorne W. Williams, Director of the Belleville recreation and area commission for the last six years has resigned to accept a position as community development officer for the provincial government.

Mr. Williams' resignation is effective Sept. 21 and he will assume his new duties on Sept. 23. The position he is assuming is that left vacant by the late Wally Gray of Deseronto Maddocks.

The announcement of Mr. Williams' resignation was made by Mayor Robin Jeffrey at Monday's council meeting.

Mayor Jeffrey said that during Mr. Williams' association with the city a balance recreation program had been developed.

His leadership and drive, often beyond the call of duty, will be long remembered, she said.

Mr. Williams joined the city recreation department almost eight years ago as assistant. He then served as administrator for a year before becoming director.

As community development officer for the province, Mr. Williams will be in charge of Region 9 which takes in Hastings, Prince Edward, Lennox and Addington, Northumberland and Peterborough counties.

He will continue to live in the city and will be based in Belleville at 14 Bridge St., West.

Home Repair Fraud Exposed by Bureau

Belleville city council has been asked to put a curb on fly-by-night operators who victimize senior citizens and widows by doing shoddy home repair jobs.

William Hockley of the citizens' bureau told council Monday that unscrupulous and under-qualified tradesmen offering to fix eavestroughs, paint roofs, driveways, chimneys and other problems, do shoddy work and then disappear.

Present city regulations, he said, do not call for such tradesmen to be licensed and they operate trucks and with telephones hooked to a city exchange.

In many instances, he said, the unsatisfactory work does not call for re-done by qualified workmen.

Mr. Hockley said that a Trenton operator doing such unsatisfactory work now has moved into the Belleville area.

Mayor Robin Jeffrey promised the matter would be looked into and asked for a staff report to council.

Body Identified

Provincial police have released the name of a man killed after his vehicle crashed into a concrete abutment near Trenton.

He is Pierre Belanger, 22, of Deseronto. Mr. Belanger was alone in his car travelling on Highway 401 when his car crashed into the abutment of the St. Hilaire underpass east of Trenton about 1.30 a.m. Monday.

He died en route to Trenton Memorial Hospital.

School Enrolment Outpaces Even the Largest Estimate

Hastings county's educational administrators had good news for trustees Monday night — the enrolment picture is "very bright".

Director of Education Eric Rombergh told the public board that enrolment is higher than expected, although, in keeping with a long-predicted provincial trend, the total number of students is less this year than last.

The "decrease in the rate of decline", was announced in Hastings county, Provincial studies had predicted a four-per-cent drop in enrolment this fall. The county board had predicted a three-per-cent five per cent in the Quinte area. The actual enrolment, taken Sept. 9, is only one per cent below that of last year.

Monday morning, the county schools held 22,936 students 614 more than the closest estimate last spring. The high point was reached in 1970 with a total student population of 24,331.

This fall is the first time enrolments have exceeded all projections, said Mr. Rombergh. The growth has taken place in rural areas, especially the Trenton - Belleville - Quinte triangle, and with the urban centres just holding their own. He was at a loss to explain school growth in the Marmora and Bancroft areas.

The board, he said, will have to hire a total of 13 extra teachers, some of them working half-time, to handle the larger-than-anticipated enrolment. Only one portable classroom, at Quinte elementary school, will be necessary and one more bus will be required for transportation.

Stirling Arena Still Only a Town's Dream

STIRLING — This community of 1,200 people can boast of one thing, and that is many hockey championships or near misses. The big problem the last several years has been ice, or the lack of it. The old arena has let hockey fans down on numerous occasions.

Last year at least $4,000 was spent keeping the ice under operation and Monday night, Stirling council refused a request for a second outlay.

It would cost $15,000 plus $5,000 for installation, Councillor Fred Brandt said he wondered whether or not unit would be suitable for a proposed new arena. Reeve Ed Klompmaker said the best thing to do is repair the present compressor.

Council voted to give the arena access to $1,500 to repair the present ice-maker.

Meanwhile, a new arena complete with artificial ice is still up in the air.

Subway Proposed For Cannifton Rd.

The change in plans will increase estimated costs by $311,000 but city council has voted to construct a subway rather than an overpass on Cannifton Rd. at the CN double tracks.

The decision to build a subway rather than an overpass was made by council Monday as it accepted a report from City Manager Wilbur Purcell.

Total estimated cost for the recessed subway is $2,642,000 as compared with $2,331,000 for the overpass. The city's share of the bill after payments by the railway and highway ministry, is estimated at $349,875 or $89,875 more than the city's share for an overpass.

Consultants Totten, Sims Hubicki Associates originally recommended an overpass for the Cannifton Rd. crossing but, after reviewing the project in May, recommended construction of a subway.

The new proposal was referred by council to then city engineer Purcell who, in a report to council Monday, said he feels the advantages of the subway proposal outweigh additional costs.

Council approved the recommendation for a subway-type grade separation and requested the consultants to submit their final functional planning report for approval.

The grade separation proposal would see Cannifton Rd. moved to the east with the new alignment intersecting Bell Blvd. on the Emily St. area. The existing Cannifton Rd. would be closed at the CNR.

New Addition

The Thurlow Volunteer Fire Department in Corbyville has a new addition to their fire fighting equipment. Added to their two pumpers, rescue van, tanker, and emergency unit is an aerial truck with a 37-foot ladder. The volunteers obtained the truck from Ontario Hydro in March and since then have been busy painting and converting it to a fire fighting vehicle.

Alarm Box

Belleville firefighters responded to the following calls for assistance in the 24-hour period ending at 8 a.m. Thursday.

Monday, Sept. 9, 3:04 p.m. ... grass fire-on CPR right of way behind Delora Drive.

Monday, Sept. 9, 6:20 p.m. 289 West Moira St., gas spillage from car.

Rural Land Use Report Draws Fire from Township Officials

"A rural land use study recently completed by the Quinte Planning Board drew fire from Sidney Township Council officers Monday night.

"I don't think anybody should be telling what I can do with my farm," said Sidney Reeve Gord Wilman. He said later his comment was intended to get a conversation "going" among councillors.

The 46-page document, released earlier last week, proposes a freeze for prime agricultural land in Sidney and Thurlow Townships, holding it only for agricultural use.

Councillor Reg McCurdy was the only voice in defence of the document, though he said later he is "not against the farmer."

"The Quinte Planning Board staff are only recommending it," said the councillor. "It's only a concept."

He reminded council that some time ago, Sidney Township endorsed Quinte planners who recommended residential development take place in and around established urban centres.

"Now we're saying residential development should take place anywhere a man can sell his farm," said the councillor. "We're contradicting ourselves."

Councillor McCurdy suggested if council is opposed to the planning board document, it should come up with another report "based on facts and figures."

Both Sidney and Thurlow Townships are expected to make a report to the planning board the first week in October.

Out Of Basement, Into Garage

Stirling council met for the first time in its new home Monday night. The converted garage was purchased several months ago — the total cost of building and renovations set at $39,000. Previously council had been meeting in the library basement. Left to right are Bob Fallis, Fred Brandt, Reeve Ed Klompmaker, clerk Bob Hulin, Maurice Faulkner and Wayne Martin. Standing is municipal lawyer John Miller.

Australia's Bid Falls Short

Tennis Crowns Back in U.S.

FOREST HILLS, N.Y. (AP) — Jimmy Connors and Billie Jean King took entirely different routes to the winner's circle in wresting United States tennis championships from Australian players.

Connors whipped two-time Open winner Ken Rosewall 6-1, 6-4, 6-1 Monday in the most lopsided men's final in the 95-year history of the great court tournament. Mrs. King won her fourth trophy in an erratic comeback over Australian Evonne Goolagong, 3-6, 6-3, 7-5.

"It was the best tennis I've ever played in my life...I did everything well," said Connors.

"I think that's what it takes to beat Ken Rosewall."

"I really thought Evonne was going to win there for a while. Until the last point, to be exact," said Mrs. King.

The victories were worth $22,000 apiece and marked the first sweep by U.S. players since Stan Smith and Mrs. King won in 1971.

Australians John Newcombe and Margaret Court took the titles last year. Newcombe bowed to Rosewall in the semi-finals Sunday, and Mrs. Court remained in Australia to await the birth of her second child.

Rosewall, at 39, is recognized as the classic player in the game, but Connors established himself as the current king of tennis. He won 11 straight games and took only one host eight minutes to win his third major title of the year and increase his season earnings to nearly $200,000.

The centre court crowd of more than 15,000 was all for Rosewall, but there was little to cheer about. Connors showed no compassion.

"I've seen people who pulled Ken Rosewall less 8-1 in the finals," said Connors. "When I was up 6-1, 6-0, 5-1, I had in my mind somewhere that Ken could still win."

Miss Goolagong, who at 22 was seeking her first U.S. Open crown, had trounced back a determined top-seeded Chris Evert in the semi - finals. But she was not so fortunate against the 30-

"I was afraid it would be a big letdown, but I knew I was playing against an experienced player.

"That is why I can't understand why people call her the old lady. She certainly doesn't play like it."

Mrs. King said Mrs. King.

"I wasn't sure I was going to play well after yesterday's match," Miss Goolagong said.

George Brancato Goes Shopping

OTTAWA (CP) — Coach George Brancato, riled by the lack of scoring punch displayed by Ottawa Rough Riders so far this season, is shopping this week for National Football League cuts.

"We have to get some new blood, that's all there is to it," said Brancato Saturday after Riders lost a 16-10 decision to Hamilton Tiger-Cats, a defeat that left Riders tied for last place in the Eastern Football Conference.

Under the dual quarterback backing of Jerry Keeling and Rick Cassata, Riders have managed only eight touchdowns in their eight games. Their points total of 112 is lowest in the East. They couldn't manage a touchdown against Hamilton Saturday.

Brancato was critical of his entire offensive team. But later he laid particular blame on his offensive line.

"We didn't even get an effort from the offence," said Brancato.

Resic Says No To Argo Offer

TORONTO (CP) — It didn't take Joe Restic long to make up his mind about whether he was available to take over as head coach of Toronto Argonauts of the Canadian Football League.

Restic told a telephone interviewer, CFRB's after Argos fired head coach John Rauch, that he was "receptive to new challenge."

But Monday night he said "I'm happy football coach at Harvard, period. As long as I'm alive, I'll be coaching the season at Harvard and closing the season at Harvard."

Meanwhile, Ross Jackson, former quarterback for Ottawa Rough Riders of the CFL, declined to comment on reports he had been offered the job.

Others whose names have come up include Dave Skrein, former head coach of British Columbia Lions and Saskatchewan Roughriders of the CFL; Saskatchewan quarterback Ron Lancaster and Allie Sherman, who coached Winnipeg Blue Bombers in the 1954-58 season.

While Argonaut general manager John Barrow looks for a new head coach, Moe Mosca, named to run the team on an interim basis when Rauch was fired last week, prepares its club for its next CFL game Thursday night against British Columbia.

Mosca was in charge when the Argos beat the 26-0 beating Sunday from Montreal Alouettes.

"That game reinforced my desire to hire an offensive-oriented coach with a background in the Canadian Football League," Toronto owner Bill Hodgson said Monday. "We will offer him a multi-year contract plus in order to get continuity." Hodgson said then Restic was one of three prime candidates for the job. He didn't name the others.

When Restic left the CFL after three years as head coach of Hamilton Tiger-Cats to take the Harvard job in 1975, he said he preferred the campus atmosphere.

He directed Harvard to a 7-2 record last year, just missing a share of the Ivy League title.

Buchanan A Bomber?

WINNIPEG (CP) — Winnipeg Blue Bombers acquired Monday the rights to halfback Dave Buchanan, who left Hamilton Tiger-Cats last year to play with Birmingham of the World Football League.

General manager Earl Lunger said the Bombers gave up their first Canadian college draft choice in return for Buchanan but the deal is off if Buchanan fails to report.

Billie Jean – Thought Evonne Would Win

Eastern Specialists Aiming At Records

TORONTO (CP) — With the Canadian Football League about halfway through its regular-season schedule it looks as if a number of field goal records will fall.

Ian Sunter of Hamilton Tiger-Cats, leading scorer in the CFL, kicked five Saturday against Ottawa Rough Riders and now has 39 for the season. The club record of 21 will certainly fall and he's got a good chance of setting a league record—it now is 32, set by Dave Cutler of Montreal Alouettes.

Don Sweet of Montreal Alouettes has kicked 13 field goals so far this season and the club's club mark of 19, set by Justin Canale, will probably be erased.

Gerry Organ of Ottawa set a club and Eastern Football Conference record with 21 three-pointers last year. This season he's running ahead of that pace with 18 after eight games.

And Zenon Andruszyzyn of Toronto Argonauts has 13 field goals at the halfway mark in the season, only four away from the club record he set last season.

It hasn't been a vintage season for field-goal kickers in the Eastern Football Conference. Cutler leads the pack with 13 after eight games, well off his record-setting pace.

In the convert department, only Sunter has a perfect scoreless height for eight.

Tiant on Sick List

Red Sox in Trouble

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Boston Red Sox are hoping the flu bug doesn't stay with pitcher Luis Tiant for more than the standard 24 hours.

Tiant, the club's only 20-game winner, was scheduled to start tonight's second game of an interrupted American League baseball series with New York Yankees, but Monday night he was sent home with a virus.

He was given medication for the illness and didn't have to stay to watch his team lose a 4-3 decision to the Yankees.

The defeat knocked the Red Sox out of a tie with the Yankees in the American League East. They are a game back of the Yankees, shared second place with Baltimore Orioles, who shaded Milwaukee Brewers 9-8.

In Monday's other American League games, Cleveland Indians bombed Detroit Tigers 7-1, Minnesota Twins downed Chicago White Sox 3-1, Oakland A's swept Kansas City Royals 3-0 and 7-6 and California Angels downed Texas Rangers 4-1 in the first game of a double-header. Game was the second 9-3.

In Monday's game, the Red Sox made three errors, two of them by shortstop Mario Guerrero, and allowed Jim Umbarger, two George Medich, 13-12, and Sparky Lyle, 3-4, relievers to the Red Sox. Chris Chambliss hit his 21st homer of the year and Elliott Maddox also drove in two runs as the Yankees raked Boston starter Rogelio Moret and Reggie Cleveland for 13 hits.

Bobby Grich singled, with two out in the 11th inning and scored the winning run on a single by Tom Murphy, giving the Orioles their win. Reliever Bob Reynolds, 8-5, who relieved relief hob from two pitchers in the 11th, was the winner.

Oscar Gamble's first-inning, two-run homer matched a three-run rally and Dick Bosman pitched a three-hitter to lead the Indians past the Tigers. Bosman had a shutout until the ninth when Phil Mankowski hit his 13th homer of the year.

Home runs by Harmon Killebrew and Steve Braun in the eighth inning powered the Twins to their win. Killebrew was batting for Phil Roof when, he hit a two-run homer to overcome a 1-0 White Sox lead.

Willie Horton had a two-hitter and Jim Rinker a four-hitter for the A's Monday as the A's 6½ games ahead of Texas in the American League West.

Rudy Howell's first major league home run highlighted a three-run rally in the fourth inning in the Rangers' victory over Chuck Dobson, nabbing his first start of the year for the Athletics, stopped Texas on seven hits in in the opener.

Cubs Own the Pirates

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Chicago Cubs, who have been making life miserable for Pittsburgh all season, brought red-hot Pirates down to earth again Monday.

The Cubs, last in baseball's National League East, stopped a six-game Pittsburgh winning streak by trouncing the Pirates 9-4.

"When you're fighting for a pennant there are no last-place teams," said Pirates manager Danny Murtaugh. "They beat the daylights out of us and they've been doing it all year."

The Pirates lose didn't do St. Louis Cardinals, their closest rival for the division pennant any good. Philadelphia's 4-3 victory over Montreal Expos gave Leahey pitched a two-hitter as the Phillies stopped the Cardinals 4-2.

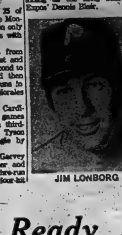
In Monday's other National League games, Los Angeles Dodgers downed Houston Astros 9-1, Cincinnati Reds defeated San Diego Padres 6-5, San Francisco Giants downed Houston Astros 5-4 and New York whipped Montreal Expos 7-1.

The Pirates had won 25 of their last 30 games before Monday's loss, but they won only five times in 14 meetings with the Cubs.

The Cubs got homers from Jose Cardenal in the first and Andre Thornton in the second to twice tie the game and then went ahead with three runs in the third with Jerry Morales doubling home a pair.

Lonborg fooled the Cardinals, who remained 3½ games behind the Pirates, to a five-inning single by Mike Tyson and an eight-inning single by Babe McBride.

Hot-hitting Steve Garvey cracked a two-out homer as Ron Cey belted a three-run homer to back the four-hit pitching of rookie Geoff Zahn and lead the Dodgers beat the Brewers.



Home runs by Tony Perez and Dan Driessen in the eighth helped a four-run fifth inning that helped the Reds defeat the Padres.

Gary Matthews' two-run double and Dave Kingman's three-run single highlighted a five-run rally in the eighth inning that lifted the Giants to their win over the Astros.

Ray Sadecki scattered eight hits and registered his seventh save of the season in a four-run fourth inning as the Mets beat the Expos' Dennis Blair.

Harris Has Other Problems —

Hull Will be Ready

SASKATOON (CP) — Coach Billy Harris of Team Canada '74 confirmed Monday what observers of the club's nine-day training camp have suspected for several days: "There have been a few disappointments."

Harris would not at a news conference criticize individual players but said he is more concerned with possible weaknesses at forward than on defence.

The biggest weakness would have been the absence of Bobby Hull, However, Dr. Gerry Wilson said Monday in Winnipeg that Hull will skate Wednesday or Thursday and is certain to play against the Soviet Union in an eight-game series starting Sept. 17 at Quebec City.

Hull was examined Monday after he hobbled from the ice Sunday during Team Canada's 3-2 loss to the Western Canada Hockey League All-Stars.

Harris held a news conference that Dr. Wilson first believed an operation would be required, forcing Hull out of the series. But it turned out that Hull only strained a medial ligament in the left knee. It was an aggravation of an old injury.

Harris intended to use four forward lines against the All-Stars tonight but changed his mind when he learned how cold it is in Saskatoon Arena.

Temperatures during practice Monday were about 25 degrees. "In such cold temperatures, four lines would mean a lot of skating and we don't want anybody to catch pneumonia, so we'll use three lines."

Saskatoon Arena is known as the house that Gordie Howe built but Dick Tarr of Team Canada was not impressed.

"If this is the kind Gordie builds home, he'll never build one for me," Tarr said.

The arena is colder and more decrepit than arenas at Brandon, Man., Flin Flon, Man., or even Hat., Alta., where Team Canada practiced and had its first three games in the five-game series with the Junior.

Harris and manager Bill Hunter will discuss the final Team Canada roster Thursday when the World Hockey Association players return to their training base at Edmonton.

Harris said over-all development of the team is as good as he expected despite occasional disappointments.

"I only to note, I've been concentrating on conditioning. Now I've got to work with penalty-killing units and power plays, things like that."

He also said ther are signs Team Canada is weak defense as essential points, in front of the opposition net for example.

Despite the gruelling exhibition tour of five games in eight days spread over three Prairie provinces, Harris said the series has been beneficial.

"I don't have to tell you again how pleased I am with the opposition. The juniors have forced us to condition ourselves quickly. There is more benefit in losing by one goal than in winning by scores of 15-1 or 13-1."

DOUG MOHNS

Is He Fit Enough?

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Forty-year-old Doug Mohns made his debut Monday with Washington Capitals—at the opening session of the National Hockey League club's five-day rookie camp.

Hoping to compete in the NHL for his 22nd season, the defenceman reported at his own request before the expansion club opens its regular training camp Saturday.

A back injury and operation is the question mark in Mohns' future.

Mohns is reporting to the Capitals on a "look-see basis," said general manager Milt Schmidt. He is still on a contract with Atlant.a Flames—on second year of a two-year agreement—but the Capitals have the option to purchase it.

Surgery in April to correct a disc ailment is the catch in the deal.

H & R In QFL Final

Scott Reid fired 13 Strikeouts and drove in the winning run in the ninth inning to give Howard and Robert Printing a 4-3 victory over Devolin Motors Monday night at the Alemite.

The win gave the Printers a 4-3 series victory in the Quinte Fastball League semi-finals and advances them to the finals against Augers Men's Wear this weekend. Firm dates and times have not been announced.

Reid scattered nine Devolin hits and only walked two in picking up the win.

He was backed up by a flawless Howard and Robert defence, led by left fielder Terry Pope. He made two excellent catches including one in the bottom of the ninth that robbed Devolin slugger, Ray Lumsden, of an easy stand-up triple.

At the plate, centre-fielder, Dave Shelton, smashed a triple and a home run to lead the winners offense. Jack Hughes contributed a ninth inning triple and scored the winning run on a sacrifice fly by Reid. Other hits went to Rusty Garvin, Ken Genereaux, Dwight Rothwell and Larry Potter each with one single.

Don Holoway took the loss on the Devolin mound. He fanned eight batters and walked two.

Jim Horwood was tops at the plate for the losers. He created a home run, added a single and scored twice. Solo Burnside pinched out three singles and Rick Rosebush had two. Ray Laffleden and Darryl Crang each doubled.

Ken Genereaux dangled down to third base, on a sleeper play in Monday night's Quinte Fastball League semi-final between Howard and Robert and Devolin Motors. Genereaux caught Devolin catcher, John Burnside, napping with the ball in his glove and stole third. Devolin third baseman Bruce Sickle attempts to put the tag on Genereaux, but it's too late. Howard and Robert won the game 4-3 and the series 4-2.

Yankees Get Alex Johnson from Rangers

BOSTON (AP) — New York Yankees announced Monday the acquisition of outfielder Alex Johnson from Texas Rangers on waivers. The controversial Johnson was batting .291 with four home runs and 41 runs batted in for the American League club. He had been used almost exclusively as a designated hitter for Texas, his ninth major league baseball team.

Richardson Returning

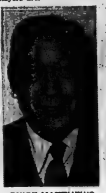
Bobcats Getting it Together

By MIKE BRADSHAW
Sports Staff

The way things are shaping up for this year's Belleville junior B Bobcats local fans can easily expect another fine season on ice hockey.

"It looks good," says general manager Jim Matthews, "things are coming along fine."

One man's joy is another man's sorrow.



The Cats' general manager has learned that Jim Richardson will be playing for Belleville this year. Richardson topped the Bobcats scoring list last year with 39 goals and 57 assists for 96 points in 42 games.

The centre was supposed to be playing for Boston University this season on a full scholarship. For the last few weeks Jim has been told he would receive the scholarship almost six months times as he was told he would not.

Finally on Thursday a Boston official phoned the Richardson home and Jim was told he wasn't going to get a scholarship — something to do with the late registration of his marks from last year.

Jim has decided against continuing his post-secondary education.

Richardson has said he will be playing for the Bobcats this season. he isn't signed as yet, but then only a few players are.

SNIPE MATTHEWS

Last year's captain, Rob Foster, and 19-year-old Mike Watt, another returnee, have both signed cards for this season.

Foster is noted for his consistency in play — offensively and defensively — while Watt proved to be the best pokechecker and one of the better fore-checkers on the club last season.

Though Foster wasn't known for putting the puck in the net he was accepted as one of the better penalty killers on the club. On the other hand, Watt teamed up with John Sergeant and Mark Cathro during the playoffs last year and came up with four goals and nine assists in 16 games.

The threesome became known as the hustlers, but Watt is the only one of the trio returning this year.

The only other signee so far is Wayne Calberry from Trenton Birt's Handy Stand Juveniles. Last season Calberry proved a vital part of the Trenton team that won all-Ontario Juvenile AA honors.

The goaltender situation seems to be the easiest for Matthews to talk about since both his netminders are back from last season.

The Cats had 14 goaltenders turn out to this season's camp. But Matthews feels he'll be going with Bruce Clark and Rob Moore, since they both have another year after this one and they both have experience on the Junior B level.

SLICES — A couple of good prospects for Matthews' Bobcats are 18-year-old Louie Doucette and his younger brother, Mark, 16-years-old. Louie played for Frankford Huskies last season and impressed many observers.

The Doucettes call Campbellford home.

The younger brother is a hustler, a digger, a skater and a scorer. As a matter of fact Mark follows in the footsteps of his older brother, both the Doucettes play the style of hockey made popular here by Mark Coates.

* * *

The Cats have changed their exhibition playoff schedule to accommodate Belleville's ice-making.

Belleville won't be playing any games until Wednesday, Sept. 18, in the Memorial Arena. At that time they'll take on the new league entry, Kingston Voyageurs.

On the 20th and 21st they play back-to-back games with Peterborough Lions, at home on the 20th and at the Community Gardens in Peterborough on the 21st.

On the 25th Belleville brings Pickering to town. It should be an expellent matchup after the performances of both clubs in the Metro Junior B semi-finals last year.

* * *

Bobcat practice times have been changed. The only one available to date is 10 p.m. Wednesday at the Community Gardens in Trenton.

Take Lacrosse Title

Midgets "E" Champions

"We started off the season miserably," said coach Keith Kane, "but we finished very well."

Kane's midget all-star lacrosse team couldn't have finished any better, Saturday and Sunday they were in London for the Ontario Minor Lacrosse Association champion ships.

Because of their season records from past years and the number of boys registered in the sport in the city, Belleville was placed in the E division of the competition.

The locals came home with the Ontario E Championship, defeating Buffalo, N.Y. by default, trouncing St. Catherines 13-3 and in the final downing Kingston 11-5.

Belleville just made it to the playoffs on the final day of the regular season. The competition, the locals had in their own area was the best in the province.

They had to play against last year's A, B and C provincial champions, Peterborough, Oshawa and Ajax respectively. This made the South Central Lacrosse Association — the one Belleville is in — tough.

In the semi-final contest against St. Catherines, Chris Rutledge fired three goals to lead the locals to the win. John Geen and Wally Inwood scored two each and Jeff Gow, Sandy Waterson, Rob Hurst, Paul Minaker, Kent Manning and Brian McMahon scored one goal each.

The second contest, the Ontario final, had the locals come from behind in the third period and score eight unanswered goals. Rutledge was again the key to victory starting off the third period surge with three goals in less than three minutes.

Geen fired two goals and Jamie Kennedy, Inwood, Brent Walmsley, Minaker, McMahon and Hurst each got one.

Duncan Boyce was in goal for the victory over St. Catharines and Joey Bourette stopped Kingston in the final.

Charity Cup Play

Spartacus Wins

Sudden death Belleville Charity Cup play opened at the Ontario School for the Deaf pitch, Monday, with visiting Trenton Spartacus blanking Belleville United 2-0, in the Bay of Quinte Soccer Association competition.

Andy Vinitis and George Hagbirnie took care of the scoring for Spartacus.

Trenton Challenge Cup action resumes Wednesday when Brighton visits Warkworth. Thursday, Cooey's Haulage and Farsen's Cleaners of Belleville hook up at Centennial Park in Trenton and Golden Mile Olympics meet United at OSD.

- Losers in first round Cup games will take part in the Pop Helyer Trophy event.

Assyrians Colonized Trier 2,000 Years Before Christ

This bridge spanning the Moselle River in Trier, the oldest city in Germany, was built by the Romans. Other Roman remains in the city include an amphitheatre, baths and the city gates. (CP Photo)

TRIER, Germany (CP) — This oldest city in Germany has known Julius Caesar, Emperor Augustus and Constantine the Great.

It was known as Treves, as it still is in French, when Caesar conquered the Treveri, a Celtic tribe, in 58 BC. And the Assyrians established a colony on the site on the Moselle River 2,000 years before that. Emperor Diocletian made it the capital of his western empire, which included Gaul, Spain, two German provinces and Britain.

Trier's years of glory are remembered in one of the best-preserved Roman gates and other Roman antiquities.

The gate's survival was threatened because residents pried off the iron clamps holding the big stone blocks in place to make tools out of them. But during the Middle Ages the gate was incorporated as the heart of a church and protected from weather, wars and plunder.

When Napoleon entered Trier he ordered the church removed and restored the Porta Nigra as the landmark of Trier.

The gate is built of local sandstone which has turned dark giving it the name Black Gate or Porta Nigra, and it is all that remains of the walls and towers that once protected the Roman city. The twin towers flanking the double archway are three storeys high.

The throne room of the German prince electors was incorporated from a former Roman basilica with a hall 67 metres spacious than most suburban lofts and about 100 feet high. It now is a Protestant church on Constantinplatz. Another Roman basilica is the nucleus of the Roman Catholic cathedral.

Constantine I built the Imperial Baths in the fourth century and their remains, about 300 yards wide, show they were among the largest in the Roman empire. And the city still gets its water supply from the same source as the Romans.

Trier is the centre of the Moselle-Ruwer-Saar wine region and some vineyards grow in the Tiergarten section of the city. Tiergarten, laid by the German word for zoological gardens, a resident was asked if there was a zoo here in that part of town. He replied: "Oh, no, we've never had a zoo here. This is where the Romans kept their animals for the amphitheatre."

The bridges, the Romans built across the Moselle is still in use, supported by the original pillars and strong enough to carry car traffic. Nearby are second century thermal baths, 600 feet long.

Although Romans are credited with planting grapes along the south bank of the Moselle, historians dating earlier than their arrival explain grapes and wine goblets. The goblets, with short, wide, cupped stems and fat cups, are those still used today to serve Moselle wines.

Where the Romans once had extensive underground wine caves is a restaurant called Roman Wine Cellars. On its walls are pieces of Roman glass and pottery. The owner, like most citizens of Trier, is an amateur archeologists and likes are a few of his finds.

In the Landesmuseum is the best collection of Roman relics north of the Alps. Some of the finds are glass bowls, oil lamps, statues, figurines, tools, frescoes and mosaic floors as well as earlier Druid stones, Celtic gold ornaments, and pre-historic.

As proud as Trier is of its past, it is no Williamsburg or Upper Canada Village or museum town. The ruins are left to be visited and enjoyed but little restoration has been carried out. Trier is too busy with its wipe trade and manufacturing.

It is a small city with smart shops, sidewalk cafes, restaurants, wine cellars and handsome buildings dating back to the Middle Ages and, offers plenty of sightseeing—cathedrals, churches, town hall, market square with a Renaissance fountain, palaces and gardens. Its museums include the house where Karl Marx was born.

Trier is small enough to explore on foot. However, sightseeing with a guide is organized and follows Roman footsteps. It includes a boat trip to Pfalzel, where the Roman emperors had their summer residence, as well as an evening of wine tasting in the Roman Wine Cellars.

The city is close to France and a six miles from Luxembourg. It has suffered from French invasions over its history, was a refuge for French Huguenots and has been a French occupation zone since the Second World War.

Law School Students Work with Policemen

HALIFAX (CP) — Five Dalhousie University law school students have just about completed a summer of working with city police to gain a first-hand insight into law enforcement.

While all intend to continue on the second year of such a program in the form of essays since preliminary assessments have been made.

The purpose of the program is twofold—to provide students with summer employment and to foster good relations between the police and students.

During the 15-week period this year the students accompanied and assisted, wherever feasible, policemen in the traffic division, patrol division, morality and drug squads, licensing division and personnel training department. They were also given the opportunity to handle court duties.

According to Inspector Ernest Langille, personnel and training officer for the force, the students received a type of on-the-job training and were paid the same salary during the period as a recruit.

"Unlike last year, when we first initiated the program, this year's students have been substituted in round-the-clock shift work, males and females.

"This was the result of last year's feedback from the two students who had, they felt, been given the best deal. Both were not being as fully exposed to the nitty gritty as they could be," Inspector Langille said.

It came as a surprise to Inspector Langille, who described himself as a policeman of the "old school," that the two females had no complaints about being subjected to street duties.

Dalia Ridley, one of the two females, said she found little objection from police officers accompanied on the job.

"Many police officials appear to be very open-minded about accepting women on the force and they showed no reluctance about having us along," she said.

Inspector Langille noted that the only complaints received since the female students accompanied officers on patrol had been from citizens who thought policemen were taking their girl-friends along on the beat.

He added that in some cases of domestic disputes he thought having a female along would benefit the officer trying to handle the situation.

"I would definitely like to see the program expanded next year to smaller police forces and also to include a larger number of students.

"I feel they obtain a higher appreciation and respect for the job a policeman does," Inspector Langille said.

Ordinary Drug Use Is Problem

TORONTO (CP) — The effect of drugs on driving is a global phenomenon . . . b a l l i n g the world's best brains, David Archibald, executive director of the Addiction Research Foundation of Ontario, said Monday.

He told about 500 delegates to a drug, alcohol and traffic safety conference that the problem is increasing with greater vehicle registrations and alcohol and drug use.

He said poly-drug use is not necessarily a result of illicit activity or irresponsible behavior.

"I am talking about the hundreds upon hundreds of commercial preparations routinely consumed for any one of a number of human complaints."

Impairment caused by combinations of drugs may be a particularly insidious form of impairment, Mr. Archibald said. Per-capita consumption of alcohol has risen from 80 per cent of Canadians over the age of 15 in 1950 to 90 per cent this year.

Trudeau Rejects Plea For Inflation Parley

CALGARY (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau rejected Monday calls for an economic summit conference to deal with inflation.

A conference on inflation has been suggested by the Canadian Manufacturers Association.

The prime minister said at a news conference there is no point in such a conference now if it is just a place for governments and others to blame others and wring their hands about the seriousness of the situation.

He was meeting with labor and business to attempt to find a common ground to deal with inflation. When he found such common ground he would call an economic conference.

Answering questions about the relationship between his government and Alberta and other Western provinces, particularly in the field of resource industry taxation, he said the federal approach is "fair shares for industry, the province and the federal government."

He said the federal government promoted the concept in January and it was not accepted, but it is still backing the federal approach.

The Prince Minister, making his first visit to the West since achieving a majority government in the July federal election, mentioned federal-provincial talks on such things as resource taxation and the federal proposal to remove royalties paid to the provinces by resource industries as a deduction for income tax purposes. He declined to specify what was happening within those talks.

Promises made during the election campaign were promises for a full four-year parliamentary term and there would be action on only some of them during the forthcoming session, he said, including legislation on housing and transportation.

Mr. Trudeau addressed the news conference after meeting with Liberal party members from Alberta who failed to elect a member of Parliament in either the 1972 or the 1974 federal elections.

He announced that Senator Earl Hastings of Alberta has been named co-ordinator of federal activities and policies in Alberta.

PM Promises Hatfield To Defend Constitution

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau has promised New Brunswick Premier Richard Hatfield that the federal government will act "to preserve the integrity of the constitution" in the face of Quebec's controversial language legislation.

The assurance came in a Sept. 4 letter replying to Mr. Hatfield's request for a Supreme Court of Canada ruling on the constitutionality of the new law. The premier said it appears to infringe on language provisions in the British North America Act, Canada's basic law.

In his reply to Mr. Hatfield's Aug. 8 request, Mr. Trudeau said the government still is studying the implications of the Quebec law, which makes French the province's only official language. Copies of the prime minister's letter were released to the press Monday.

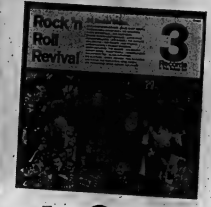
Critics of the new law have argued that it violates sections of the BNA Act dealing with the rights of both English and French in the Quebec legislature and providing a degree of self-government to school boards in choosing their language of instruction.

Another controversial section of the law channels immigrant children into the French-language school system if they show a lack of proficiency in both English and French. Some constitutional experts have argued this ignores a section of the BNA Act which separates students on the basis of religion, not language.

Mr. Trudeau said in his reply that the "federal government will, in accordance with established practice, take the necessary & corridors necessary to preserve the integrity of the constitution."

The prime minister reiterated the federal view he has held to: men should be allowed to use the official language of his or her choice and to be educated in that language.

May Move



TORONTO (CP) — The controversial Quebec language bill has led to a substantial number of families from Quebec industries about relocating in Ontario, Claude Bennett, Ontario's minister of industry and tourism, said Monday.

Mr. Bennett did not say how many inquiries the province has had.

Food Prices Blamed

Living Cost Index Rises One Per Cent

OTTAWA (CP) — Higher food prices continued to be the big item pushing up the consumer price index—up by one per cent in August—Statistics Canada reported today.

Increased housing costs was the other major item in the rise as the index level was 10.8 per cent above that of August, 1973.

There was a 1.4 per cent gain in the food index but Statistics Canada says this is about half the average rate of increases in this component index between July and August since 1971.

The housing index was up nine-tenths of one per cent in August.

The all-items index for August was at 168.4. Stated another way the rate of consumer prices which could be bought for $100 in 1961 cost $169.90 in August, $168.00 in July and $153.00 in August, 1973.

The consumer price index is based on a 1967 survey of family spending patterns and weights of major component indexes are: Food, 25 per cent; housing, 31 per cent; clothing, 11 per cent; transportation, 15 per cent; and other items 18 per cent.

Most food items for home consumption increased in price in August. An exception was fresh vegetables which normally drop in price in late summer but this year's decline of 18.4 per cent between July and August was more than normal.

Pork prices rose 8.3 per cent in August, beef prices 4.3 per cent and fresh fruit 2.3 per cent. Sugar prices were up 12.8 per cent to a level 169 per cent above that of a year earlier.

The August level of the food index was 14.3 per cent higher than the level of 12 months earlier.

During the year the index for restaurant meals went up by 22.2 per cent and for food eaten out house 13.2 per cent.

Higher house prices, record mortgage levels and increased home costs pushed the housing index up 9.4 per cent above last August. Rents contributed a relatively small amount to the August rise—up only three-tenths of one per cent in the month.

A nine-tenths of one per cent increase in new car prices accounted for most of the rise in the transportation index. Up six-tenths of one per cent in August and 18.5 per cent in the 12-month period.

The price of admission to football games and movie theatres went up in many areas and this accounted for three-quarters of a one-per-cent rise in the recreation and reading index in August. This index was 10.3 per cent above the level of last August.

The clothing index rose by five-tenths of one per cent to a level 13.8 per cent above last August. There was a general advance in clothing prices last month.

There was a 1.5-per-cent increase in the health and personal care index and more than half of the monthly rise was attributed to higher prices for haircuts for men and women. This index was up 9.5 per cent during the year.

Watergate Review Ordered

Study of Pardon Policy No Bar to Trial of Six

WASHINGTON (AP) — Presidential Watergate pardons should not interfere with the cover-up trial, scheduled to start in 30 days.

Disclosure Tuesday of Ford's consideration of possible pardons for all Watergate figures drew a tidal wave of criticism.

White House counsel Philip Buchen declined to set a time table for Ford's decision by Ford, but indicated the study may not be completed by the scheduled Sept. 30 start of the trial of six former aides and associates of Richard Nixon on charges resulting from the Watergate scandal.

Buchen said Ford considers pardons a "not a unique situation," and rejected suggestions that disclosure of the pardon study intruded on the judicial process and threatened the defendants' right to a fair trial.

A lawyer talking part in preparation for the trial said that, on the contrary, the disclosure may help the defendants, since a jury would know that pardons were considered and that "the top man, the president, got away."

Lawyers for the six defendants conferred for nearly two hours Tuesday to discuss a brief presented unconditional pardon of Nixon Sunday.

The defence lawyers were stated at the disclosure that pardons for their clients also were under consideration.

A lawyer for former attorney-general John Mitchell, Plato Cacheris, said such widespread pardons are "the only fair and equitable thing to do in light of the pardon already given" to Nixon.

But prosecutors voiced dismay at the White House disclosure, as did dozens of members of Congress.

"Pardoning all those connected with Watergate would complete the cover-up of the cover-up," said Senate Democratic Whip Robert Byrd of West Virginia.

House Republican Leader John Rhodes of Arizona, who conferred with Ford Tuesday, said he agrees with the pardon for Nixon but "it does not necessarily follow that a similar pardon should be issued to those individuals under the former president who participated in criminal activity."

Senator Sam Ervin, the North Carolina Democrat who headed a Senate committee investigation into the Watergate scandal, said: "I can't imagine that he could possibly make such a mockery of the principles of equal justice under law by pardoning those who would not took to steal from the American people their right to a free election. . . ."

Greek Fire Kills Quebec Paratrooper

NICOSIA (CP-AFP) — A Canadian paratrooper killed in Nicosia Tuesday night was shot when Greek-Cypriot National Guard troops opened fire on a UN patrol, a UN spokesman said today.

Spokesman Rudi Stajkhar said Pte. Joseph Jean-Claude Berger, 21, of Rimouski, Que., was hit in the head as Turkish Cypriots were fired from a National Guard position near the so-called Green Line separating Greek and Turkish Cypriot areas of the capital.

Stajkhar said a UN investigation showed that the patrol vehicle halted about 200 yards from the National Guard position and turned to drive off when shots rang out.

He said the UN command is making a strong protest to the National Guard.

Canadian defence department spokesman in Ottawa said the jeep carrying Pte. Berger, a member of the Canadian Airborne Regiment based in Edmonton, was driven by another Canadian. Two others were injured.

Over 100 Killed In Mozambique

LISBON (AP) — More than 100 persons have been killed in street battles in the last 24 hours as Lourenco Marques following the collapse of a white settlers' rebellion, the official radio station in the Portuguese territory reported today.

A Portuguese government communique issued in Lisbon reported "racial violence" and said the army is flying reinforcements to the capital from southern Mozambique.

The action came following the signing of an agreement to give control of the territorial government to Frelimo, the African guerrilla movement that in 10 years has fought the Portuguese army to a standstill in Mozambique.

Almost no violence was reported Saturday, Sunday and Monday, and Tuesday Portuguese authorities announced that the rebels had surrendered peacefully following an ultimatum from the government in Lisbon. But the communique issued today indicated street fighting broke out after reports of black and white demonstrators met.

Reporters and other sources in Lourenco Marques said the city of 140,000 had 70,000 whites was loose but comparatively calm today after more than 24 hours of rioting and anarchy.

The Lisbon newspaper O Seculo reported that the leaders of the three-day revolt were fled to neighboring white-ruled South Africa or Rhodesia.

Reports said whites could travel in some sections only by armed convoy. Black mobs hung over some areas, and most businesses were closed. Frequent machine-gun fire was heard as troops and police tried to quell rioting and control looting.

Soldiers said many stores were ransacked, most of them by people seeking food.

Lourenco Marques airport was closed to civilian flights. Train service between the territory and South Africa was reported normal.

South African officials said several hundred Portuguese refugees arrived at the Komatipoort border post.

Big Change In Paroles Suggested

TORONTO (CP) — The Globe and Mail says a Senate committee report opposes plan for reaching changes in Canada's parole system to make it fairer to the prisoner and safer for society. . .

The newspaper says the committee, following a three-year study, suggests "dangerous-offender" legislation which would allow the courts to order certain persons to prison for a minimum of 10 years, with life-term parole after release.

In all, the standing committee on legal and constitutional affairs, headed by Senator Carl Goldenberg, makes 79 recommendations leading to "a fundamentally different approach to parole."

The recommendations ran from creation of independent parole tribunals to repeal of provisions in the Criminal Code that allow the courts to specify a term of probation following imprisonment.

Jaworski Was Probing Ten Nixon Activities

WASHINGTON (AP) — The special Watergate prosecutor was investigating 10 areas in which former President Richard Nixon may have been personally involved, Wake House officials disclosed Tuesday.

A memorandum prepared by the staff of special prosecutor Leon Jaworski and made public by the White House said the areas range from Nixon's tax deductions to the handling of campaign contributions by his close friend Bebe Rebozo.

The 10 matters which were "still under investigation in this office and may prove to have some direct connection to activities in which Mr. Nixon is personally involved" were listed as:

—"Tax deductions relating to the gift of pre-presidential papers;

—"The Colson obstruction of justice plea in the Ellsberg matter;

—"The transfer of the national security wiretap records from the FBI to the White House;

—"The initiating of wiretapping of John Sears (former White House aide);

—"Misuse of Internal Revenue Service information;

—"Misuse of IRS through attempted initiation of audits as to 'enemies';

—"The dairy-industry pledge and its relation to the price-support change;

—"Filing of a challenge in the Washington Post ownership of two Florida television stations;

—"False and evasive testimony at the (Richard G.) Kleindienst confirmation hearings (as attorney-general) as to White House participation in department of justice decisions about ITT;

—"The handling of campaign contributions by Mr. Rebozo for the personal benefit of Mr. Nixon."

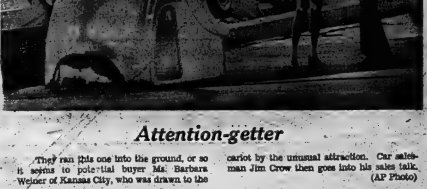
Nine Provincial Premiers Meet

TORONTO(C P) — Inflation and the country's economy will be major topics when the 15th annual premiers' conference gets down to business Thursday.

Nine of the 10 provincial premiers are expected to attend the two-day session. Nova Scotia's Gerald Regan has a prior commitment to attend another conference.

The premiers will attend a reception tonight and then go behind closed doors Thursday and Friday for sessions on the state of the economy, interprovincial co-operation for economic development and federal activities in direct employment programs.

Federal representatives will be on hand but Prime Minister Trudeau will not attend.



In a statement last month, Ontario's William Davis, host premier, said the conference remind each premier of the key role that geography, history and culture play in the economic development of this country.

"They also remind us that the concept of Confederation, thus far, has worked—perhaps not as well as it could have, or can be made to—but it has worked," Mr. Davis said.

Mr. Davis emphasized that one of the issues "that will clearly occupy our attention will be that of the economy and the inroads being made upon it by inflation."

It was his conviction "that even though inflation was both national and international, provincial governments could make important contributions to lessen its impact.

Last year's conference was held at Charlottetown and the major topic of discussion was the energy situation.

Underpass Approved By Trenton Council

TRENTON — Town Council learned this week it can expect completion of a proposed $1,462,000 Sidney St.-CPR underpass within the next two years.

In presenting preliminary plans to the project, Hugh Glennie, project manager with Totten, Sims, Hubicki Associates Ltd., told council's committee of the whole session the new structure would expand Sidney St.'s effective road surface.

At present, said the planning consultant, two cars can squeeze through the underpass but north of Elm Ave., but it is "virtually a one-way operation". The narrowness of the underpass has prompted the new grade separation.

Council is expected to give the planner's recommendation the official go-ahead during its meeting next week.

Under the plan, the effective height of the underpass would be increased from its present 12 feet, 11 inches to a minimum of 15 feet, three inches.

Various changes both in utility placement and land use in the area will have to be made to accommodate the three-span reinforced concrete bridge. Some land will be acquired by the town.

Mr. Glennie said lowering of the road and raising of the bridge's structure would eliminate the need to cut into the bedrock just below the street, thus complicating construction. A pumping station on the storm sewer would also be necessary.

CPR officials have already given the grade separation design their approval, Mr. Glennie said. Approval has also been reached for the necessary two-foot elevation of the railway crossing at West ST.

Trenton's share of the cost will be an estimated $270,000. The federal government will pick up the lion's share of the cost and the remainder will come from the provincial ministry of transportation and communication and CPR. A small portion will be paid by affected utilities.

Construction of the new span across the eventual four 11-foot lanes will take about 12 months.

Couple Burned Out

Charles and Louella Kool, an elderly Consecon couple, are recovering today in Trenton Memorial Hospital from burns suffered when five destroyed their home Tuesday morning. Consecon Ameliasburgh and Wellington-Hillier firefighters were unable to control the blaze in the two-storey frame house, but neighboring houses were saved.

Resident Want School Lunch-breaks Reduced

BLOOMFIELD—An Ameliasburgh resident has urged Prince Edward school trustees to review lengthy lunch and after-class periods enjoyed by students at Bellleville Collegiate Institute.

In a letter to board members, Mrs. Wilma Adams asked them to reconsider students in "children" lacking the proper supervision.

She said approximately 320 students attending classes at BCI have a 70-minute lunch and study period daily. After class, from 3:10 to 3:40 p.m. they are supposed to participate in teacher consultation periods followed by a 30 minute wait before their buses arrive.

Mrs. Adams suggested buses could be made available to take students home immediately after class.

John McNeil, Prince Edward director of education pointed out that if students are bused home immediately after classes they would lose the opportunity for needed assistance. He said that he has been told teachers remain available for half an hour after school.

Ameliasburgh trustee George Flower explained the 70-minute lunch period is set aside for active sports, many of whom go home to eat.

He added however, there are too many Ameliasburgh pupils is one spot to be unsupervised.

Alarm Box

Bellevile firefighters responded to the following calls for assistance in the 24-hour period ending 8 a.m. today:

Tuesday, Sept. 11, 12:35 p.m. — Victoria and Church, faulty carburetor on taxi, extinguished before arrival.

Tuesday, Sept. 11, 3:37 p.m. — Strand's Jewellers and Gift Box, 208 Front St., short to electrical wiring on floorcost light.

Board chairman Ruth Hart said possibly parents could be contacted to determine if Mrs. Adams is supported in her views. A questionnaire might indicate general preference for the students.

The number of Prince Edward County students attending school in Belleville should be determined by October 1. In 1973, there were 165 pupils — 140 Ameliasburgh. Most students attend BCI although there are some enrolled at Moira Secondary, Centennial and Quinte Secondary.

Annual cost to Prince Edward for this inter-schooling system is $353,765.

Suspect Sought In Truck Thefts

BRIGHTON — Brighton provincial police have now arrested an unidentified man and issued a warrant for another following the investigation into the theft of two cars, two trucks and a camper pick-up trucks and the burning of an R.R. 3 Trenton driveshed Sunday.

The arrest follows the recovery Tuesday of the second truck, both stolen from the debarkment of Ind. an athletic and northern development camp on the east side of Highway 33, just north of Brighton.

The first truck was found demolished by fire in a gutted drive shed by Carl Creets of RR 3 Trenton. Damages to the building is estimated at $5,000. Destroyed in the blaze was an antique stage coach valued at $1,000.

OPP investigating officer Constable Tom Hall said today police driven from Belleville pulled the second truck from the Trent River, a mile north of Highway 401.

The truck, submerged in the water, was about 30 feet from the west bank.

Police said the second man involved in the theft has likely left the Trenton — Brighton area.

Police said they believe access to the government garage by a stolen key. They were discovered missing near Glen Miller, about three miles north of the garage.

Sewer Costs Exceed Original Estimates

The Cedarcrest St. and Wellington St. area storm sewers, scheduled for construction as a winter works project this winter, are going to cost much more than was originally estimated.

Approved for both projects has been received under the federal-provincial winter capital project fund with a forgiveable loan in the amount of $510,000. The city's share for the two projects is estimated at $287,000, an amount which was placed in this year's city capital works budget.

Now, however, because of original low estimates and escalation of costs, council has been told the city's share for the two projects will be $924,000.

Mayor Robin Jeffrey said at council this week the new figures came as a shock.

Council voted for the two storm sewer projects to proceed and to make up the difference in the city's cost share two roadway projects in the city's north end will be delayed a year.

Projects to be delayed are construction of a new road way leading from east College St. to the city's northeast industrial area and reconstruction of College St. to four acres between North Front St. and West Moira St.

Dairy Princess Crowned At Picton Fall Fair

PICTON — An Ameliasburgh township girl, 17-year-old Hetty Topp, has been crowned 1974 Dairy Princess for Prince Edward County.

Miss Topp, a Grade 13 student at Bellevile Collegiate Institute, won the title during the Prince Edward County Fair.

Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Topp, the new princess was raised on a dairy farm and assists with farm chores. In an impromptu speech before a panel of judges at the county fair, Miss Topp explained the food value of milk and the importance of its promotion.

The competition was judged by Peter Johnson of the milk industry branch, Clarence Brooks, vice-principal of Pinecrest Memorial School, Bloomfield, and Karen Donnan, Hastings dairy princess.

Runner-up in the contest was Donna Grimmon of Black Creek.

Thieves Grab Loot

WAUPOOS — The Picton detachment of the Ontario Provincial Police today is investigating the theft of $900 from the home of a Waupoos area man.

A panelled door at the home of Archie Vanalleer, RR 4, Picton, was forced Tuesday and the money removed from a dresser drawer. No other items were reported missing.

A Bloomfield grocery store, owned by Arthur Moore, also was entered Tuesday night but police say apparently nothing was taken. Entry was gained by smashing a rear door.

Village Lacks School Guards

STIRLING — There are no school crossing guards in this community since the only two persons doing this job resigned.

The village council has advertised for applicants, but no person has replied. The job pays $25 a week. One of the qualifications is a license to operate a motorcycle, the idea being that a guard would have knowledge of the distance required for a vehicle to stop.

Reeve Ed Klompmaker says he has not had any complaints from concerned parents. However, another member of council says he has had a lot.

There are three schools in the Stirling area.

Canal Reduces Hours

OTTAWA (CP) — The Trent, Murray and Rideau canals will close for the season Oct. 16, but until then they will be open for daily hours, from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. daily, the northern affairs department announced Tuesday.

A Parks Canada spokesman said the canals are open for shorter hours in the fall because of declining use by pleasure craft.

Parts of the Rideau and Trent canals are drained annually to prevent ice damage to the canal walls.

The northern affairs department took over responsibility for canals from the transport department in July, 1972.

Stanfield's Successor Likely Among Them

Conservative Caucus Ready To Appoint Shadow Cabinet

By RICHARD JACKSON
OTTAWA — Conservative Leader Stanfield is playing it straight down the middle at this week's caucus, the second since the election, and likely the most important the 95 Tory members will be holding for some time to come.

For at 8 Mr. Stanfield will be presenting his elections for the shadow cabinet.

The positions he assigns in the cabinet will be of great importance for those who aspire to succeed him in the leadership when he steps down, as he has said he will, within two years.

As with cabinet appointments in the government itself, these shadow positions in the opposition vary in prestige and in the opportunity to display parliamentary skills and leadership capabilities both in the Commons, and, through the media, before the public.

Mr. Stanfield has been bending over backwards to be fair in making his choices.

As in the selection of members of the government's ministry by the Prime Minister, the opponents in the opposition's shadow cabinet are the prerogatives of leadership.

But bound this time its composition is uniquely important, with the hearing it could have on the party leadership.

Mr. Stanfield is sharing the responsibility with a good cross-section of the caucus.

So there can be no playing of favorites, by laying all the hands of leadership success on, no special positioning of "white-haired boys ..."

Donald Macdonald, an Alberta MP, chairman of the Tory caucus and a member of the selection committee, comes right out with the statement that it was Mr. Stanfield's own idea to seek this consultation and guidance "so as to avoid any accusation of lining up somebody as heir apparent."

The only motive, says Don Mazankowski, "is to ensure fairness — fairness to all 95 of us but particularly to those who could be leadership aspirants."

Arthur Epp, a Manitoba MP and another member of the committee, agrees. "It is a delicate situation, with a lot of silliness, I'm sure, in the caucus with various aspirations."

Mr. Stanfield himself initially named a committee of 18 so that every regional representation.

But the caucus broadened it to 12.

Nova Scotia MP Robert Coates engineered the appointment of veteran Ontario MP and former Tory Trade Minister George Hees and Quebec Senator Jacques Flynn. "In order to give every one of us," as he explained, "an indirect voice in the selection of the shadow cabinet."

Representing the Atlantic provinces (Mr. Stanfield MP 23 years in the Commons) Angus MacLean is the P.E.I. MP. Of course, Mr. Stanfield himself.

Speaking for the West are Jack Horner Flynn and Claude Wagner.

From Ontario there are George Hees, Perrin Beatty, young (30), two-term MP; Robert McKinley, the party whip; and Walter Baker, deputy opposition house leader.

The Western representatives are Mr. Epp of Manitoba; Mr. Mazankowski and House Leader Ged Baldwin from Alberta; and Frank Walkinder, a fruit grower and packer from B.C.

The committee, "representative of all areas and all interests in the party," as caucus chairman Mazankowski sizes it up, balanced both politically and ideologically and regionally.

Mr. Stanfield's announcement of the appointments will mark the starting gun for the leadership race.

Shoreline's Potential

Probably few Bellevillians have wandered across the green expanse extending along the Moira River from Riverside Park and finishing up by the Parks Department complex overlooking Cannifton Road and 401.

The area under review is the Riverside beach and park development reached from Moira Street East or from College and facing the original Riverside expanse on Cannifton Road.

We are not sure that the water at the beach is all that inviting, but the potential of all that green area is exciting. Of course there is the prospect in the meantime of a road through this area to connect with Bell Boulevard. This would enhance not only the traffic capabilities of the city but would afford a pleasant new route for drivers.

Here and there the rough track that one day presumably will be a paved traffic lane veers off in other directions; and in the imagination what now is virgin land presents a picture of landscaping, flowers, and possibly, recreation facilities for citizens.

There are already some facilities for children near the beach, and the thought occurs that here would be an opportunity to provide additional tennis courts, perhaps a swimming pool.

Some of it though should remain in its present wilderness state: one of the few such areas perhaps that the city offers.

Cottage Study

In an important study of the growth of cottage development in Prince Edward County, Bill Minnes, a 25-year-old Queen's University student, has concluded there is an immediate problem of overdevelopment of lakes which, if left unchecked, will result in the ruin of the lakes and the weakening of the economic base of the townships involved.

Mr. Minnes, who is working toward a master's degree in regional and urban planning, estimates that 42 percent of the cottages in Bedford township are Americanowned, while in neighboring Pittsburgh township figure is 23 percent U.S.-owned. For Wolfe Island, the figure is still higher, 50 percent.

The Queen's student is concerned about Canadians having to compete with Americans for their own recreational lands when the latter have the advantage of greater purchasing power. He sees the U.S. influx as a flight from their own polluted environment which, if discouraged from buying up property here, they might be forced to clean up.

As it is, with more Americans buying cottages and the supply diminishing, the price, he says, has to go up, putting properties farther beyond the reach of Canadians.

Mr. Minnes has reached the startling conclusion that the lakes in his study orbit "are in as sorry a state as those of Muskoka."

Certainly this sort of overdevelopment leads to strains all around. There is the spectre of pollution and spoilage of the environment generally, as well as the prospect of a deterioration of the wilderness atmosphere.

The study suggests the need for tighter rein on such development, as well as insistence by local authorities on proper standards of building and of services. Otherwise the long-term prospects for our recreation areas is dismal.

Restless Youth

The father-in-law of Mexican President Luis Echeverria told his captors: "Boys, this is not the way to make your ideas known. Not by going around scaring families."

The 83-year-old Jose Guadalupe Zuno Hernandes, a veteran Mexican politician, said on his release that they were "clean living boys ... good boys ... but mixed-up." They seemed to change the world, but did not know how.

It is a story of our time, but one that is typical of the youth of all ages. It is good that it had a happy ending, but let's hope that the young everywhere can learn to understand the process of evolution, rather than revolution, and learn to harness their talents to make things happen in a creative, positive and peaceful manner.

Differing Approach to Inflation In Washington, D.C. and in Ottawa

By VINCENT EGAN
Business and Consumer Affairs Editor
Thomson News Service

In the United States, President Gerald Ford is applying a movie title from the 1930s—Public Enemy No. 1 — to inflation, and promising to defeat it within two years.

In Canada, the Trudeau cabinet seems to be applying a song title from the 1930s, Let's Do It So—and trying to change the, subject.

—The cabinet's big butter-and-egg man, Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan, keeps on saying that food prices aren't high enough, manufactured confidence system that has led to over-production and subsequent destruction of eggs while keeping egg prices too high for many consumers.

To the reasonable suggestion that consumers should be represented on Food marketing bureaucracy (and on his other farm-product boards), his response is that farmers must first be appointed to every government regulatory board and crown corporation.

—Finance Minister John Turner publicly scolds Statistics Canada for its latest study that "the Canadian economy may have entered a period of weakness common to industrialized nations of the world."

Since the agency's comment referred to the fact that the output of our economy stopped growing in April—June while inflation rose almost 14 per cent, its comment was both accurate and timely. But the government would rather attack the messenger than the problem.

—Communications Minister Jeanne Sauvé proudly announces increases in the Canadian Transport Commission's approval of Bell Canada's application for big rate increases.

The telephone monopoly's forthcoming price hikes for various services—ranging as high as 80 per cent on pay-phones—are described as "rather modest" by Mrs. Sauvé, who managed to make it sound as if the whole thing were unavoidable and concerns' objections petty.

—Labour Minister John Munro says that only "if the economy or public interest were being intolerably damaged" would an emergency session of parliament be called to end the strike-lockout that has halted grain exports from the West Coast.

"If Canada's most important export trade is halted that way, the Canadian economy may have entered a period of weakness common to industrialized nations of the world."

Nixon Pardon Puts Ford on Spot Over Draft Dodger Issue in U.S.

By JOHN D. HARBRON
Foreign Affairs Analyst

The comment from Jerry Condon, Editor of Argus (American Legion Magazine), official publication for about 100,000 American war exiles, is more apt than ever with the absolute pardon granted Richard Nixon by President Ford.

Mr. Condon, a war exile who has lived both here and in Sweden says the same U.S. Constitution which permits the president to give full pardon to Nixon, also allows him to do the same just as quickly to the many draft dodgers and deserters in exile around the world.

But the levels of protest from these young Americans abroad and their long-suffering families at home, will merely join others already made for other crimes and evasions of responsibility.

In the White House, President Ford has already lost the first of his new senior aides in the person of Presidential Press Secretary Jerry terHorst who said he resigned in the same good conscience in which President acted because the pardon did not include the war exiles.

The growing protest to the President's early decision to pardon Richard Nixon is coming from both Democrats and Republicans for other, equally compelling reasons.

They are all reminding Mr. Ford of the very large areas of wrong-doing and law-breaking involving Mr. Nixon who is alleged to have tampered with justice at every level in the courts, federal regulatory agencies and with his own tax-some tax declarations.

What is now going to happen to all these items, with some of them made even more clear in the last tapes Mr. Nixon released before his resignation, for example his personal interview with Ehrlichman, the FBI and CIA investigating the original Watergate break-ins.

Then there are the many obstruction of justice charges and this known tamperings with the activities of the Internal Revenue Service ordered by him to investigate the income tax returns of his political enemies in politics and the press. Then add the illegal donations by big business and others to the election campaign funds and the questions still surrounding further income taxes yet to be paid.

President Ford was undoubtedly active out of a basic sense of fair play but understandable concern which we have already come to understand as part of the man. His reason for a pardon now was that the Nixon family has suffered enough publish and that Nixon himself, (it was hinted from his remarks), was close to emotional breakdown. And a pardon for him later would probably be too late.

These are legitimate reasons and were in the minds of many Americans who wanted the Watergate mess closed and the wounds healed up.

But Mr. Ford, it appears, moved much too soon. Will the lawyers for the Watergate defendants Haldeman, Ehrlichman and the others coming up for trial at the end of this month, ask for their pardons as well?

Rather than dampening the Watergate tragedy, President Ford could rekindle that crisis and permit it to tear a broad path of humiliation which up to his pardon pronouncement had unbearable (75 per cent of the American people in support of it, and of him.

Now the presidential pardon, permitted to anyone at any time by the president under Article II, Section 2 of the U.S. Constitution, can cover Richard Nixon from his alleged violations of state laws or any attempt he may have made to evade income tax payments.

So, in the long run, Mr. Ford could have waited until these legal matters in Nixon's life had been completed one way or the other.

So, in the long run, Mr. Ford could have waited until these legal matters in Nixon's life had been completed one way or the other.

And to return to the war resisters, their bitterness will be as acute as those they quit the army, only because they didn't want to kill in a war.

The Rights of Senior Citizens

Milwaukee Journal

The recent Great Lakes Treaty is a significant concession made it clear that many of this country's older citizens will not be content with making chalk — nor will they submit willingly to being pushed around. Gray Panther Maggie Kuhn is not the only one fighting "for older Americans' rights" she has plenty of troops behind her. Profiteering by the health care industry at the expense of the elderly, the voting records of congressmen on issues before during the first 1973 session, denial of civil rights of nursing home residents, and a lack of the right to work after 65 and the administration's neglect of housing needs of the elderly were all targets of over 500 participants at the three-day White House Older Americans, now some 20 million strong, would possess considerable clout. Volunteer Bureau Thanks Yardmen

Editor,
The Intelligencer:

The Volunteer Bureau would like to publicly thank the Belleville Yardmen Benefit Fund for financial support for the volunteer services programs for children with special needs.

For the past few years they have provided transportation for children who could not otherwise attend a special volunteer nursery school, where they are given a pre-kindergarten program to help them better adjust to a normal school environment.

The Yardmen Benefit Fund makes many programs possible in the community, and many organizations such as ours could not provide certain services without their generous support.

In Memorial Hall, Albert College last evening, the pupils of the Albert College Conservatory gave a song and piano recital. Dr. Charles Bishop, principal, welcomed the visitors and said that many of the young musicians were making their first public appearance at this recital. Dr. Bishop also outlined the events in connection with the annual commencement exercises of the college.

40 YEARS AGO

Sept. 11, 1934

Four small boys ranging in age from 12 to 14 years from Montreal were picked up near Foster Avenue, on the C.P.R. tracks early today and brought to the police station by Constable W. Evans. Montreal authorities informed the parents and the children will likely be sent to the Quebec metropolis some time to-day.

50 YEARS AGO

Sept. 11, 1924

The Saturday Telegraph of Saturday contained the following: "A special interest to-day attaches to the services tomorrow at the Grosvenor Hall, inasmuch as the speaker will be William Johnson of Belleville, Ontario, a former president of the Canadian Sunday School Association. Mr. Johnson was a personal friend of the late Wm. Johnson, M.P., of Ballyhillbog, and it was under the guidance of his Canadian namesake that the late respected Ulster man toured Canada.

Pardon No Cure

Nixon in 'Deep Depression'

WASHINGTON (AP) — A member of Richard Nixon's family says the former president is "in a deep depression" which was not lifted by the presidential pardon he received.

In addition, Nixon was said to be in physical pain from a phlebitis condition that had publicly been described as resolved last July.

This family member said that Mrs. Nixon and other relatives are worried about the condition of the former president.

The family member sought out a telephone interview Tuesday night, saying that "this is something someone should talk about," but asked not to be identified by name.

This person has seen and spoken with Nixon both before and since the president resigned Aug. 9, and talked with Nixon by telephone as recently as Monday night.

This family member knew of no specific physical problem other than the phlebitis, a blood clot which developed in Nixon's left leg just before his June trip to the Middle East.

Asked Nixon's feelings about the events that led to his resignation under fire, this family member recalled that Nixon had said the resignation was "abhorrent to every instinct in my body."

"He is a fighter and he wanted to stay there, but his mind overcame his emotions," the family member said.

"His mind and reason, his sense of values, his concern for the country, and his sense of realities won out in the end."

The family member said that Nixon takes long, solitary walks through his San Clemente, Calif., estate.

Charges Against Nixon Over Ellsberg Unlikely

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — The Los Angeles district attorney said Tuesday the chances of bringing charges against former president Richard Nixon in the Ellsberg break-in case are "almost nil" because the three-year statute of limitations expired a week ago.

State Attorney-General Evelle Younger had said Monday that Nixon is not shielded from state prosecution by President Ford's pardon for federal crimes, but any decision to bring charges was up to the county district attorney involved.

District Attorney Joseph Busch said in a telephone interview Tuesday: "We have not, of course, eliminated the possibility the former president may have committed a crime in Los Angeles County, particularly in reference to the break-in of Dr. Fielding's office."

But "we would face tremendous legal obstacles. No. 1, the statute of limitations which ran out on Sept. 3."

Ellsberg had been charged in the leaking of the Pentagon papers to the news media, but the charges were dismissed after word of the break-in was transmitted to the judge in the case.

China: Less Sex, More People

By ANN LANDERS
Here's another column on my visit to The People's Republic of China as a member of the American Medical Association's delegation.

Ann Lander is asking the questions, for a change, and many readers are being surprised by the explicit curious, slop dealer, kind, virtuous, immoral answers. Anyone who can understand my letters should be given an endorsement, when I behold several seasoned scientists and a physician respond in perfect English. I'm not pecessary to speak in China. I spent two years at the University of Chicago."

My question to a 35-year-old Chinese professional woman (married), one of the most attractive and articulate people I met on the entire trip: "I understand there is very little premarital sex in your country. Is this true?"

Answer: "Yes. And there are good reasons for it. Nearly half of our country's population is under 20 years of age. This means 400 million of our people have been reared under Mao's teachings. It hasn't been their custom for the chairman to suggest to us a good age for marriage. We considered that completely unacceptable. Our government tells us what we may not do, but never tells us what we must do. We are taking time and energy from study and work."

Question: "Are you saying there is no premarital sex in The People's Republic of China?"

Answer: "Such a statement would be ridiculous. In a country with 800 million people there must, of course, be exceptions. But I am sure we have less sex before marriage than any country in the world. Adultery is quite uncommon. It is considered 'too-how' (very bad) by relatives, friends and fellow workers."

Question: "From my conversations with both women and men here, I'm beginning to get the impression that there is also less sexual hostility and less sexual guilt of marriage. Am I right?"

Answer: "Probably, as compared with other countries. And there is a reason for this. In Old China, concubines and prostitutes were part of the culture. They provided the sexual outlet for men. Wives were not expected to be sexy. They were childbearers, cooks, concubines and prostitutes are degraded the law and most wives took upon sex as their mothers did. Also, they are too hard-working to be sexy. After a woman has produced one or two children, she feels she has done her duty. There are nasty conditions, of course, but most Chinese women consider sex a chore."

I replied: "You have 800 million people in your country. This suggests to me that somebody around here must be interested in sex."

Answer: "Surely you know a large family is the best proof of sexiness. It is more often a sign of ignorance and ignorance. That population figure of 800 million reflects what went on before the modern times were put on program. Chairman Mao has decreed that our future will be very different from our past, and you will see that he is right."

Few Problems in New Co-ed Prison

PLEASANTON, Calif. (AP) — As rock music drums from a juke box, young men and women chat in patio chairs overlooking an emerald lake. Jogging her curls or dresses in the sun near their dormitories.

They are not students on a college campus. They are convicted bank robbers, rapists, narcotics smugglers and forgers doing time in the newest federal prison.

Neither cells nor armed guards have a place in the $3.3-million minimum security federal youth center here, where men and women socialize and work together. The only non-negotiable rules are on drugs, no sex and no escapes.

"We're trying to create an environment as close to the outside world as possible, so that an individual can function properly in society when he leaves," said warden Walter Lenyzko. "We treat the people, staff and residents, to accept responsibility for their actions."

"During our first few weeks of operation, our biggest problem has been a natural thing—sex—but not to the extent expected," Lenyzko said in an interview. "We used to come to an agreement on a code of conduct on physical contact. Right now, they're allowed to hold hands but only momentarily."

Lenyzko said by doing more than holding hands ranges from restriction of privileges and forgery down to the warden makes the final decision on first offenders' recommendations.

Aside from combatting homosexuality, co-education has contributed to a spirit of teamwork, the warden said.

"It's great. When the gals aren't fed, the guys try harder. And there's plenty of work to do to get this place in shape."

After a two-month delay caused by a construction strike, the prison opened July 1 in the often sweltering grasslands of the Livermore Valley, 4 miles southeast of San Francisco. The co-ed staff of correctional officers and counselors came to work in overalls. They worked with prisoners cleaning up and moving in while construction continued on parts of the 19-acre compound.

"They take pride in the place as I do, too," said Adolphus Washington, 22, a convicted forger. "Every body's failing into place like a big family."

Gesturing toward his mod shoes, Washington said: "Being able to wear decent clothes helps you feel like a person, and having the ladies around relaxes the atmosphere."

The prison's casual ambience is enhanced by design of its buildings, with sweeping or angular roofines, encircling a small man-made lake which the warden plans to stock with fish. Interiors are dominated by natural wood, bright carpets and lively wallpaper. There's not a single cell bar to be found, even in the "segregation cells."

The air-conditioned dormitories feature billiards, shuffleboard and television lounges, cooking rooms. Each will house 60 prisoners by September, with three dorms for men and one for women. All residents have a private room with a window, desk and bed, to decorate as they wish.

"The people have a key to their own room and are responsible for keeping it clean," Lenyzko said. "And they have an alarm clock. We don't want to go around knocking on doors to get them to work."

Establishing constructive work habits is the main goal, with plenty of landscaping, painting, plumbing, food service work and cleaning to be done.

Prisoners put in an eight-hour day five days a week on jobs and vocational or educational courses. Evenings and weekends are free for dancing, picnics, sports and other recreation.

Although correctional officers are armed only with walkie talkies, the Youth Centre is a prison. A constant reminder is a mirror-like 15-foot high fence guarded by an electric-eye beam.

Some residents offered favorable comparisons of the Youth Centre and their former prison addresses.

"It's hard to find any complaints here," said Pauline Merriman, 24, a former model convicted of smuggling marijuana from Mexico. "But one is that the women and men should be allowed to live in the same buildings. We can get birth control pills now at the dispensary for eventual furloughs, though so they're more realistic here."

Bobby South, 21, a convicted bank robber, was skeptical. "To me the prison system is the same anywhere you go.

Successful Living

Spare Tire Needs Deflating

By DORIS CLARK

Dear Doris: Still another one of your many admirers, asking a favor: the leaflet for Mother's Day, please. Mine stinks out like an Oriental whorehouse. Otherwise, not bad for a 73-year-old.

Yet love to be one of the most patient of people. I like when you give an honest, straightforward answer instead of beating around the bush and don't confuse the things a person obviously hope you will.

Carry On, WPG.

Dear Carry On: Not really patient — just interested, People, and the way their minds work. Have been my delightful preoccupation ever since I was a little girl.

Hope you are able to deflate that balloon. The exercises I am sending you have been helpful to others — and may have to. Remember to diet at the same time. As we grow older we need less and less food to maintain our weight, so make your helpings smaller, take smaller bites, chew them longer.

You can do it. You probably have another 15 or 20 years ahead of you, so for up that figure!

Love to Doris:

What can I do to help my daughter age seven to gain confidence? She has a terrible habit of washing her hands for fear of germs. She has quite an imagination and it has gotten out of hand.

Worried Couple.

Dear Worried;

Frantic, compulsive handwashing is usually an indication of some deep fear. Perhaps something frightened your little girl.

Sometimes at an early age children develop guilt feelings around normal curiosity about their own bodies. If you have seen her touching herself or masturbating, make no fuss; she must not feel that this is "something dirty". Don't let her confuse a normal childish exploration with something evil - which is just not true!

All I can do from here is raise a few questions for you and her father to think about. Relax, never seem shocked, and reassure her that you love her, just as she is. She may grow out of this, with your attitude helping her.

If she does continue in bondage in excessive handwashing or seems to be obsessed by any other activity, you may need professional help, in which case talk to your doctor.

(Talk it over with Doris by writing to her in care of this newspaper. She is a Canadian social worker can shed new light on your problems.)

Non-smokers Call for Rights

VANCOUVER (CP) — Health Education, Mrs. Tracy Smokers who dare to pollute non-smoker Maria Tracy's work space risk an earful as well as a smoke.

Mrs. Tracy, who kicked the smoking habit after 20 years, is a vocal crusader for the rights of non-smokers.

"There's a No Smoking sign on her office wall, there are standup cardboard placards bearing the slogan "This is a Non-Smoking Area" and there isn't an ashtray in sight.

If a visitor misses the signs, or worse, ignores them, Mrs. Tracy isn't one to bite her 50 is silent frustration. She'll ask the visitor to please refrain from smoking and, if that has no effect, the gloves will likely be lofted to leave.

Working with the provincially-funded Summer Division aim of collecting 30,000 to 50,000 names of those who support the non-smokers' cause.

The petitions urge the establishment of non-smoking areas in such places as dining rooms, offices and medical-dental waiting rooms.

"Basically, the petitions are serving in an restaurants," she said. "If you go into a restaurant and order a meal only to find yourself surrounded by smokers, you're trapped unless you leave the meal unfinished.

"By the end of the summer, we hope to have a directory of non-smoking places in the city of Vancouver."

Mrs. Tracy's husband also quit smoking and the couple saved $400 a year. "By jointly not smoking we saved the down payment for a house."

Outlawed Bride Sales Continue, Inflation Sends Prices Higher

GOSTIVAR, Yugoslavia (AP) — Djemal Eyupi, a laborer in this Macedonian city, worked hard to save enough money to buy a wife.

He reached his goal. They married. And she ran off—with the money.

Djemal started saving again.

In many villages and towns in Macedonia, girls are heavily outnumbered by men and can frequently set a premium. And although the Yugoslav penal code forbids the sale of brides through dowries, many desirable girls command heavy prices.

Kadri Bijkali, 23, gave his prospective father-in-law a $1,750 down payment on his 15-year-old daughter. To complete the marriage agreement he had another $3,500 to find, half of it in gold.

Isolation on the marriage market is bothering Macedonian men. One of them, Nevzat Bijkali, was moved to complain to a newspaper about it. This is a letter.

"We must pay between 40,000 and 60,000 dinars ($2,300 and $3,500) to the girl's father to set the marriage," Bijkali, 28, wrote.

"We get this money together through hard labor. Then we have to pay another 40,000 dinars in gold.

"We are asking you, the dearest friend of Albanian living in this country, to abolish this excessive burden."

Nevzat's letter found its way to the cabinet of the Macedonian state government.

A spokesman said the problem of better brides cannot be solved by legal means as legislation banning the practice already exists.

He said the cabinet had urged "broad-based social action and the involvement of all social and political organizations in Macedonia to eliminate bride-buying."

Summer's End Brings Blueberry Bounty

If you aren't aware of how much they cost, one of late summer's best treats is blueberries. Yum. Them too ready to eat them for breakfast, lunch or dinner. If you can afford it, put a few away for mid-winter.

How to freeze fresh blueberries? Very easily. Choose berries from pint boxes into freezer containers, leaving ½-inch headspace. Seal and freeze. When ready to use, rinse and treat as fresh berries. Syrup Pack: Prepare medium syrup by dissolving 3 cups granulated sugar in 4 cups hot water to get enough syrup to pack 2 pints. Cool completely; wash berries and drain thoroughly. Pack in containers, leaving ½-inch headspace. Cover with syrup. Seal and freeze.

Chocolate Blueberry Clusters

Wash and drain 2 cups fresh blueberries. Dry well on paper towels.

Melt 1 (12-ounce) package semi-sweet chocolate pieces in a double boiler, over hot, not boiling water. Remove chocolate from heat; pour in berries and toss lightly.

Spread thinly on lightly buttered cookie sheet. Refrigerate until firm. Break into clusters and continue to refrigerate until ready to serve (within three or four days). Makes about 1 pound. Does not keep.

People and Events

Parishioners and friends from Roslin and Tweed gathered at St. James United Church in Tweed last week to say goodbye to Rev. Virgil Earle, his wife and family, who are leaving to assume new duties at St. Margaret's parish in Belleville.

A pot-luck dinner began the evening during which Ted Wilson acted as master of ceremonies. Les Brady, read a humorous farewell he had prepared, recalling incidents from Rev. Earle's nine years in Roslin and seven years in Tweed.

The Earle family was presented with various gifts and money by the congregation and church groups.

CP News Roundup

Child Gets Her Sight

TORONTO (CP) — A 14-year-old Antigua girl, who until last Friday could see only "blips" when she cars and clouds, now has almost total sight after an operation at the Hospital for Medical Centre, University of Toronto.

Bonilyne Chambers's condition, along with many others in the Caribbean country came to the attention of Dr. S. A. Salahong while he was on a project there for the University of Waterloo.

Bonilyne, who underwent a cornea transplant last Friday at the hospital, said: "If you can't see you'd better die. If you haven't your sight it's not worth living.

Dr. Salahong said Tuesday there are "quite a few children like Bonilyne, only she had it on both sides."

The conditions scarring of the cornea, caused by an infection during her early childhood and "left unattended," he said.

Fraud Charged

HAMILTON (CP) — Marcis Salvatore, 33, and Frank Silvestri, 45, both of Hamilton, were remanded to Oct. 8 when appearing in provincial court Tuesday on charges involving the sale of Horse Ownership Made Easy plan houses.

Five persons who bought houses under the plan operated by the Ontario Housing Corp. have told police they were charged between $1,000 and $1,500 when they arranged to buy the houses.

Two Remanded

TORONTO (CP) — Eric Wadilove, 33, former manager of a Bank of Montreal branch and Desmond J. Sloel, 48, a businessman, charged with conspiracy to defraud the bank of $1 million were remanded to court Tuesday to Sept. 18. Wadilove also charged with theft, is out on bail of $30,000. Sloel was released on bail of $50,000.

Jail Broker

TORONTO (CP) — John Vance, 42, who worked for a Toronto stock brokerage firm for 20 years, was sentenced to 18 months in reformatory Tuesday after pleading guilty to a charge of defrauding the public of $104,848. Vance said he told investors he was buying gold shares with their money but instead invested it in high-risk stocks.

PREMIER DAVIS

Davis to Study Peel Request

BRAMPTON (CP) — Premier William Davis said Tuesday he will consider a request by Peel regional council for an additional $3 million in provincial funds to operate the region.

Aerosol Hazard

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — United States scientists warned Tuesday that fluorocarbons, man-made chemicals used as propellents in aerosol spray cans, are collecting in the earth's atmosphere and might reduce the protective ozone level, resulting in an increase in human skin cancer.

Pensions Rise

OTTAWA (CP) — Basic old age pensions will increase to $117.21 a month in October, Welfare Minister Marc Lalonde announced Tuesday.

The increase, the fourth quarterly escalation for pensions and income supplements this year, is designed to help keep pension payments in line with the rising cost of living.

Weapons Found

MONTREAL (CP) — Quebec Provincial Police said Tuesday a weekend search at Archambault Institution, in nearby Ste. Anne des Plaines, uncovered a large amount of weapons and money in prisoners' cells. The QPP is questioning several prisoners in an effort to learn how revolvers, dynamite, gunpowder, bullets, an electric motor, an electric saw, an electric drill, money, and drugs got into the cells.

Blame Mall

KITCHENER (CP) — Waterloo regional police say they want benches and flower planters removed from the downtown mall because of increased theft activity there.

They also say many drunks and noisy youths gather at the mall and calm disturbances.

Egg Loss Is Less Than Day's Output

WOODSTOCK, Ont. (CP) — World food shortages, grain failures on the West Coast and the destruction of rotten eggs were topics touched on by Charles Munro, president of the Canadian Federation of Agriculture, Tuesday night.

"I marvel at the amount of ink given to a few days of downpours of a day's production of eggs, valued at $300,000, when transport workers and grain handlers sit on their hands," Mr. Munro told the Ontario Federation of Agriculture annual meeting.

The prolonged grain handlers' strike affects not only western farmers but will have a total effect on the economy," he said.

"The markets will always be there but the strike has put our credibility to deliver to foreign markets."

He said society must examine the dock workers' rights to strike.

A recall of Parliament to legislate the cost back to work is the only way a settlement will be reached, Mr. Munro said.

The strike, which began Aug. 8 was mediated by the public there, said Mr. Munro.

"They were committed to a positive prior to bringing the powers together," he said.

Mistakes are made when "too many people are in control of each marketing board in the 10 provinces," Mr. Munro said.

Last month, nine million eggs were stored by the Canadian egg marketing agency were bad when stored improperly in apple bins at Quebec.

Pickering Appraisal Is Ruled Inadequate

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario Supreme Court has rejected a property-value report sent to a couple in nearby Pickering whose land was expropriated by the Ontario government.

The court decision invalidates the taking of the couple's 12 acre parcel of land last May for the proposed North Pickering community where 1,000 other expropriations are in progress.

The court ruled that the two-page "appraisal report" attached to expropriation offers are "not an appraisal report as contemplated by the (Expropriations) act."

The reports were two-page mimeographed forms signed by N. H. Storey, appraisal supervisor for the Pickering Community Development Project, an agency of the Ontario housing ministry.

Delivering the judgment for the panel, Mr. Justice Lloyd Houlden said a person whose property is being expropriated "should be able to determine if he should proceed to arbitration (before the compensation board) or should settle."

"There is no detail of how the value is arrived at."

Mr. Justice Wells told Brock Grant, lawyer for the province, that if it does not give the Bandbrought an adequate report at continuation under the act "we will be more unfriendly than we are now."

Auditors Asked to Check Warehousing of Eggs

TORONTO (CP) — The National Farm Products Marketing Council has asked auditors Touche, Ross and Co. of Toronto to check whether warehouse irregularities might have both quality responsible for the rotting of 15 million eggs stored by the Canadian Egg Marketing Agency (CEMA).

Stewart Says Warning Given

WELLESLEY, Ont. (CP) — Ontario Agriculture Minister William Stewart said Tuesday that 15 million eggs may have been lost because the National Farm Products Marketing Council did not take action when it learned the eggs were not being stored properly.

Speaking to reporters after the opening of a fall fair in this community 10 miles west of Kitchener, Mr. Stewart said the situation was "a mess."

"We warned them but we couldn't get action at the CEMA (Canadian Egg Marketing Agency) administrative level."

"I spoke to the auditors to make sure all the inventory was checked on, to make sure there was no switching of product," he said.

Mr. Ferguson added that the audit was begun in July by the council, but that the national council had used its powers to broaden the scope of the inquiry.
